STATE NEWS NOTES.

A CHAPTER OF THE DOINGS OF MICHIGANDERS.

A Big Steamer Collides With and Sinks a Steambarge.—A Farmer Killed by a Wagon Load of Lumber Falling into a Ditch.—A Youth Murdered With an Ax.

Two Sailors Burned to Death.

The tug Crusader was burned to the water's edge at 2 o'clock a. m. at Sault Ste. Marie. Henry Billings, of that city, and Charles Whissmen, of Port Huron, firemen, were caught like rats in a trap, and perished in the flames. They were sleeping on the vessel. When the flames broke out they spread so rapidly that the unfortunate men were unable to escape from their sleeping quarters. Other members of the crew had narrow escapes from a similar fate. When the bodies of the unfortunate men were recovered they presented a sickening sight. The bodies were burned to a crisp, and the arms and legs had fallen off. P. Moran's pile driver, which was tied up near the Crusader, was also destroyed.

The Crusader was owned by Grummond, of Detroit, and had been stationed at the Soo for some months for wrecking purposes. She was 20 years old, valued at $12,000.

Steambarge Sunk by an Iron Ore Steamer

The steambarge Iron King, bound down, ore laden, collided with the steambarge S. C. Baldwin, knocking about ten feet of her bow off, the Baldwin sinking in 30 feet of water. The crew were saved. The Baldwin, lumber laden bound down, was rounding to with two barges in tow and almost in to the dock. The King tried to get by and opened her engines wide, but was so close to shore that she narrowly escaped smashing into another barge lying near the coal dock. The force of the blow and the sheer the King took sent her hard aground. The river at this port is very near a mile wide and the King could have taken the starboard without any inconvenience.

A Careless Clerk and a Match.

One of the clerks of J. G. Johnson, druggist, at Traverse City, went into the basement to draw some alcohol. While doing so he stepped on a match on the floor and the alcohol was instantly in a blaze. Johnson and Harry Luke, another clerk, rushed into the basement to put out the fire. They were not successful and Luke was caught in the flames. He broke out the front basement window, but could not get through and became unconscious. He was rescued with difficulty, badly, perhaps fatally, burned on the head, face and arms. The loss is quite large on the stock.

An Aged Veteran Assaulted.

Three men broke into the house of Edwin Crisher, an old soldier, at Dimondale, and murderously assaulted him. The dog's barks and the noise awoke the old man. He came to the door in his night clothes, asking who was there, and what was wanted. The old man thought he recognized the voice as his son, Ed. Crisher, and unlocked the door. As soon as this was done, the three rushed in, and some one commenced striking him on the head, at the same time, it is alleged, threatened him with death. Robbery was the motive, but nothing was secured.

A Dollar Quarrel Ends in Murder.

Sam Smith and Minard Mix, young men north of Onekama got into a quarrel that may prove fatal for Mix. The affray took place at the residence of Stephen Mix, where Smith went with the avowed intention of getting a dollar out of Minard Mix. Minard ordered Smith out of the house and hurled a stick of stove wood at him. Smith started to run, Minard followed him with the stove poker and a stick of wood. Smith seized an ax continuing his flight until he had pushed through the bars in pursuit, Smith struck him a fatal blow on the head with the ax.

Farmer and two Horses Killed.

Robert Hahn, a farmer residing on a farm about 16 miles from Saginaw, went to the city with a load of wood. After disposing of it he bought a load of plank and started home. Upon reaching the Cass river bridge the wagon slipped in the ditch, turning bottom side up with Hahn underneath the load. When found one of the horses was dead with his neck broken, and the other badly injured. Hahn lay on his face in the ditch with the lumber on top of him with his neck broken. He was 35 years old and leaves a wife and five small children.

The body of John Laerty was found floating in the river at Saginaw. An inquest resulted in a verdict of accidental drowning.

Muskegon grocers have commenced war on all peddlers and hucksters, claiming that their business has been injured by the traveling merchants.

The fruit evaporator at Collins, Ionia county, was destroyed by fire causing a loss of $2,000. Of this $200 was on fruit which was ready for shipment. There is no insurance.

Clinton D. Smith, professor of agriculture at the Michigan Agricultural college, has been tendered the directorship of the Illinois Experiment station at an annual salary of $3,000, and will doubtless accept.

Marlette ladies and gentlemen are very sporty. A certain lady has a pair of belligerent cats. She is willing to match them both against any dogs in town. One fight has already taken place and more are on the tapis.

A small alligator crawled out a sewer at Cadilac the other day and it is thought that it is one of an increasing family of alligators which have been hatched out by an alligator that escaped in the city a few years ago from an exhibition of Florida's living curiosities.

While Harry Ham and Roy Collins, both 12 years of age, were playing with a target gun in the woods south of Sturgis, the gun was discharged, the ball striking Harry Ham in the back, passing through him, and was found just beneath the skin in the center of the abdomen. He cannot live.

MICHIGAN HAPPENINGS.

All of Lansing's factories are running.

Ira Sigmiller, of Kingsley, was fatally shot by a hunter through accident.

The pioneer women of the Soo and their daughters have organized a club.

Coppers and fire laddies at Lansing have been forbidden to drink while on duty.

The Davis mine has shut down at Negaunee, throwing 75 men out of work.

The state fish commission has decided to re-stock Green Bay with whitefish.

Edward Ellsworth, a brakeman on the South Shore road, was killed at Marquette.

Caleb J. Brown, of Sturgis, has suffered a fracture of the hand while spanking his young son.

Burglars stole $100 worth of merchandise from the American Express company at Otter Lake.

William David's barn, three miles north of New Haven, was destroyed by fire. Loss about $2,000.

Union City society young ladies will give a minstrel show soon, the proceeds to be devoted to charity.

William Smith, aged 16, son of Patrolman LeRoy Smith, fell from a building at Grand Rapids, breaking his neck. He died instantly.

The Paine Lumber company's big planing mill at Marinette was destroyed by fire. Loss $3,500. The cause was undoubtedly incendiary.

Alfred Ewer committed suicide at Flint while temporarily insane by hanging himself in his barn. He had been a resident of Flint for 40 years.

Farmers around Bangor raised about 100 acres of cucumbers the past season, and the crop proved to be so profitable that a pickle factory is to be built there.

The mailing facilities at Paw Paw are of the worst possible. There are but two trains per day and the Detroit and Chicago papers are received 12 hours late.

Allegan county is making money off the local option prosecutions. It cost about $46 to convict a recent offender. His fine was $250, a clear gain of $200 for the county.

Harry Tice, of Ionia, a brakeman on the D., L. & N., was badly hurt while uncoupling cars in the yard at Grand Ledge. One rib was broken and he was hurt internally.

Mrs. Lauretta Standley, the older of the women who were beaten with hammers near Columbiaville is dead. Mrs. Fred Skinner, the other injured woman, is recovering.

The Downington cheese factory, after four years successful operation, has closed down on account of the inability during the past few months to secure enough milk.

M. D. Beaver recently tried to drive a cow into Ed O'Donnell's barn when the animal charged him and rammed her horn through the man's groin. His injuries, while serious, are not necessarily fatal.

Mr. and Mrs. John G. Schairer, two of the oldest residents of Washtenaw county, celebrated their golden wedding at their home at Ann Arbor. Eleven married children and 25 grand children were present.

Ex-Lieut.-Gov. John Strong suffered another loss by fire when his brick hall and frame residence burned at South Rockwood. Loss $9,000. Strong has suffered a total loss by fire in the last twelve months of $60,000.

A. S. Berg, a prominent Fremont farmer, is reported as missing. He drove from home several days ago with $80 in his pocket and there are strong grounds for apprehending that he has met with foul play.

Willie Deerbeck, a 16-year-old Frenchtown lad, accidentally shot himself with a 32-caliber revolver with which he was playing. The ball glanced just to the side of the heart and lodged in the lung tissue.

While out bird shooting Jeptha Bradshaw, of the firm of Glyshaw & Bradshaw, carriage manufacturers at North Branch, received a charge of shot in the face from the gun of a companion and may lose both his eyes.

Thomas Pool was arrested at Newberry on the charge of assaulting a 12-year-old girl. He got a bottle of poison in jail and tried to join the angels, but a stomach pump interfered, and Thomas will be tried on the shocking charge.

All the keepers and inmates of the houses of ill-fame in Sault Ste. Marie took a sudden departure for fields and pastures new. This was the result of a decision of the law and order league of that place, to prosecute them under the Breen act.

Snow fell eight inches deep at St. Joseph, breaking the limbs off many trees. Some small fruit trees were entirely broken down. A heavy snow storm passed over the Lake Michigan shore. At Traverse City one and a half inches of snow fell.

Hope college, at Holland, has received a present of several hundred volumes and a check for $300, to be expended for more books, from Mr. N. F. Graves, of Syracuse, N. Y. Mr. Graves donated the library building which was finished early this year at a cost of $40,000.

Zach Vandam, of Grand Rapids, who has been passing among his friends as a Sunday school worker and model husband, has been arrested for burglary. Secreted under the floors in his house was found a wagon load of provisions, clothing and other supplies. He had been foraging for several months.

Wm. Smith, the 15-year-old son of Patrolman Leroy A. Smith, while working with several tinners on a three-story block at Grand Rapids, fell from the top, a distance of 50 feet, and struck the ground on his forehead. His neck was broken, and he died instantly.

Small pox has broken out at Clawson, a village near Birmingham. Frank Bean, son of Andrew Bean, is down with a disease which was pronounced a case of genuine confluent smallpox by two physicians. The family consists of five persons. It was thought he had measles, and it is feared many persons have been exposed.

Charles Perry, of Frankfort, fell from the top of a freight train near Harrietta, and was killed.

Jacob Seegmiller, a Summit City hunter, lost his arm and may die. Accidental discharge of a gun.

W. B. Nicholson sleeps in Mosher's jewelry store at Holly. He heard a noise at the door and fired three shots through it. He then made a break and caught two of three tough looking tramps and landed them in jail.

The Michigan Central railroad has bought the St. Joseph Valley railroad, running from Kalamazoo to Berrien Springs. They will at once built a spur to the dam, and undoubtedly will improve the road and extend it to St. Joseph.

Frank Henry, of Colon, recently married his stepmother and ever since the couple have been busy trying to figure out what relation they bear to each other and their other relatives. He has children by his first wife and she of course by her first husband.

District Attorney Powers, of Grand Rapids, received instructions from Attorney-General Olney to proceed with the prosecution in the case of the government against the Michigan Land & Iron Co., notwithstanding the decision of Secretary Hoke Smith adverse to the homesteaders.

The Standard Oil Co. at Marshall laid some of its pipes along an unopened street without getting permission. The authorities gathered in force and ordered the Standard Oil buildings torn down if the company didn't give in, which it did after considerable parleying.

Winslow Flouette is a lumberman not far from Manistique. He called upon Mrs. Granger, a widow of 67 years, represented that she was wanted in town, drove her to a lonely spot and criminally assaulted her. He then took the poor old woman to Manistique, so it is charged, and turned her loose on the streets.

The fight between St. Joseph and Berrien Springs for the county seat of Berrien county has reached the supreme court. The fight has been going on for some time, until after a deal of wrangling an election was held and Berrien Springs came out second best. The next move was to test the validity of the election, and after a long suit it was decided illegal. Now the St. Joseph people want to know what the supreme court will say of it.

John Bull Gets After the Pigtails.

Shanghai: The British officials here have sent an ultimatum to the viceroy demanding a settlement of the Chung King affair within seven days. The British demands are that Taotai Sheng be dismissed and degraded, the Chung King is to be saluted with 21 guns from the Taku forts and a money indemnity is to be paid to the owners of the Chung King. If these demands are not complied with within the specified time reprisals upon the part of the British fleet are threatened.

The Chung King affair is one of the remarkable incidents of the war between China and Japan and may have serious results. While the Chung King was at Tungku, on the gulf of Pechili, Chinese soldiers went on board of her for the purpose of seizing the Japanese passengers, mostly women and children, and pursued them all over the vessel, bound them hand and foot as soon as caught and flung them over on the wharf. Li Hung Chang, upon the protests of the British consul, commanded the Japanese to be returned on board the Chung King and ordered the Chinese soldiers who had made the raid to be severely punished.

Be Thankful for Such as ye Have.

