BOY SOLDIERS WHO ARE FIGHTING THE BOLSHEVIKS

RICHARD HENRY LITTLE, The Tribune's correspondent in northern Russia, sent the pictures on this page shortly before he was wounded during Gen. Yudenitch's attempt to take Petrograd. Concerning this one he explains: "They told Private Restabrieff out of the line and let him pose for his picture all by himself because he met four armed employees of the Messrs. Trotsky and Lenine while they were scouting inside the lines of the Northwest army. Restabrieff mussed up the four Reds very badly. No flowers. Interment private. Restabrieff is proud of his shoes. He made them himself."

LIEUT. LEONID DRELLNIK, chief of scouts of the Russian Northwest army, and two of his best men. Says Little: "Gregorieff, on the left, just turned 15, brought in seven bolsheviks singlehanded, while Stepanhoff, of the mature age of 14, sneaked up on a bolshie machine gun crew and shot down the whole durned outfit. Atta boy! Lieut. Drellnik is the scourge of the Reds and annoys them each and every night by crossing into their lines with his boy scouts and making lots of work for the bolshevik coroner. The bolsheviks have offered 100,000 rubles for Drellnik's head. But the lieutenant won't sell."

THE BLOATED ARISTOCRAT of his company. He has a nice big overcoat that used to belong to one of Mr. Lenine's young men who doesn't need it any more.

HE'S GOT ON every dud he owns in the world, and he's typical of the boys who are fighting the Bolsheviks.

MORE BOY SOLDIERS of the White army. How would you like to face a Russian winter in these clothes? They're all the youngsters have, and all they expect to get.