President Cleveland has issued the annual Thanksgiving proclamation. He says: "The American people should gratefully render thanksgiving and praise to the Supreme Ruler of the Universe who has watched over them with kindness and fostering care during the year that has passed; they should also with humility and faith supplicate the Father of all Mercies for continued blessings according to their needs and they should by deeds of charity seek the favor of the giver of every good and perfect gift. Therefore, I, Grover Cleveland, President of the United States, do hereby appoint and set apart Thursday, the 29th day of November as a day of thanksgiving and prayer to be kept and observed by all the people of the land."

Czar Nicholas II.

St. Petersburg: The second morning after the death of Alexander III the imperial heralds, in brilliant uniforms, attended by a troop of trumpeters, announced the death of Alexander III and the accession to the throne of Russia of Nicholas II. The two heralds, with their escorts, traversed all the principal streets of the city, and after the trumpeters had delivered three ringing blasts upon their trumpets, they made public the proclamation of Emperor Nicholas II. Throughout St. Petersburg the accession of the new czar was celebrated as a festival, for this event takes precedence of the mourning ceremonies, and all signs of public mourning were withheld for the day.

Two Children Murdered in the Woods.

Dispatches from Paulding, O., reports the horrible murder of a boy aged 7 and his sister, aged 5, the children of Samuel Good, a prosperous farmer. The children went away from the house and not returning at dark searching parties were sent after them. The little bodies were found in a brush heap at daylight. The boy's throat was cut from ear to ear; the girl was decapitated and disemboweled. The murderer had used an ax. At attempt had been made to burn the brush heap, but it was too wet. The theory is the little girl was outraged, and the double murder committed to hide the crime.

The Union Line steamer Wairalpa, bound from Sydney, Australia, for Auckland, N. Z., was wrecked on Great Barrier Island, off the northeast coast of New Zealand. The steamer had a large number of passengers and 112 of them were drowned. The night was very dark and the officers and lookout on the steamer were ignorant of the proximity of land until the steamer struck on the rocks. Captain McIntosh, the master of the steamer, was on the bridge at the time. He together, with most of the crew was lost.

Marshall is figuring on a $10,000 opera house.

THE CZAR IS DEAD.

ALEXANDER III SUCCUMBS TO HIS DISEASE.

His Last Moments Were Peaceful.—Grand Duke Nicholas to Succeed Him.—The Reign of Alexander III One of Peace and Quiet.—Other News of Interest.

The angel of death, in the shadow of whose pinions Alexander III, the autocrat of all the Russias, lay for many days, finally beckoned, and the soul of the man who had in his hands the lives and destinies of millions upon millions of men was borne away. Calmly and peacefully as a sleeping babe he who by his slightest word could have plunged Europe into a war, the horrors of which would defy description, fell into the dreamless sleep which he feared not. For two days before the end when the doctors informed the czar that there was no longer room for hope, his majesty composedly waited for the end, attending the necessary state and family affairs in the short intervals of consciousness and freedom from pain.

The morning of the great ruler's last day on earth opened with rain and wind and heavy clouds, and the weather much colder. As the day advanced his weakness increased so rapidly that the czar himself, still conscious, recognized that he could live only a few hours. He expressed a desire to receive the sacrament, which was administered to him by Court Chaplain Yanisheff and Fr. Ivan in the presence of the whole family. The czar then conversed long and earnestly with Father Ivan, concluding by asking his family to again gather around him. He spoke to each member separately and at the greatest length with the czarina. He blessed all his children present. The scene was one of deep pathos, all being in tears. All this time his majesty was sitting up in an arm chair. After taking leave of his family he grew gradually weaker and his voice became so indistinct that it was scarcely audible. About noon a convulsive fit of coughing was followed by a slight rally. Thence until the end the czar remained quiet, seemingly free from pain. At 2:15 o'clock he heaved a deep sigh and breathed his last in the arms of the empress, who then broke down with the weight of her grief. The doctors fear the results of reaction upon her already exhausted system.

When all was over the czarewitch and the other imperial relatives took a last farewell. Shortly after 4 o'clock the members of the palace guard were marshaled in the square in front of the palace chapel for the ceremony of swearing allegiance to the new czar. They were the first to take the oath. The grand dukes were the next to swear allegiance and they were followed in the order of precedence by the high court functionaries, court officials, military officers and civil officials.

Alexander III was born March 10, 1845, and married the daughter of the king of Denmark in 1860. After his father's death, through fear of assassination, he shut himself up in his palace at Gatschina. His coronation was postponed until 1883 and was celebrated with extraordinary magnificence and national festivities. During the reign of this emperor Russia steadily pursued her policy of conquest and of the consolidation of her dominion. As regards European affairs his policy on the whole much resembled that of his father with an evident desire for peace. In 1887 there were repeated attempts by the revolutionary party on the life of the czar and on that account an invisible but impassable barrier has been maintained between him and the public. By reason of this barrier accurate knowledge of Alexander the man was concealed, as all precise information concerning his empire and the world at large had been kept hidden from him.

The czar was a man of great strength and he was very fond of exercising himself when possible by chopping logs, digging ditches and the like. Among the peasants he was greatly beloved and in fact he was known as the "peasant czar." In character he was a man of deep sympathy, but the fact that his advisers kept from him the true condition of his people prevented him from doing for them as he might have done. He was of strong will when once decided and was greatly devoted to the czarina, as was she to him and she, of all who had free access to him, was the only one who told him the truth; to make clear to him the feelings of amazement, horror and disgust that is entertained toward Russia and its government by the more enlightened nations of the west and her expressed desire for radical changes must have resulted for good long ago had it not been for the influence exercised over Alexander by his old tutor, M. Pobiedonostoff. This man has always been a conservative of the conservatives. In his person has been manifest the very quintessence of the medieval spirit and the present situation in Russia is undeniably of his creation. It was to the procurator's influence that the crusade against the Jews was due.

TWO FIREMEN KILLED.

A Large Packing Establishment Burned at Omaha, Neb.

Just as the men were going to work in the big beef house of the Hammond packing plant at South Omaha, Neb., flames were discovered in the second floor and quickly spread. All the efforts of the firemen were confined to keeping the fire from spreading, as there was no possible show of saving the big beef house, a four-story structure, 200 by 200 feet, which originally cost $200,000, and was filled with valuable machinery and a large amount of beef. At 11 o'clock one of the walls fell, and three firemen belonging to the private fire department of the company were buried under tons of burning timber and red hot brick. Two were dead when recovered. Total financial loss $450,000.

France May Have a War Yet.

Fort Louis, Mauritius: Advices from Tamatave, of date November 3, are to the effect that the government of Madagascar has refused to grant the French demands. M. Le Myre de Villiers, the French special envoy, and all the French residents of Antananaivo, have arrived at Tamatave. The warship Hugon has gone along the coast to pick up refugees. All the British residents of the capital remain, the government promising them full protection.

Japan Not Afraid of a Chinese Invasion.

Tokio: All idea of a Chinese raid upon the Japanese coast has been abandoned and that orders have been issued to remove the torpedoes from Tokio Bay. Navigation into the harbor is now declared to be free. The decree forbidding the sale of gunpowder in Japan has been cancelled.

The most disastrous accident occurred at Terrelle, Texas. As the result of the collapse of an awning crowded with people to witness a circus parade, four were fatally crushed and 100 others more or less seriously injured.

JAPANESE VICTORIOUS.

They Continue to Defeat the Chinese at Every Point of Meeting.

Yokohama: Advices received from the front show that there has been heavy fighting in the country just north of Port Arthur. The dispatches received are brief. It appears that Marshal Oyama divided his forces. While one division landed on the east coast of the peninsula north of Talienwan, another division effected a landing near Kinchow and proceeded to Kinchow and then joined the main body. The Japanese encountered no Chinese warships and the transports reached Kayenko and disembarked troops, guns, horses and munitions in safety. Kinchow, which is a walled town, and which was believed to be held by a large garrison, was immediately attacked. The outer defenses were carried after a few hours fighting, and the Japanese were soon masters of the place. In the meantime the Japanese fleet which had conveyed the transports opened a heavy fire on Kakuyon (Kayenko). Covered by the fire from the ships the land force attacked and captured Talienwan in a brilliant fashion. The dispatch states that the losses were heavy. They also mention that an important naval engagement occurred, but give no details.

Field Marshal Yamagata's army continues its victorious march. His official dispatch says the detachment under Gen. Tatsumi has occupied Fung Wang Ching, a fort which ranks in importance next to Moukden. The principal portion of the Chinese army fled toward Moukden and the remainder in the direction of Haichen and Takusan. The Chinese inhabitants who have been plundered by the Chinese soldiers welcomed the Japanese army.

The Japanese captures to the present are 55 cannons, 1,500 small arms, 20,000 rounds of artillery ammunition, 2,500,000 rounds for small arms and a quantity of other material.

London: A dispatch from Tien Tsin says that Fung Wang Ching was burned by the Chinese. The defense of the road to Moukden has collapsed. Gen. Sung, with the remnant of his army, is in the Mathienling Pass, between Fung Wang Ching and Liaovany. Winter has set in. Snow has fallen in Manchuria.

A fire occurred in the Singer Manufacturing Co.'s building at Louisville, Ky. Five firemen were hurt, including two who may die.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF TRADE.

NEW YORK.—Dun's weekly trade review says: In some trades the season is too far advanced for great activity, and in others the supposed effects of the voting hinder operations. But it is satisfactory that the volume of production is well maintained, and in one or two branches increased; that no monetary difficulties disturb; that breadstuffs are a little higher and that no material decline appears during the week in manufactured products. At present the volume of business transacted is on the whole smaller than last year, and much smaller than in 1892. Corn has advanced 4c, with western receipts only a third and exports about an eighth of last year's. Yet pork and hogs are a shade lower, with lard about the same. Wheat is ⅜c higher for spot and 1c for December, and it looks as if strength in corn had prevented a further decline. The irresistable force is of course the enormous accumulation which continues, although producers may naturally be inclined not to sell at current prices. The depression of cotton and wheat, and the partial loss of the corn crop, must be reckoned important causes of hesitancy in retail distribution of products. Waiting for retail trade depresses the textile manufactures, and concessions in price have been made to effect large contracts. Otherwise the market is generally dull, without indications of improvement. In wools, the fall and winter demand is disappointing, though still fairly large for the season, but the expected supplemental orders do not appear and great uncertainty prevails as to spring goods. Manufacturers are not disposed to produce in advance of the tariff change, January 1, and so are buying only for current needs, and at the west it is complained that wool goes begging at prices below the parity of similar wool abroad on the scoured basis. During the past week failures have been 249 in the United States, against 258 last year, and 50 in Canada, against 28 last year.

NEW YORK.—Bradstreets review says: There is little far-reaching improvement in business circles aside from the settlement of the strike at Fall River, Mass., one of the effects of which is expected to be the steadying of prices of cotton fabrics and an inducement to cloth printers to order for the future delivery. At Chicago excessive competition for the north results in further cuts in lumber prices. Sugar is ⅛c lower and Bessemer pig iron and steel billets 15@25c lower respectively, notwithstanding the recent firmness of the former at Pittsburg. Cotton has gone off another 1-16c. This results in a reduction in the number of orders. The rapidity of shipment of domestic wheat to market is indicated by the net gain of 4,479,000 bu within four months, the heaviest like increase except in 1892, it being three times larger than from July 1 to October 31, 1893. European stocks and those afloat for Europe have been in the habit of increasing more than 3,000,000 bu during October in preceeding years, but last month they fell off 232,000 bu net.

At a Resort.

First Little Girl—I heard that your papa is a senator. Is that so?

Second Little Girl (who stutters)—Why, ye-e-s.

Second Little Girl—Oh, you needn't be afraid to speak up. I won't tell.

Bobby's Bent.

Nurse—Please, ma'am, every time little Bobby can't hove his own way, he runs at me and pushes me and kicks me like everything.

Fond Mother—Bless his little heart! He'll be a famous football player some day.

Neighborly Advice.

Little Miss Freckles—I've got a stiff neck.

Little Miss Mugg—You shouldn't twist your head so far around w'en I pass you with my new dress on.

Good Enough Location.

Stranger—Seems to me this crowded street is a queer place for a hospital.

Native—Well, I don't know. Two trolley lines meet here.

Full Directions.

Guest (summer resort)—The water here isn't fit to drink.

Proprietor—You will find the bar at the farther end of the hall, sir, down one flight.

Dangerous Ground.

(Copyrighted, 1894, by Keppler & Schwarzmann.)

Friend—What the dickens are you doing in that baseball toggery?

Mr. Howson Lott—They belong to my son. The family is away, and I'm just going down to give a few orders to the cook!—Puck.

A Friendly Tip.

Married Man—Not married yet?

Old Chum—No I am not.

Married Man—Now see here, old boy, times are changing mighty fast. You take my advice and get married before women get any more emancipated than they are already.—New York Weekly.

Not Surprised.

Prof. Longhair—Statistics show that Germany's proportion of suicides is larger than that of any other European country.

Miss Gotham—I don't wonder; it must be awfully wearing to have to think in German.—New York Weekly.

At a Summer Hotel.

Stayhome—How was the weather where you were this summer?

Outer—Cool enough for blankets every night.

"My! My! I envy you."

"Y-e-s; but we hadn't the blankets."—New York Weekly.

Not at Home.

Citizen—Does Mr. Blank of the board of health, live here?

Domestic—Yes, sir, but he isn't at home.

"He is not at his office, for I just came from there."

"No; he's off in some other part of the town, house hunting. He says this neighborhood is so full o' bad smells it isn't fit to live in."

Keeping it Quiet.

Husband—It's ruinous! The idea of paying all that money for a little bit of lace.

Wife—Mrs. Astorbilt has two or three pieces like that.

"But, good lands, the Astorbilts have millions where I have thousands. Don't you know that?"

"Of course I do, but I don't want the Astorbilts to know it."

Judge Not.

Downton—De Broker must be losing money.

Upton—Guess not.

Downton—He used to have a luxurious third floor flat, and now I see he has moved up to the tenth story.

Upton—It isn't safe to judge by appearances. Perhaps the folks on the second floor have a baby.—New York Weekly.

A Mean Trick.

Clara—Why in the world did you engage yourself to that Mr. Hardhead?

Dora—He took me at such a disadvantage that I had to.

"Nonsense."

"Oh, but you don't know. He proposed to me in an ice cream saloon, and I know perfectly well that if I didn't accept him he wouldn't ask me if I'd have another plate."—New York Weekly.

Took a Rest.

Housekeeper (angrily)—Why didn't you come around yesterday?

Ice Man (wearily)—Too hot.

Stage Struck.

Mother—It won't do to take our daughter to the theatre so often. I am afraid she already imagines herself an actress.

Father—Has she taken to studying Shakespeare?

Mother—No; but within the past six weeks she has been engaged to half a dozen different men.

A FRENCHMAN has invented a phonographic clock which talks the hours instead of striking them. Time is money, and money talks; therefore, why not time?

THE doctors announce a new disease which is designated as "elevator sickness." It is probably contracted by people who have been witnessing recent attempts to elevate the stage.

THE worthless Wilkesbarre husband who, in order to satisfy his cravings for drink, sold the urn containing the ashes of his wife's first husband and sold it in New York, at least had the sense to know that what was left of his predecessor, even after cremation, was of more value than his own living body.

TRIALS of a new diphtheria cure at Vienna are said to have demonstrated its success. The diphtheria was eliminated, leaving the 200 patients the felicity of dying from some less distressing malady. However much the physicians were pleased, it is not related that they congratulated the patients.

THE Japanese were wise in waiting until the fortune of war was virtually decided before investing in duck tents, fine boots and other items of military luxury. They have earned the right to enjoy the very best that American gains has produced, and in addition the Chinese can now be made to pay for it.

THE heirs of a California millionaire, who hope to break the will through a legal point touching the charitable disposition of his wealth, may gain a little money by that means, but will gain it at the expense of the dead, dumb blind and paralytic of the state, whom an ordinary thief would scorn to rob.

THE dowager duchess of Marlborough, formerly Mrs. Hammersley of New York, it is announced, is engaged to Lord William Beresford. Many an ambitious American heiress will consider that Mrs. Hammersley should have been content with a ducal coronet, and allowed one of them to have a chance at the lord.

THE New York World has been directed by the courts to pay $5,000 damages for publishing a poem without the consent of the author. The best place to publish a poem without consent of the poets is in the waste-basket, and the experience of the World will deter editors from departing from that ancient usage.

NEW YORK has discovered that a real Russian countess, once a belle at the court of St. Petersburg, is selling fruit and newspapers at a little stand near the postoffice. If she had been a count, the newspapers would have had any necessity for her to do anything more than hunt for a title-loving heiress, for a count seems to be more in Russia than a prince in Italy.

THE new post office museum which was opened at Washington recently, will be of object of interest to all who visit the national capital. The postal curiosities in the government display at the World's fair were alone equal in importance to many more pretentious exhibits, but the Washington collection is said to contain, in addition to these, many valuable objects which were not seen at Chicago at all.

THE new style of commencement at Yale, which abolishes speaking and carry all of the other public exercises, will thrust into obscurity the painfully self-conscious young man who has been the most conspicuous figure on such former occasions. Like the sweet girl graduate, the young man graduate, with his wide cuffs and torturous collar, big hands and feet and squeaky voice, is vanishing into the past.

HIS encounters with the Chinese Captain Masao Matsugata of Japan must feel that he is enjoying only the light recreation of a furlough compared with the supreme hardships he endured about a year ago while a student at the university of Pennsylvania, where he was one of the foremost football players. What is fighting the pig-tails with cannon and ball compared to fighting in a football match? It is the effort of adjusting a necktie compared with the labors of Hercules.

IT is justice to Emperor William it is to be hoped that his hymn to Angel is not as bad as its translation into English would indicate. The line in the concluding stanza, "Or honor Thee, O Mighty God," conveys a wrong idea to the orthodox mind. Anger was a fine old pagan, but in this enlightened day he does not deserve to have his title capitalized. As it may be presumed that the rendition of a pagan hymn on Sunday afternoon, with, like Deacon Simpson's bolt, cast a gloom over a devout community.

LONDON society women have a new fad—the wearing of an immense ring on the first finger of the right hand. The ring has to be big and aggressively solid; so that it may contrast with small and delicate hands. But there will they get the hands?

A MILWAUKEE couple who had sought for relief from their marital woes in the divorce court, were reunited when it came to dividing their pet dog. Thus has the old saying, "Love me, love my dog," been vindicated at last.

ANY young man who will now encase himself in a soiled piece of canvas, rub his face with coal dust, mussy up his hair and then walk through the streets with a football under his arm can win all the sympathy he may crave.

MRS MONROE is said to have read her Columbian ode at New York with great dramatic effect. The circumstance recalls the fact that there is a Miss Monroe and that she did write a poem, and excites a fear that she may write another.

WORLD OF INDUSTRY,

LATE DEVELOPMENTS IN INVENTIVE FIELDS.

The Search Light to Be Supplied with a Range Finder—Machine for Metal Punching—The New French Torpedo Boat.

THE NEW SEA-going torpedo boat Le Chevalier, constructed by M. Normand of Havre has lately been tried with excellent results, and its rate of speed was higher than any hitherto attained in France. The boat has a length over all of 44 meters and its beam at the water line is 4.33 meters while its displacement is 118 tons. One of the principal modifications in the design is the placing of the rudder in front of the propeller, so as to avoid the necessity of extending the keel as a support for the rudder frame. The screws are placed in two transversal planes and turn in the same direction. The machinery is composed of two triple-expansion engines, each one working a propeller, and they are supplied by two boilers upon one Du Temple system. M. Normand has profited by his own experiments and the experiences of Messrs. Yarrow, in suppression of vibration, and this is done partly by equalizing the weight of the pistons. At the trials the engines developed 2,800 horse power without forced draught, and the consumption of coal did not exceed 900 grammes per horse power per hour.

How to Cool a Cellar.

A great mistake is sometimes made in ventilating cellars and milk houses. The object of ventilation is to keep the cellars cool and dry; but this object often fails of being accomplished by a common mistake, and instead the cellar is made both warm and damp. A cool place should never be ventilated, unless the air admitted is cooler than the air within or is at least as cool as that, or a very little warmer. The warmer the air, the more moisture it holds in suspension. Necessarily, the cooler the air, the more this moisture is condensed and precipitated. When a cool cellar is aired on a warm day, the entering air being in motion appears cool, but as it fills the cellar, the cooler air with which it becomes mixed chills it, the moisture is condensed, and dew is deposited—on the cold walls and may often be seen running down them in streams. Then the cellar is damp and soon becomes mouldy. To avoid this the window should only be opened at night, and late—the last thing before retiring. There is no need to fear that the night air is unhealthful—it is as pure as the air of midday, and is really dries. The cool air enters the apartment during the night, and circulates through it. The windows should be closed before sunrise in the morning, and kept closed and shaded through the day. If the air of the cellar is damp, it may be thoroughly dried by placing in it a peck of fresh lime in an open box, and the National Builder adds, a peck of lime will absorb about seven pounds, or more than three quarts, of water, and in this way a cellar or milk house may soon be dried, even in the hottest weather.

Sensitizing Canvas, Silk and Paper.

A mixture of bromide and iodide of silver is precipitated at a temperature of 25 degrees Centigrade in the presence of a trace of gelatine, and is maintained at that temperature for an hour or so with constant agitation, so as to prevent the precipitate from coagulating. It may then be washed in a centrifugal machine to remove the alkaline nitrate, and is finally well mixed with a good solution of arrowroot which has been boiled in water till perfectly clear. The fabric or paper to be sensitized is then coated by means of a sponge in the dark room and dried, and if the emulsion has not been washed it is worked in water and dried again. Development takes place as for an ordinary gelatino-bromide emulsion. Prints so made lend themselves far more readily to finishing in sepia, oils or water colors than when the fabric has been coated with an emulsion in gelatine, as there is no fear of the whole film stripping off the canvas. Paper prints made with the arrowroot emulsion may also be finished both with oils and the brush, "owing to the impenetrable nature of the gelatine film."—G. J. Junk, Berlin.

REPUBLICANS ALL.

STATE TICKET IN MICHIGAN IS THAT WAY.

The Expected Landslide Came to the Tune of 80,000 Majority for Governor Rich.—Twelve Republican Congressmen.

Michigan, as a state, scarcely ever falls behind her sister commonwealths in anything. Therefore, the fact that she went Republican at the event known and advertised as an election may not create surprise when taken in connection with the history of a like demonstration in other states. The voices of several thousands of men have said the following upon shall constitute the affairs of Wolverine state for a period of two years following January 1 next:

GOV. JOHN T. RICH.

Governor—John T. Rich.
Lieutenant-governor—Alfred Milnes.
Secretary of state—Washington Gardner.
State treasurer—F. M. Wilkinson.
Auditor-general—Stanley W. Turner.
Attorney-general—Fred A. Maynard.
Superintendent of public instruction—H. R. Pattengill.
State land commissioner—W. A. French.
Member state board of education—Perry F. Powers.

The majorities with which these fortunate ones were placed into power greatly exceed the big figures of the year past, after the war. Further than this, the Congressional 80 not get a single democrat and to add to their discomfiture the legislature is so arranged that a Republican will be chosen to succeed a Democrat, hard to find in the next legislative assembly at Lansing. There may be some Populists and cause for this and not that, but it is not our province to discuss that here; therefore, we simply chronicle the misery of a shortcomer.

When election day opened both the weather and the roads were good, the weather all over the state was just cool enough to make hog work necessary to keep warm. And hot work there was, and plenty of it. An extremely heavy vote was polled in almost every county—for an off year. The Populist ticket showed remarkable gains in the farming districts.

Probably the hardest fights in the state were in congressional districts, the Republicans straining every nerve to get a full delegation, and that, they succeeded was seen very early in the count. The Republicans elected every one of the twelve congressmen, as follows:

First district—John B. Corliss, of Wayne county.
Second district—George; Spalding, of Monroe county.
Third district—Julius C. Burrows, of Kalamazoo county.
Fourth district—Henry F. Thomas, of Allegan county.
Fifth district—William Alden Smith, of Kent county.
Sixth district—David D. Aitken, of Genesee county.
Seventh district—Horace G. Snover, of Huron county.
Eighth district—W. S. Linton, of Saginaw county.
Ninth district—Roswell P. Bishop, of Gratiot county.
Tenth district—Rousseau O. Crump, of Clinton county.
Eleventh district—John Avery, of Montcalm county.
Twelfth district—Samuel M. Stephenson, of Menominee county.

The Estimates.

It will be seen that the Republicans have carried every county in the state except two, with Manitou returns missing.

Missouri.

St. Louis is wholly Democratic, and they carry the state by about 30,000, although four congressmen were elected by the Republicans.

North Dakota, Wyoming, Utah, Minnesota, Connecticut, Delaware, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Washington, Iowa and Kansas end in the Republican column while the Democrats get some consolation from the fact they will at least almost hold their own in Mississippi, Tennessee, South Carolina, Alabama, North Carolina, Louisiana, Maryland and Virginia.

Indiana.

Thirteen of the seventeen congressmen are Republicans, the majority in the state for Republican ticket is 20,000, the lower house majority is fully 25,000 for secretary of state, and the legislature is two-thirds Republican.

IN OTHER STATES.

Hill Badly Defeated in New York and Tammany Knocked Out.—A Waterloo.

New York.

The Republicans have carried New York state by estimated pluralities ranging from 120,000 to 150,000. These figures represent the probable plurality of Levi P. Morton, Rep., for governor over David B. Hill, Democrat. The total vote for the state will be about 1,000,000, which is the largest ever cast for governor except Frederick Flagsett for governor in 1891, in addition to which is the vote cast this year for E. F. Wheeler, independent Democrat, which will exceed 20,000. The tremendous Republican sweep in the city and state, it is estimated, has elected twenty-three Republican congressmen, a gain of eight over the present delegation in congress.

The results of the sweeping victory are twofold far-reaching than simply the election of the Republican state ticket. While the returns are very incomplete on the election amendments, it is highly probable, according to the first returns, that all of them are adopted. The percentage of the vote required, which is placed at the head of the ticket, is not nearly so large as it was supposed to be and the result therefore is that the legislature will consist of fifty senators and 150 assemblymen, that pool-selling on races will be prohibited and that a new judiciary system will be inaugurated. The sweep also means that for the first time in many years the Republicans will have a majority of the state legislature and at the same time have a governor in the chair in political harmony with them.

In New York city Tammany was completely overthrown. Strong, the Republican candidate, being elected over Grant, Tammany Democrat, by fully 45,000 majority, carrying the entire city ticket with him, including the city judiciary.

Ohio.

Ohio has broken her record on Republican pluralities. The largest plurality heretofore was when John Brough, Republican, for governor in 1863, had 101,000 over Clement L. Vallandigham, Democrat, the latter being exiled at the time in Canada. Last year Gov. McKinley carried the state by over 80,000, but no such plurality has been reached since the days of Brough and Vallandigham until this year. During the last twenty years the parties have alternated in carrying the state, the Democrats electing Gov. Bishop in 1877, Gov. Hoadly in 1883, and Gov. Campbell in 1888. The Republicans claim a plurality for Secretary of State Taylor of 125,000 to 130,000, on the basis of the state vote, the Republicans having 16 of the congressmen in the present delegation in congress, the election of 11 Democrats and 15 Republicans.

West Virginia.

The Republican state central committee claims Wilson is defeated for congress by 10,000. They also claim that Pulitzer, Republican, in the third district, is elected by a safe majority. Dovener, Rep., carries the first congressional district.

Illinois.

One hundred and twenty-five precincts outside of Cook county show a Republican gain of 40 to the precinct, which is sufficient to justify the claim of 75,000 majority or plurality in the state. They have six congressmen in the state, Springer being the present member-at-large. Springer has gone at least 15,000 plurality for Republicanism. Chicago is in the same rank. Congressman Springer, Democrat, was defeated. Later reports give the Republicans over 70,000 majority in the state.

Colorado.

Women voted in all the cities and nearly every county in the state. There polls at the carriage where and elect Populist governor, Waite, Populist, by 20,000 majority. The state will be controlled by the legislature and will send Senator Walcott to the senate for another term.

Massachusetts.

Greenhalge, Republican, elected governor by 45,000 majority, a gain of 10,000 over last year. Massachusetts is solidly Republican delegation to congress.

Maryland.

Democrats carry every congressional district except the second, where Howard, Populist, is the choice.

Wisconsin.

About 10,000 is the majority agreed to as the Republican lead, which carries the entire state ticket.

New Jersey.

Six out of eight congressmen and two-thirds majority in the assembly is the Republican portion.

Nebraska.

Fusion between the Democrats and Populists elect a Democrat governor, while the Republicans secure all the other state officers and control the state legislature.

California.

Republicans secure the whole ticket—state officers, legislature and congressmen.

Pennsylvania.

Republican congressmen were re-elected with increased majorities.

Republicans in Congress.

The application of chemistry to tanning is now, according to Professor Sadtler, revolutionizing the manufacture of lighter leathers. The skins are treated with a weak solution of bi-chromate of potash.

Returns of the French vintage of 1894 report a yield of 30,000,000 hectolitres (660,000,000 gallons), only three-fifths of the yield of 1893, while the quality of the red wines is likely to be inferior, owing to the cool summer and a very late vintage.

Effect of Great Cold on Animals.

Pictet, the French chemist, finds by subjecting animals and insects to the intense cold obtainable from liquefied atmospheric air that animals show a wonderful power of resistance to its effects. A dog placed in a copper receiver at a temperature of—60 degrees to 90 degrees C. showed a rise of body temperature of 4 degrees in 10 minutes, and after an hour and a half had only lost 1 degree. A little later, however, nature gave up the struggle, the temperature fell rapidly, and the animal died suddenly. Insects resist a temperature of 0 degrees but not 33 degrees, while myriapods live down to 50 degrees and snails down to—100 degrees. Birds' eggs lose their vitality at 2 to 4 degrees, and eggs at 0 degree. Infusorie die at 90 degrees, while bacteria are still virulent at 213 degrees. This last fact is perhaps, the most significant of all.

Waterproof Cloth.

A textile fabric or cloth, of close texture, is subjected to the action of sulphuric acid of about 115 degrees T., so as to partly parchmentize the fibers and more or less completely close the interstices without destroying the texture of the cloth. The excess of acid is removed by washing, with or without previous treatment with alkali, and the washed material is subjected to pressure between extendering rolls, whereby a finished appearance is imparted, and the closing of the interstices completed. The material may be suitably dyed.

Preservation of Wood.

The wood is impregnated through its pores under any well known process, first with a strong solution of calcium bisulphite and then with a corresponding solution of caustic lime. A monosulphite is formed which is subsequently oxidized by the action of the air to calcium sulphate, and becomes practically part of the ligneous structure.—A. A. Hely, Westminster, Eng.

Stage Struck.

Mother—It won't do to take our daughter to the theatre so often. I am afraid she already imagines herself an actress.

Father—Has she taken to studying Shakespeare?

Mother—o, but within the past six weeks she has been engaged to half a dozen different men.

A Useful Accomplishment.

Small Boy—A man at the circus walked a light rope way up in the air, just as if he was on a pavement. Wish I could do that.

Mother—Horrors! Why?

Small Boy—It would come so handy when my kite catches on a telegraph wire.

A Small Boy's View.

Mother—There goes another one of those dirty tramps. I don't know why they don't keep clean, anyhow.

Small Son—Maby were they was little their mothers made them wash so often they got sick of it.

SLEPT WITH THE HORSE.

The Odd Redfellow of a Sheriff Who Held a Filer as Security.

"There are more unique experiences to be encountered in serving writs and various legal documents than in almost any other business," remarked a young lawyer the other day to a Chicago Herald reporter. "The constable and the deputy sheriff are required to do more strange things in the line of duty than any one else I ever heard of.

"One of them attached a horse for me at the Washington park track, and I went along with him to see that everything was right. We located the horse first, and when the stable boys found out what the trouble was about there was the greatest furor you ever saw.

"'Why, boss,' exclaimed one of them, 'dat hoss kin win mo' den dat in one race. Jes you let 'im alone!'

"'Dat hoss aun good foh a hundred oh dem claims jes at dis one meetin!' asserted another.

"They kept up a regular fusillade while the deputy and I were looking for the owner, but we paid no attention to them. When we finally found the owner, he did not seem inclined to pay. There was a dispute as to the claim, he said, but he admitted that he had put his name to the note that we had used on. He could not pay that afternoon anyway, and the deputy wanted to take the horse right away. I was opposed to that, however, for he was entered in a race for the next day, and it seemed unfair to me to keep him out.

"'You stay with the horse,' I said to the deputy. 'He is in your charge and you simply remain with him.'

"'All right!' he asked.

"'Certainly,' I replied. 'Give the owner a chance to raise the money. If he doesn't succeed, you can take the horse away tomorrow.

"'But where will I sleep?' he inquired anxiously.

"'Wherever the owner, does,' I returned. 'He lives out here somewhere.'

"'Where do you sleep?' he asked the owner.

"'I sleep with the horse,' was the reply.

"The deputy looked the blooded animal over and seemed in doubt. But it was business, and he made the best of it. He groomed a little, had a bed made up right with the horse and its owner. And the next day the note was paid."

Cobra Venom.

Dr. Calmette began his experiments on the nature of the cobra's deadly poisons and made an analysis of the venom of the cobra.

One of the most curious facts in science is that two substances having almost identically the same chemical compositions can have effects so different upon the human body as to represent the best support of life on the one hand and the quickest termination of it on the other. The albumen, or white, of an egg and the poison of the cobra of India are so nearly identical in composition that it takes a very careful analysis to detect the difference.

It was long supposed that the fatal principle of snake poison was an animal alkaloid, but the analysis has led to the abandonment of this idea. The fact which, for a long time, placed cobra poisoning beyond the reach of any remedy was its very similarity to albumen, it being held that no specific which would neutralize or destroy it would fail to prevent from neutralizing and destroying the albumen of the blood as well. The poison contains two distinct albumincids—one coagulable and the other persistently liquid in form. The latter is the active and death producing principle and remains superior to a heat of 180 degrees F. as well as to evaporation, the solid residue retaining the deadly properties of the liquid.—McClure's Magazine.

The Lightwood, of Florida.

"Lightwood" is one of the most useful southern products, especially in Florida, where it is used by all sorts of country folk, and particularly by the hunters. A cordwood stick carried into the wilderness will cut up into fragments with which almost anything may be cooked. The rich, resinous pine makes a quick, hot fire, especially suited to open air cooking. It is a Florida tradition that the Chief who led the little band of Seminoles when the United States army failed to win to earth was on the point of agreeing to go with his people to Indian Territory when, he suddenly asked whether there was any lightwood in that new land, and, when the answer was positively refused to go further with the treaty. He would not live in a land without lightwood.—Philadelphia Press.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1894.

Michigan is Rich.
Hard times come again no more.
It is all down Hill in New York.

Gen. Spalding claims majorities as follows: Jackson 1,762, Lenawee 2,200, Monroe 600, Washtenaw 700, Wayne 400. The last three counties are estimated, and may be more. Total majority, nearly 6,000.

The transit of the planet Mercury across the face of the sun will occur next Saturday and will be visible here. It will require six and three quarters hours for this planet to move across the sun's disk, being visible from about 10 a. m. to 3 p. m.

The present system of voting is very simple yet we are inclined to think that people are not instructed in the system as they should be. A few years ago, the first year the system was in vogue here, there were less mistakes made we presume than there have been since, because that year Supervisor Bireles procured ballots which were used for instruction. That year we used lead pencils to mark the ticket we wished to vote, but since they have used a rubber stamp which often makes a blur or blot instead of a cross as required by law, and the consequence is some ballots are thrown out. We do not think the board ought to be too technical in those matters but when the intent of the voter is clearly seen the ballot ought to be counted. It is not right to deprive an honest though somewhat ignorant elector of his vote.

It is our intention to place a copy of the Enterprise in every home within a radius of 12 miles of Manchester this week. We wish every body to see it and read it. then we want them to subscribe for it. The Enterprise does not wish to take the place of any other paper. It copies after no other paper, it quarrels with no paper. Its purpose is to give all the newsistable to go into a paper that is read by children and by grown people. The Enterprise will always be found on the side of morality and good government, sustaining the schools as the first of importance to secure it. Upholding the churches and aiding the many societies connected with them. Its reading matter is suited to the needs of any member of the family circle and but few papers give the amount and variety found in the Enterprise. We have not as many pages as some of the county papers but we have the columns of reading matter. On the first page will be found the latest state and national telegraphic news and leading markets, on the second, editorials, scientific, late election returns by telegraph. On the fourth and fifth editorial, home news, neighborhood correspondence, markets, etc. On the seventh, Talmage's sermons, the Sunday school lessons, etc, and on the eighth short stories. Read the paper through and if you are not now a subscriber, become one at once. If you are a subscriber pay for another copy to be sent to some friend abroad it will be appreciated.

The Election.

Tuesday was a quiet day here. Since the new system of voting has been in use and the polls held at the engine house or Clinton street, there has not been as much excitement on the streets over election. True, a good many people are seen upon the streets but they do not get excited and talk loud, as they once did.

There were not as many votes cast as is usual at state elections, 542 being the total vote, and they were cast so quietly and there was so little talk that the wisest man could not predict the result.

Of the straight tickets, there were 191 democratic, 163 republican, 11 prohibition and two peoples.

For governor, Fisher received 290, Rich 246, Todd 15, Nichols 3.

For congress, Barkworth received 253, Spalding 211, Grandon 11, Barkworth 2.

For state senator, Manly received 296, Watts 203, Steere 15, Thorpe 3.

For representative, Mills received 257, Wortley 202, Mills 14, Bollard 2.

The amendment to the constitution authorizing inmates of soldiers' homes to vote where such homes are situated, yes 54, no 42.

Amendment relative to the qualifications of electors, yes 36, no 49.

We give the full vote each democrat and republican cast, on the county ticket. The prohibitionists all got 18 and the populist two votes each so we do not take space to give their names.

Sheriff—Judson 183, Benner 273.
Clerk—Dansingburg 200, Schuh 250.
Register—McKinstry 203, Hughes 257.
Treasurer—Rehfuss 254, Suskey 206.
Attorney—Randall 202, Kearney 258.
C. C. Com.—Webb 202, McKernan 258.
C. C. Com.—Bugenfield 203, Towner 257.
Coroners—Ball 203, Clark 257.
Coroners—Barton 203, Saiwell 257.
Surveyor—Allen 203, Woodard 257.

Washtenaw County.

Washtenaw county has been democratic since 1860.

There are several cases of quinsy throughout the country.

We are very sorry that Michael Brenner was not re elected sheriff.

Rev. J. Lester Hudson of Alpena was in Ypsilanti over Sunday.

What Washtenaw county republicans? Is it possible? The millennium is surely coming.

The daily Courier claims a circulation of 1000 copies in Ann Arbor and new subscriptions coming in daily.

G. W. Doty, father of probate register Doty, was taken suddenly ill this morning.—Saturday's Ann Arbor Courier.

Hon. Edwin Willets, of the department of agriculture at Washington, was in Ypsilanti Monday shaking hands with old friends.

Ann Arbor is sure to gain some good citizens when Wm. Judson of Chelsea, Wm. Dansingburg of Augusta and Wm. Rehfuss of Manchester move there. They are three sweet Williams plucked from the choicest spots in the county.

The extension of the city railway line and the new switches being built by the Mich. Cent. R. R. have given most of Ann Arbor laborers more than they can do; hence, the sewer contractors find it necessary to go out of town for laborers.—Register.

The columbian organ now being put in place in university hall will probably be ready for use about christmas. It occupies a space of 34 feet in width, 25 in depth and 38 in height. The echo organ is placed in the gallery and is played from the solo key-board. The wind is furnished by 8 horse-power electrical motors.

It is impossible to give correct returns even from the county. The following is as much as we can give: For governor, Rich 6921, Fisher 3935. For congress, Spalding 4763, Barkworth 3991. For state senator, Watts 4705, Manly 4124. For representative 1st district, Kempf 2651, Dancer 2107; 2nd district, Wortley 2143, Mills 1808. For county treasurer, Rehfuss 4714, Suskey 3654. For register, McKinstry 4658, Hughes 3716.

The Ann Arbor Daily Courier, in speaking of the libel suit commenced by the editor of one German paper in Ann Arbor against the editor of another paper there of the same nationality, says: "The idea of one editor suing another! A man with a paper and, pen suing another man for slander! How perfectly absurd and silly! Where is your pen, man? Where are your wits that you resort to the courts when you have a weapon in your hands that even courts have been known to winch at?—Journal. In other words, why not call him a liar, a thief, an anarchist, etc, and fill your paper with a lot of stuff nobody cares to read.

Jackson County Items.

The democrats carried but two townships in Jackson county, Columbia and Waterloo.

During the month of October only five students of the grammar department of the Brooklyn school were neither absent nor tardy.

Jackson commandery K. T. will make the pilgrimage to Boston next summer via the same route the Michigan press association took this summer.

The circuit court calendar for the November term of court contains three criminal cases, 47 issues of fact, one issue of law, one impariance, 17 first-class chancery, two second-class chancery, 23 third-class chancery, or a total of 93 cases.

A party of friends paid Mrs. Henry Stacy a visit yesterday in honor of her 90th birthday. She is still a bright old lady and often walks the intervening mile between the home of her step-son, Mr. Geo. Stacy, where she lives, and town, to visit friends and attend church.—Expponent.

There is to be a farmers' institute at Grass Lake beginning the evening of the 15th of January next and continuing the next three days. The state will furnish a great array of talent and the natives of the sequestered nook will do the rest. It will be the greatest event ever known there and the Enterprise shall have more to say about it before and after the date thereof.

Lenawee County.

Decorators are at work on the Tecumseh music lodge room and expect to finish within two weeks.

Mrs. Eliza Applegate, mother of the late Tom S. Applegate, editor of the Adrian Times, died of heart disease on Sunday morning, aged 80 years.

The Adrian Daily Times got out an extra morning edition yesterday giving the election returns as complete as possible at that hour. The Times is a very progressive newspaper.

Willard Stearns, editor of the Adrian Press, has our thanks for a copy of the "trade edition," which is literally illustrated with good half-tone engravings of prominent buildings, both public and private also with portraits of prominent men of the city. These are accompanied by a suitable write up of each and the whole makes a valuable and interesting number, of which, Mr. Stearns may well feel proud.

Charles Conklin of Greenville brought his son to Ann Arbor this week to have his eyes treated and cause he to visit his sister, Mrs. Wm. Chase. He was a resident of this village 25 years ago.

PEOPLE HERE AND THERE.

Mr. & Mrs. George Sherwood returned last Saturday from a long and pleasant visit with their son, at Osceola, Iowa.

Mr. Dr. Hunter, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Rev. J. L. Hudson, at Alpena, returned to Clinton last week.

Comm. Middlebrook has moved his family and live stock into the house opposite Peter Van Gieson's, on Waters street.

Vince Gray, who has been farming in Sharon the past summer, has returned to village life and has moved his family back to our Manchester.

A small company of young people was entertained at the residence of Thos. J. Farrel last Saturday evening in honor of his daughter Marion's birthday.

We learn that Fred Borkhardt, who went to New York City a few weeks ago, has struck luck and is in the conclusion on a street car line at a salary of $14 a week.

Fred J. Schaible paid on the mortgage on his house and his wife was so elated that she presented him with twin daughters. That surprised Fred, who thinks he will have to build an addition to the house at once.—

Manchester Is Alive.

While many of our neighboring towns are complaining of durable dull times, Manchester is spurting the eyes tetor of her way. In fact, we can confidently say that she has made some improvement the past year.

The Manchester roller mills have increased their capacity and are shipping flour to foreign countries.

The premium mills are supplying their home customers and shipping flour to the neighboring cities.

The somewhat famous foundry is busy at work on its products.

Joseph Kramer and Kuehle & Schmid are manufacturing washing machines and find ready sale.

The southern brewery, under the excellent management of Chas. Adcion & Co., has built up a large trade and the demand for their beer in neighboring towns and cities is constantly increasing.

We have two excellent state banks, with an abundance of funds and well officered.

The union savings bank is putting up the finest business block in Washtenaw county.

Jenter & Rauschenberger are manufacturing furniture to order and do excellent work. Their last order was furniture for the union savings bank.

The machinery of both our meat markets is run by steam and they ship the product to neighboring cities and villages.

Our broom factory has a large out-of-town trade.

Our merchant tailors have customers in many neighboring towns.

The Manchester creamery is the second oldest in the state.

Our coopers ship barrels to neighboring towns.

The Enterprise publishing house sells books to dealers in every state.

Our celery growers find ready sale for their superior goods in cities east and west.

We have the finest agricultural country in Michigan.

We have in the Kinsman house one of the largest and best kept hotels in the state.

We have excellent fire protection.

We have power water and plenty of it. Our flowing wells are a marvel.

Our fruit raisers ship hundreds of bushels of the finest fruit during the season.

If you want to find a good place to school your children, come here.

If you want to invest money come here.

We have three good water powers.

We have two railroad lines.

We have a good planing mill.

We have electric lights on our streets.

We have good stores and public buildings.

We have good churches.

We have a good produce and grain market.

We have the best looking business blocks of any village of its size in the state.

We have a progressive and enterprising lot of merchants.

We have the best schools.

We have fine streets and good sidewalks.

We have a moral community.

We are an industrious people.

We want good honest people to come here. There is room for all and there is not a prettier or healthier town in the state than Manchester.

THE GREAT SALE CONTINUES

Thousands Attending the Greatest Slaughter Sale Ever Known in the State of Michigan.

AT NO. 4 MONROE AVENUE, DETROIT.

Never in the history of Detroit commerce has any event produced such a wide-spread sensation as the New York Bankrupt Sale, making nearly one-quarter of a million dollars worth of merchandise thrown on the market at 27 cents on the dollar. All the stock has now arrived from New York, and is now attracting the multitudes to No. 4 Monroe Ave., Detroit. If you want to secure some of these bargains, you must come to this great sale at once. Don't miss it if you are in want of a fine fall or winter suit or overcoat at 27 cents on the dollar of the manufacturers' cost. This is without exception one of the choicest select stocks of fine tailor and ready-made clothing ever placed on public auction, and everybody should take advantage of such an opportunity. Mr. R. H. McCarthy, assignee of the Bankrupt Clothing Co., has been appointed by the court to dispose of this stock, and a guarantee is given that every article is exactly as represented or money refunded. It will pay you to come hundred miles to attend this great bankrupt sale. The sale will continue from day to day until all is sold, and remember all must be sold and the entire stock will be sacrificed without reserve.

Nothing are a few of the many thousands of bargains offered at this great sale:

THE CENTURY IN 1895.

Taking advantage of the general revival of interest in Great Street Empire, THE CENTURY will print during 1895

A New Life of NAPOLEON,

Magnificently Illustrated.

THE CENTURY is famous for its great historical serials, and never in its history has a greater one been projected than this new "Life of Napoleon," by the Comte de Paris, the Bourbon Pretender, who has spent almost a lifetime in preparation for his work. Thus far no biography of "the man of destiny" has appeared in either English or French that is free from rancor and attentive to the laws of historical criticism. THE CENTURY HAS ARRANGED IT—THE GREAT, ALL-SIDED, COMPLETE AND INTERESTING BIOGRAPHY of the life of one of the most marvelous of men. No matter how much you already know of Napoleon, you will be fascinated by this work where in the concentration of all the lives and memoirs. THE ILLUSTRATIONS WILL BE MAGNIFICENT, the wealth of THE CENTURY'S art department will be lavished upon them. Two members of the staff have just returned from Paris, where they have been securing all that is best of Napoleonic material. New portraits will be printed, great historical paintings reproduced, and drawings and other models made from the famous relics of the great man of Nemesis—all the finest in history.

In addition to this there will be

A New Novel by MARION CRAWFORD.

The title is "Casa Braccio." It is a romance of Italy, full of human passion and rattling episode.

A New Novel by Mrs. BURTON HARRISON

will be published during the year. It is called "An Anglo-French Idyl." It is a story of adventure (of love) among new scenes of travel in Northern Africa and Southern Spain.

Other Features

will be several familiar papers on Washington in Lincoln's "Tom," by Noah Brooks, who was on terms of unusual intimacy with the war president; several papers on Philippine Islands by Joseph Ferguson, with illustrations by Joseph Pennell, and many others of equal interest.

RUDYARD KIPLING

Probably Will Write Exclusively for THE CENTURY.

The Price

of THE CENTURY for the year will remain the same as now—$4 a year. Begin subscriptions with November. Whatever other magazine you may take you must have THE CENTURY. All agents are prepared to receive subscriptions, or they may be made directly to

THE CENTURY CO., Union Square New York.

Send for our beautifully illustrated pamphlet, "The Century Ch. And the work," and mention where you saw this.

Election passed off very quietly here.

The roads are good though a little muddy.

The Enterprise to Jan'y 1st for 15 cents.

The democrats are paying their election bets today.

It snowed and rained nearly all day yesterday.

It was a republican victory on a democratic day.

The first snow of the season came on Monday night.

Democratic roosters were all housed before election.

This weather is just right for colds, rheumatism, etc.

Now is a good time to pay your subscription to the Enterprise.

It seemed good to hear the church bells after their three weeks silence.

In the words of the immortal Plunkett, "Great Scott, who'd a thunk it?"

When Fred Steinkohl smiles, he displays a new set of store teeth.

Schultz & Hagarman is the name of the new firm buying grain in this market.

John Kenzler, the "hustler," has an advertisement this week that talks prices.

We are glad that election is past, business will be better and news more plentiful.

There was another large crowd of people in town last Saturday and trade was good.

The maccabees will have an election of officers two weeks from Tuesday evening, Nov. 20.

Work was suspended on the savings bank building yesterday on account of the snow.

You are apt to insult a descent dog when you speak of some people leading a dog's life.

Have you heard anyone say that the Lake Shore company would build a new depot here?

Atlas No. 31, to accompany the official records of the war of the rebellion, has been received.

The masons need about six days more to complete the brick work for the savings bank building.

When we saw the stores yesterday morning we thought the democrats were surely snowed under.

Rev. Merrifield will give a gospel temperance sermon at the universalist church on Sunday evening next.

The weather has not been as cold this fall as it was two years ago, but it was pretty coldish Tuesday night.

If you intend to have an auction, call at the Enterprise office for your bills. We will arrange for a good auctioneer.

Subject of discourse in the universalist church, next Sunday morning at 10:30: "Why build again fabrics for which there is no more any need?"

There was a wreck on the Michigan Central just west of Ypsilanti last Thursday afternoon and in consequence several of the passenger trains passed through here that evening.

Is is an old saying that, "Still waters run deep," and we are of the opinion that it was the quiet, thinking man that caused the tidal wave to sweep over the country on Tuesday.

If you get a sample copy of the Enterprise, look it over carefully, consider it an invitation to subscribe. You get it until Jany 1st for 15 cents and for one year for $1.25 spot cash.

The barbers say that they would as lief shave a thoroughbred Merino sheep as to shave some of those republicans, their faces are so wrinky since election. Democrats have longsmooth faces.

Township treasurers, please remember that we print tax receipts in the most approved style, bind them strongly and neatly and furnish them at 50 cents per hundred. Send in your orders now.

The scare over the small-pox cases at Mr. Himmelsinger's three and one half miles south west of the village subsided. No more cases has been reported there and those who were sick are getting along nicely.

On the 2nd page will be found the only telegraphic news obtained up to yesterday afternoon when we went to press with that page but reports from some places come in so slow and Michigan is amongst the number that it is not possible to give exact figures, but it is a clean republican victory clear enough.

BRIDGEWATER.

Mumps is again the order of the day.

A CUNNING REPTILE.

The Various Clever Devices He Used to Deceive His Discoverer.

A correspondent of The Popular Science News tells the following strange story:

While searching for snails I turned over an old log and disturbed a snake, called by our negroes a "spreading adder." The tactics pursued by this snake were curious

First he erected his head and neck and flattened them out till they seemed no thicker than cardboard, thus increasing his apparent size, as he took care not to be seen edgewise. The shape of his head changed. It took a pronounced triangular form—similar to the heads of our most venomous snakes. Then his tail, with the aid of a dry leaf, was rattled so exactly like it was the tail of a rattlesnake.

All this, coupled with an ominous hiss, was calculated to strike terror to the heart of his disturber, as for a moment it did. I regained my courage, however, and began to poke the serpent gently with a stick, when, finding "bluster" of no avail, he sought safety in flight.

Repeated "headings off" showed him how futile were his efforts in that line, and he altered his tactics again. He turned on his back and remained motionless. I threw him upon the ground, and so quickly did he turn over that he seemed to strike on his back.

Once on his back, nothing could induce him to move. Tapping, prodding, twisting his tail—all were in vain. Then I suspended him from the limb of a tree, retreated a little and watched. At the end of two minutes the reptile moved. Slowly he turned on his spinal column as on an axis, surveyed the premises, and seeing nothing dangerous dropped to the ground and was making off.

At my approach he died again. After sundry proceedings, which failed to move him, I rewarded him for his cleverness by giving him the liberty that he certainly had earned.

SEALS ARE FOND OF MUSIC.

And Hunters Use Sweet Sounds to Get Them Within Reach.

"Seals are very fond of music," said G. L. Tompkins of New Bedford, Mass., "and the hunters who pursue them most successfully usually make use of some musical instrument to attract them. I have a distinct recollection of the first seal hunt I ever went on. Early one morning I, in company with about a dozen others, set out in a rowboat for a place where the seals were said to be plentiful. The boatmen dipped their oars slowly in the water and sang in him a weird, wild song in a peculiar undertone. To me, being uninitiated in the sport, this seemed to be a curious accompaniment to a seal hunt, but I was still more surprised when one of the men produced a flute and played on it a quaint, sympathetic air.

"The effect of the music was soon evident. An dozen of seals poked their heads up, some remaining basking on the water, while others clambered up on the ledges of rock, charmed almost to unconsciousness by the music. Steering the boat to the shore, the musicians all the while keeping up the plaintive air, one of the men jumped out—he carried with him a huge club, and a huge sharp knife—noiselessly creeping to where some of the seals were lying on the rocks listening intently to the music, he dealt one of them a terrible blow on the head with the club, running to him then and made short work of the poor animal with his knife. In the same manner we secured 11 fine seals before night."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Shooting in France.

Shooting is probably the most universally popular sport in France. Almost every man, be he lawyer or will be a "chasseur." It is a healthy exercise, inexpensive, since 20 persons can join to hire the lease of as many acres, and is unattended with risk of disappointment, as the unlucky sportsman can always buy a rabbit at the dealer's to bring home to his wife. The French government annually issues 400,000 licenses, which bring in about £400,000. The largest number of these permits is delivered in the departments of Lyonnais, Bordeaux, Bouches du Rhone, Marseilles and Seine et Oise, on account of their nearness to Paris, about 13,000 in each. The department of the Seine, in which Paris is situated, is responsible only for 9,000 licenses, there being very little real country in it.—London News.

His Meaning Illustrated.

A lawyer was cross-questioning a negro witness in one of the justice courts the other day and was getting along fairly. Well until he asked the witness what his occupation was.

"I'zu a carpenter, sah."

"What kind of a carpenter?"

"They calls me a jack leg carpenter, sah."

"What is a jack leg carpenter?"

"He is a carpenter who is not a first class carpenter, sah."

"Why don't you fully what you understand a jack leg carpenter to be," insisted the lawyer.

"I dectah, I dunno how fer splain any mo', 'cept to say hit am jes' de same difference twixt you and er fust class lawyer."—Macon Telegraph.

A Discriminating Conductor.

"Those two men seem mighty badly worked up," said the messenger boy, who was coming up stairs backward so as not to miss anything. "They're calling in names an threaten to do one another."

"What is it?" asked the bookkeeper. "A fight?"

"Naw! I thought they was fighters but I guess they're only pugilists."—Washington Star.

Could Not Beat Their Records.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 11.—Another big crowd attended the trots here. There were three specials—Allix and John R. Gentry to beat their records and Hal Dillard to beat his record. Owing to the high wind, both Allix and Gentry failed, and Dillard did not start. Allix tried twice.

The Store

ANN ARBOR AND MANCHESTER.

THE GREAT SYNDICATE SALE CONTINUES.

Another Link in the Chain of Unmatchable Bargains!

Replete with values of incredible magnitude of wonderful low selling and remarkable cheap buying, that have won golden opinions from thousands of wide awake customers who came to us in response to our announcement two weeks ago. We told you then we would inaugurate a sale unlike anything known heretofore. The crowds in our establishment last week testified to the manner in which we carried our intentions. We have combined fine goods with low prices, revolutionized trade in favor of the consumer and have made the Big Store the talk of the country. The good work goes on.—We intend to keep it up the entire season. We must keep it up to dispose of our enormous purchases, which, now that they are all received far exceeds our calculations.

DRESS GOODS, CLOAKS AND FURS,

Are here in enormous quantities.—unlike anything heretofore seen. It positively frightens us to contemplate the extent of our buying.

DRESS GOODS SALE--EXTRAORDINARY.

In the great Dress Goods Department—in our unique Dress Goods Stock—where more new, foreign, exclusive Dress Goods ideas prevail than in all other Dress Goods stocks combined,—where fashion centers, and bargain centers, are most radiantly reflected,—where whatever is particularly new and novel in style and rare in value finds finds freest representation.—Were it not you would not always see the largest crowds of shrewd buyers at these counters. It is here our greatest efforts will be made.

New Fall Dress Fabrics FOR WINTER

No three Dress Goods Stocks in the county can show as extensive and as exclusive a variety of Scotch, English, French and German Novelties as "The Store" has on exhibit now, all the result of our great Syndicate purchasing at prices lower than they will ever reach under the new tariff law and consequently lower than possible for any other concern to reach.

Storm Serges. Our claim to the lowest prices is nowhere better exemplified than where these goods are found. We place on sale 50 pieces 50-inch, soft, fine, thick Storm Serge, in blue and black, you would unhesitatingly pay 75c or 85c for if we asked it, at 50c.

DR. TALMAGE'S SERMON ON "VICTORY OVER PAIN."

Death the Only Conqueror of the Trials and Tribulations of the World—Rev. 21:iv "Neither Shall There Be Any More Pain."

BROOKLYN, Nov. 4.—Rev. Dr. Talmage, who is now nearing the close of his globe-circling tour and will shortly reach American shores, has selected as the subject of to-day's sermon through the press: "Victory Over Pain," the text chosen being Revelation 21:iv, "Neither shall there be any more pain."

The first question that you ask when about to change your residence to any city is, "What is the health of the place? Is it shaken of terrible disorders? What are the bills of mortality? What is the death rate? How high rises the thermometer? And now I not reasonable in asking, what are the sanitary conditions of the heavenly city into which we all hope to move? My text answers it by saying, "Neither shall there be any more pain."

First, I remark, there will be no pain or disappointment in heaven. If I could put the picture of what you anticipated of life when you began it, beside the picture of what you have realized, I would find a great difference. You have stumbled upon great disappointments. Perhaps you expected fishes, and you have worked hard enough to gain them; you have planned and worried and persisted until your hands were worn and your brain was racked and your heart fainted, and at the end of this long strife with misfortune you find that you have not been positively defeated it has been a drawn battle. It is still up and tussle—this year looks as if you gained last, financial uncertainties pulling down faster than you build. For perhaps twenty or thirty years you have been running your craft straight into the teeth of the wind.

Perhaps you have domestic disappointment. Your children upon whose education you lavished your hard earned dollars, have not turned out as you expected. Notwithstanding all your counsels and prayers and pains taking, they will not do right. Many a good father has had a bad boy. Absalom trod on David's heart. That mother never imagined that as twenty or thirty years ago she sat by her child's cradle.

Your life has been a chapter of disappointments. But come with me, and I will show you a different scene. By God's grace, entering the other city you will never again have a blasted hope. The most brilliant of expectation will not reach the realization. Coming to the top of one hill of joy, there will be other heights rising up in the vision. This song of transport will but lift you to a higher anthem; the sweetest choral but a prelude to more tremendous harmony; all things better than you had anticipated—the rose bush better, the crown brighter, the temple grander, the throng mightier.

Further, I remark, there will be no pain or weariness. It may be many hours since you quit work, but many if you are unrested, some from overwork and some from dulness of trade, the latter more exhausting than the former. You rankles ache, your spirits flag, you want rest. Are there wheels always to turn? these shuttles to fly? these axes to hew; these shovels to delve? these pens to write? these books to be posted? these goods to be sold?

Ah! the great holiday approaches. Rest of taskmasters. No more stooping until the back aches. No more calculation until the brain is bewildered. No more pain. No more carpentry, for the mansions are all built. No more masonry, for the walls are all reared. No more domestic cutting, for the gems are all set. No more gold beating, for the crowns are all completed. No more agriculture, for the harvests are spontaneous.

Further, there will be no more pain of poverty. It is a hard thing to be really poor; to have your coat wear long and no money to get another; to have your flour barrel empty, and nothing to buy bread with for your children, to live in an unhealthy row, and no means to change your habitation; to have your child sick with scarlet fever, and yet not be able to secure eminent medical ability; to have your daughter begin in the world, and you not have anything to help them in starting; with a mind capable of research and high contemplation, to be perpetually fixed on questions of mere livelihood.

Poets try to throw a romance about the poor man's cot; but there is no romance about it. Poverty is hard, cruel, unrelenting. But Lazarus waked up without his rags and his disease, and so all of Christ's poor wake up at last without any of their disadvantages. poverty, for they are all princes, no rents to pay for the residence is gratuitous; no garments to buy, for the robes are divinely fashioned; no seats in church for poor folks, but equality among temple worshipers. No hovels, no hard crusts, no insufficient apparel. "They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more, neither shall the sun light on them nor any heat." No more pain!

Further, there will be no pain of parting. All these associations must spare me time, hand in hand, to walk and walk together, and talk and laugh and weep together; but we must after awhile separate. We may grieve, we may be in one place, mine in another. We look each other full in the face for the last time. We will be sitting together some evening, or walking together some day, and nothing will be unusual in our appearance, or our conversation; but God knows that it is the last time, and that messengers from eternity, on their errand to us away, know it is the last time; and in heaven, where they make ready for our departing spirits, they know it is the last time.

On the long agony of earthly separation! It is awful to stand in your sick room, fighting death back from the couch of your child, and try to hold her the little while on, and see all the time that he is getting weaker, and the breath is shorter, and make outcry to God to help us, and to the doctors to save him, and see it is of no avail, and then to know that his spirit is gone, and that you have nothing left but the casket that held the jewel, and that in two or three days you must even put that away, and walk around about the house and find it desolate, sometimes feeling rebellious, and then to resolve over it differently, and to resolve on self-control, and just as you have come to what you think is perfect self-control, to suddenly come upon some little coat, or picture, or shoe half worn out, and how all the floods of the soul break in on the wild wail of agony! Oh, my God, how hard it is to part, to close the eyes that never can look merry at our coming, to kiss the hand that will never again do us a kindness. I know religion gives great consolation at such an hour, and we ought to be comforted; but anyhow and anyway you make it, it is awful.

On steamboat wharf and at rail car window we may smile when we say farewell; but these good-byes at the death bed, they just take hold of the heart with iron pincers, and tear it out by the roots, till all the fibers quiver and curl in the torture and drop thick blood. These separations are wine presses into which our hearts, like red clusters, are thrown, and then trouble turns the windlass round and round until we are utterly crushed, and have no more capacity to suffer, and we stop crying because we have wept all our tears.

On every street, at every doorstep, by every couch, there have been partings. But once past the heavenly portals, and you are through with such scenes forever. In that land there are many hand-claspings and embracings, but only in recognition. That great home circle never breaks. Once find your comrades there, and you have found them forever. No crape floats from the door of that blissful residence. No cleft hillside where the dead sleep. All awake, wide awake and forever. No pushing out of emigrant ship for foreign shore. No tolling of bell as the funeral passes. Whole generations in glory. Hand to hand, heart to heart, joy to joy. No creeping up the limbs of the death chill, the feet cold until hot flames can not warm them. No rattle of sepulchral gates. No parting, no pain.

Further, the heavenly city will have no pain of body. The race is pierced with sharp distresses. The surgeon's knife, the dentist's pincers must pull. Pain is fought with pain. The world is a hospital. Scores of diseases like vultures contending for a carcass, struggle as to which shall have it. Our natures are infinitely susceptible to suffering. The eye, the foot, the hand, with immense capacity of anguish.

The little child meets at the entrance of life manifold diseases. You hear the shrill cry of infancy as the lancet strikes into the swollen gum. You see its head toss in consuming fever that takes more than half of them into the dust. Old age passes, dizzy, and weak, and short-breathed, and dim-sighted. On every northeast wind come down pleurisies and pneumonias. War lift, its sword and hacks away the life of whole generations. The hospitals of the earth groan into the ear of God their complaint. Asiatic cholera and ship fevers and typhoids and London plagues make the world's knees knock together.

Death has gone through every street, and up every ladder, and down every shaft. It is on the wave, on the mast, on the beach. Wounds from elip of elephant's tusk and adder's sting, and crocodile's tooth, and horse's hoof, and wheel's revolution. We gather up the infirmities of our parents and transmit to our children the inheritance augmented by our own sickneses, and then our children entail disorders, to pass the inheritance to other generations. In A. D. 262, the plague in Rome smote into the dust 5,000 citizens daily. In 544, in Constantinople, 1,000 were dipped in a day, and towers of the dead. In 1813, ophthalmia seized the whole Prussian army. At times the earth has groaned with suffering.

Go through and examine the lacerations, the gunshot fractures, the sabre wounds, the gashes of the battle axe, the slain of bombshell and exploded mine and falling wall and those destroyed under the gun carriage and the hoof of the cavalry horse, the burning thirsts, the camp fevers, the frosts that shivered, the tropical suns that smote. Add it up, gather it into one line, compress it into one word, spell it in one syllable, clank it in one chain, pour it out in one groan; distill it into one tear.

Ay, the world has writhed in six thousand years of suffering. Why do not the people shun the possibility of suffering when we see the tortures that have been inflicted in this? A decorated soldier, returning from the army of the allies pointed back to the fortress and said, "That place is a perfect hell."

Our lexicographers, aware of the immense necessity of having lots of words to express the different shades of trouble, have strewn over their pages such words as "annoyance," "distress," "grief," "bitterness," "headache," "misery," "twinge," "pang," "torture," "affliction," "anguish," "tribulation," "wretchedness," "woe." But I have a glad sound for every hospital, for every sick room, for every life long invalid, for every broken heart. "There shall be no more pain." Thank God! Thank God!

No malaria float in the air. No bruised foot treads that street. No weary arm. No painful respiration. No hectic flush. No one ear drink of that healthy fountain and keep faint and feverish for faint headed. He whose foot touches that pavement becomes an athlete. The first kiss of that symphony will take the wrinkles from the old man's cheek. Amid the multitude of songsters, not one diseased throat. The first flash of the throne will scatter the darkness of those who were born blind. See, the lame man leaps as a hart, and the dumb sing. From that bath of infinite delight we shall step forth, our weariness forgotten. Who are those radiant ones? Why, that one had his jaw shot off at Fredericksburg; that one lost his eyes in a powder blast; that one had his back broken by a fall from the ship's halyards; that one died of gangrene in the hospital. No more pain. Sure enough, here is Robert Hall, who never before saw a well day, and Edward Payson, whose body was ever torn of distress, and Richard Baxter, who passed through untold physical torture. All well. No more pain. Here, too, are the Thebian legion, a great host of 6,666, put to the sword for Christ's sake. No distortion on their countenances. No fires to burn them, or floods to drown them, or racks to tear them. All well. Here are the Scotch Covenanters, none to hunt them now. The dark cave and the imprecations of Lord Claverhouse exchanged for temple service, and the presence of him who helped Hugh Latimer out of the fire. All well. No more pain.

I set open the door of heaven until there blows on you this refreshing breeze. The fountains of God have made it cool, and the gardens have made it sweet. You do not know that Solomon ever heard on a hot day, the ice clink in an ice pitcher, but he wrote as if he did when he said, "As cold waters to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

Clambering among the Green mountains I was tired and hot and thirsty and I shall not forget how refreshing it was when, after a while I heard the mountain brook tumbling over the rocks. I had no cup, no chalice, so I got down on my knees and face to drink. Oh, ye climbers on the journey, with cut feet and parched tongues and fevered temples, listen to the rumbling of sapphire brooks and flowered banks, over which shelving, Listen! "The Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall lead them unto living fountains of water." I do not offer it to you in a chalice. To take this you must bend, get down on your knees and on your face, and drink out of the great fountain of God's consolation. "And I heard a voice from heaven, as the voice of many waters."

WAS A SWELL FOR A TIME.

How Clarence Wilmot, Conquered Montreal Society and Won a Bet.

The sequel to the story of Clarence E. Wilmot's escapades a few weeks ago is as interesting as the original story, says a Toronto exchange. He gave out that he was a millionaire and that he was going to marry a young lady in Three Rivers. He spent money lavishly, chartered a steamboat for a wedding excursion and invited several hundred of the most prominent people in Montreal. In turn he was feted by several young "bloods" and introduced to the exclusive circles of the St. James club. He disappeared on the eve of the marriage and nothing more was heard of him. The sequel came out the other day, and those who entertained him felt badly sold. It appears that a year ago Wilmot was a news agent on the Richelieu and Ontario boats between Montreal and Quebec. He saved a few hundred dollars, and when winter came he secured a similar position on the Canadian Atlantic between Coteau and Ottawa. His economical habits followed him, and in the spring he was in possession of nearly $1,000. Some lucky strokes at the Woodbine races in Toronto doubled this sum. While celebrating his turf victories in a Toronto saloon he made the remark that the time had come when he could take his place among the Montreal 400. The remark was greeted with laughter, but Wilmot offered to bet $3,000 that inside of three months he would have Montreal society inviting him out; that he would invite them out; that they would accept his invitations; that merchants would be ready to give him hundreds of dollars of credit, and that the whole thing would cost less than $4,000. The bet was accepted, the money was put up, and Wilmot succeeded in winning the purse at a cost, according to himself, of $3,100. He has gone back to his original business, and can be seen any day selling boots, cigars, etc., on the trains between Sarnia and Toronto.—Exc.

Paper Water Pipes.

The experiment with the new paper pulp water pipes, which are made on pretty much the same principle as the fiber pail, has demonstrated that the idea will eventually prove successful.

As it now stands, the hand made pipes formed from well selected and irregularly subdued pulp, are well enough made to warrant that they will stand the wear and tear to which street water pipes are subjected. However, it would be more of a wonder if the pipes should be a success from the start. Time and experiments are essential to the development of all new things.

With each new test of the proposed pipes a step-advance is made, and this would indicate that after a few more trials perfection will have been attained. The matter as it now stands is as follows: Paper pulp, in which there is a fairly good fiber, is agitated with water and then run into molds, and is cast into the form of the ordinary water pipe.

The same molds that are used in connection with casting iron pipes are employed. The mode of procedure is substantially the same. Of course, there are various strengthening materials compounded with the pulp, otherwise it would not stand a great pressure. The inventors report that these ingredients are inexpensive and simple.—Boston Commercial Bulletin.

Thirteen Children Too Much.

Harrison Smith of Augusta, Ga., was a humble citizen of that city before there was any message for him. But on Tuesday night Harrison Smith was the father of eleven children. He was happy. There was but a single cloud upon the horizon of his future, but he was not worried. That morning his wife presented him with twins. Without a word Smith walked into his room, took up a pistol and shot himself through the heart. It is claimed by his friends he was a man of great superstition, and when the fact that he was the father of thirteen children was thrust upon him it was too much.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON VI—NOV. 11.—THE TWELVE CHOSEN.

Golden Text: I Have Chosen You, and Ordained You, That Ye Should Go and Bring Forth Fruit—Mark III: 6-19.

Introductory. It is an interesting fact that the final calling and appointment of the twelve apostles, which was one of the most signal events in the life of the Lord Jesus, was intimately connected, in point of time at least, with the plot which the Pharisees and the Herodians formed against his life. It was when his enemies began to scheme against him that he formally set apart a select number of his most trusted disciples to be with him wherever he went, and to take part in the great task of setting up the kingdom of God among men.

I. The Withdrawal of Jesus, vers. 6-13. 6. "The Pharisees . . . took counsel with the Herodians against him." Who the Pharisees were we have already learned. The Herodians were a political rather than a religious sect, the partisans of the family of Herod. On religious belief they were principally Sadducees, and so at enmity with the Pharisees; but in order to accomplish the destruction of Jesus, they were willing to lay aside their prejudices.

7, 8. "Jesus withdrew himself." His hour for exposing himself to the wrath of his enemies had not yet come, and so he kept out of their way. "A great multitude . . . followed him." This multitude was gathered from every part of the country, beginning on the north with Tyre and Sidon, and coming south through Galilee and Judea to Idumea on the Arabian desert. It also included representatives from "beyond Jordan."

9. "He spake to his disciples, that a small ship should wait on him." He wanted this ship to be put at his service, so that he might use it whenever he desired to do so, and thus escape the possibility of undue pressure from the multitude.

10. "He had healed many." And the reports of his fame made others more anxious to get at him. "Pressed upon him for to touch him." Supposed miracles were wrought by the faith would give them relief. "Plagues." Painful diseases.

11. "Unclean spirits . . . fell down before him." Not once, nor twice, but frequently. "Thou art the Son of God." A reluctant testimony to Jesus.

12. "Straitly charged them that they should not make him known." He did not wish to be made known by anybody at that time, nor by them at any time.

II. The Appointment of the Twelve, vers. 13-19. 13. "Goeth up into a mountain." Probably the Horns of Hattin, the only conspicuous hill on the western side of the lake. "Called unto him whom he would." As a later date he said to them: "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you."

14. "Ordained." Appointed. "Twelve." One for each of the tribes. "That they should be with him." Accompanying him wherever he went, and giving up every other occupation. "To preach." To announce publicly the coming of the kingdom of God.

15. "To heal sickness, and to cast out devils." And by the use of this miraculous power to convince the unbelieving.

16. "Simon he surnamed Peter." Renewing and repeating what he had done at the very beginning of his ministry.

17. James, . . . John, . . . Boanerges, . . . The sons of thunder." Because they were of fiery and tempestuous disposition.

18. "Bartholomew." The same, perhaps, as Nathanael. See John 1: 45-51. "Thaddeus." Called also Lebbaeus (Matthew 10: 3) and Judas, but not Iscariot (John xiv: 22). "Simon the Canaanite." The word "Canaanite" here is Aramaic for "zealot," and refers to the fact that Simon belonged to the revolutionary party of patriots of Galilee.

19. "Judas Iscariot." Iscariot means "a man of Kerioth," a town in Judea. Jesus knew as well as a divine, and his human nature needed prayer which was not in need it. He was subject to exactly the same conditions as we are. "He was tempted in all points like as we are."

The Congo Railroad.

Twenty-five miles of the Congo railroad, forming the first section between Matadge and Kenge, are now completed. The work has cost $100,000 a mile. The line will be ninety-three miles long in all, and will connect the immense waterways above the falls with the sea.

A New Lottery Scheme.

Here is a new lottery scheme adopted by a London restaurant: A small casket containing a £5 note. Each customer is given a key, but only one of the whole lot will unlock the casket. The man who has the key that fits gets the prize.

PEOPLE AND THINGS.

A mausoleum to the memory of the late Mrs. Chauncey Depew is being erected in Hillside cemetery, Rockskill. It is to cost $20,000 and will be thirteen feet high, fifteen feet wide and twenty feet long.

Chicago is consuming horse meat to an increasing extent. A health office inspector was detailed to locate several butchers who slaughtered retired racers, he ascertained that there is no law to stop them, or to prevent people from eating horse meat.

There are 2,726 policemen for the 1,600,000 people in Chicago, against 13,814 for the 5,000,000 people in London.

The will of the late Mrs. Charles Lux of San Francisco, which has been admitted to probate, sets aside nearly $3,000,000 for a manual training school. One-third of her estate is given outright for "the promotion of schools for manual training, industrial sewing and for teaching trades to young people of both sexes in the state of California, and particularly in the city and county of San Francisco."

CARNIVAL TRAGEDY

FERNANDO was handsome as an Apollo, straight as a tree and of such noble, manly bearing that I, his dwarfed and ugly brother, had always worshiped him with blind, persistent adoration.

When Alicia came between us I began to look upon his superior charms with all the bitterness of envy. His perfect physique grew hateful to my eyes and the noble face took on a mask of proud congratulation.

It was the evening before the Carnival of the Flowers that I reached the scene of despair. Alicia, starry-eyed and velvet-lipped, had talked and danced with Fernando until my heart was almost bursting.

Alicia was of Spanish birth, her father, the Conde de Tornasol, had been one of the highest nobles in the land, and had early wed his daughter to one who later escaped from his country to escape the dungeon, friendless and alone, with a conspirator's price upon his head.

I somehow wondered if Alicia loved him now. It was said that she did at the time of her marriage and that it nearly broke her heart to part with him at the hour of his hasty flight. Since then she had been received at court, feted by nobles and ladies of high degree, and been flattered by a glance of the eye or a wave of the hand, a thousand suitors to her feet.

It was just after an unusually tiresome waltz and I had lost sight of Alicia for a moment. I left my seat and wandered about the rooms, searching everywhere for the starry eyes, whose owner was the glory of my world and heaven. At last I saw her, sitting alone in a darkened conservatory, hidden so completely by a screening palm that no glance, other than from the eye of love, would ever have detected her.

But I pushed aside the struggling leaves and stood suddenly before her, and, with head and bare arms and breathing, she could not forbear to start at the hideous picture I must have made.

Then she extended her taper hand and smiled into my hideous face. "Oh, senor, you have found my hiding place!" Then with a flood of rapture almost blinding my senses, I saw that she had moved a little and was making a place for me upon the divan beside her.

My tongue was paralyzed for the moment, but I drew myself up to the velvet seat with such a feeling of perfect bliss as I had never before experienced.

For once her smiles, her gracious words, were all for me alone. I flashed, half intoxicated, and answered like one in a dream. I bent forward, my lips parted, to tell her of my love, when suddenly a black shadow fell across the palms, and I had only time to bite my lips to silence when my brother stepped into the place, looking more exquisitely modulated, fell, knell-like, on my ear.

Then was a gentle laugh from Alicia. She touched my hand with her jeweled fingers and, breathing upon me a kiss of love, she vanished there, rose swiftly from the sheltered nook and went back into the glare of light, leaning once more upon my brother's shoulder.

At that moment I could have killed him in my rage. What right had he to steep Alicia in this ecstasy, this sweet moment of my happiness? To him her smiles were plentiful, why should he take from me my one brief glimpse into his blissful paradise?

I hurried from the ball to plan my revenge, but in an instant it had come to me that were he not so constantly by her side there might be some little chance for my happiness. The carnival began, and amid that scene of wild hilarity, I decided I would kill my rival.

THE NEXT morning, the first day of the famous carnival, broke fair and golden in its splendor. The sun of the Riveras was shining brilliantly upon the waters of the Mediterranean, and from the peaks of the distant mountains there came a cooling breath of air that seemed to soothe my frenzy just a little. Calmly and deliberately I made my plans. The costume I selected was calculated to disguise my hideous form, and even make me many inches taller through the monstrous helmet I assumed.

As a last addition to my toilet I purchased a keen-edged dagger.

It lacked but a moment of the signal gun so I began my ghastly task by walking a few short, jostling so best I could among the crowd, but with my eyes fixed anxiously upon the masks, in the hope of finding a fearful searching for my brother.

At last I saw him, leaning boldly upon a flower-decked chariot. The disguise his face was shielded by a mask, I knew him by his noble form, his graceful carriage. I seemed to see, even at this moment, the smile, the trampled with the flowers while I hurried away from the sweet confusion.

Turning my back upon the city I went my way until on the following day I found myself mounting the steep ascent to the gaming house on at Monte Carlo. Half way up the stairs, with the memory of my evil deed still burning in my brain, I stopped suddenly, chilled to the very marrow, for just before me, noble, handsome as of old, I beheld my brother Fernando.

"My God!" I shouted hoarsely. "What have I done! What have I done!"

Fernando quickly descended the steps and stood beside me. "Hush! you are being losing, Pedro!" he said kindly. "It is take this," and he held a handful of gold before me, while I stared in stupid horror.

"When—when did you come here?" I asked faintly, when, by an effort, he answer Fernando took me by the arm and led me slowly away.

"We are my brother, Pedro, and I will tell you all," he said in a strangely mournful tone. "You see, I was foolishenough to fall in love with the lady Alicia's husband has returned—he lived.

I caught my breath with a stifling gasp—thinking Alicia's happiness had reassemble you?" I asked in horror.

"In form, yes, in face, no," he replied briefly.

With a sudden sob of weakness I told him the awful story, and Fernando, with tears in his eyes, clasped by the hand and said compassionately:

"Yours has been a hard lot, Pedro. Devoid of manly form from your birth, but let us not add more of wickedness to crime. Leave this cursed place, and go quietly to Paris and await me there. It is just possible that you did not kill the man, and as no one suspects you now you can safely trust it all to me."

I went to Paris and waited. After a week my brother, handsomer, nobler than ever, but with a plaintive sadness in his tones, brought me the following information: "No one suspects you—and the man is yet alive. There was a badge of some kind pinned above his heart that turned the dagger's edge, but he continued saddy, the bad better have died at once, for this sin of yours has brought about his capture, and Alicia will lose her husband soon, either behind the prison walls or by the stroke of a keen blade."

Thoroughly subdued and in misery of spirit, I returned to Nice. The carnival seemed devoid of its glitter following the contest, and I was only when an execution was announced that there was any show of excitement among the weary people.

Again the streets were thronged, but I did not venture out. A friend brought me the news as I laid, trembling and conscience stricken, in my room. He said he learned that Alicia, the beautiful, starry-eyed Alicia, was widowed by my hand. I wept such a bitterness of remorse that my brother was gravely startled.

"I am failing rapidly, the physicians say, but my secret is safe with my noble brother. It is nearly a year since the carnival and now Fernando is waiting for me in my own, one has gladly lets me share, for he knows that sorrow and remorse have shrivel my soul of gratitude and filled my heart with penitence.

At last I saw him, leaning boldly upon a flower-decked chariot.

LITTLE TOM THUMB.

WHEN THE FAMOUS MIDGET WAS A CHILD.

The Lilliputian's Early Travels With P. T. Barnum—He Had to Kiss the Ladies Fair—Pretty Presents—Precious and Handsome Boy of Ten Years.

I first saw Charles Sherwood Stratton—the American Tom Thumb—while on exhibition at the St. Louis hotel, New Orleans, La., early in January, 1848.

He performed on a long dining-room table, where he could be seen to advantage, as he stood still or trod back and forth, imitating, in appropriate civil or military costume, various persons of distinction, as Frederick the Great, the duke of Wellington and Napoleon Bonaparte. His personations of Napoleon under varying conditions were particularly fine and elicited merited applause.

The closing act of the entertainment was gracefully receiving and returning the lip salutations of the numerous ladies who presented themselves at the table where the elevation placed his mouth and theirs in suitable juxtaposition. As the last one retired, approaching, I hastily muttered, "You enjoy a privilege beyond that of common men in being allowed to kiss so many women." "Oh, very much so, and I believe sincerely, replied: "You see I have to kiss them all—the old and ugly as well as the young and handsome—so that I don't think I reap any special advantage in the whole."

I heard nothing about a week later at the Washington hotel, on Pia street, Havana, where he, his father and mother, Barnum and myself were lodged, Barnum being engaged at this time, while he was on exhibition at the Cuban capital. Here I had an opportunity to study the character of this man, his leading characteristics. He was at this time just 10 years old, though, in stature, he appeared much less. This exaggeration evidently displayed no great wisdom, for, while his diminutive stature was more wonderful for a person of 16 than one of 10, his attainments and performances were certainly not quite remarkable for a lad of 10 than of a youth of 16.

The medals sold in connection with the exhibition, presenting on one side a remarkably calm and intelligent face of the general, represent his "weight—I assume correctly—at fifteen pounds. My own careful measurements showed his height to be twenty-two inches. Soft, yellow hair, well trimmed and combed, sparkling blue eyes, faultless face, fair complexion, rosy cheeks, shapely limbs, body well set, though with a trifle too much of a stomach, appeared to constitute him as pretty a boy as I ever beheld. Want of size seemed to be his only defect. His manners were elegant, almost courtly, as might have been expected of a youngster who had been caressed by all the sovereigns of Europe. Taught in books, cultivated by travel and versed in various languages, he appeared uniformly accomplished for one so young. At table he partook of the savory viands with the same relish of only one who digestion was perfect. He could maneuver the men adroitly on the chessboard, and appeared to delight in the difficult game as though a mere pastime.

One of his favorite afternoon recreations was to ride along some of the leading thoroughfares of Havana in the shiny coach given him by Queen Victoria. A dwarfed horse, with his diminutive form, and the other of his own, drawn by two beautiful bay Shetlands, the smallest that could be matched in all Europe, the whole mounted harness. The entire turnout is said to have cost $1,500, and was presented to the Lilliputian in presence ever bestowed on the Lilliputian. In these excursions his driver always sat in the carriage, and his groom, mounted behind him, one a dwarf, the other a boy employed for the purpose. A crowd of the curious always thronged the hotel to see the Queen's opposite thoroughfare.

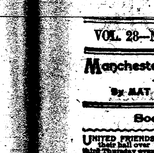
The Other Is a Professional Huntress—The Queen Victoria Clark and Her Know How to Take Real Enjoyment Out of Life.



FOR THE YOUNG woman of this period is to enjoy sports that have heretofore been a man's province, if she be a woman of wealth and leisure, or healthier fun can she have than hunting and fishing? Surely there is nothing unwomanly in that enjoyment, nothing that the critics may complain of.

The other day the sportsman's blood tingled when he read that a bear had been killed in the north woods by Miss Evelyn W. Parker, daughter of President Forrest H. Parker of the New Works Produce Exchange bank. When a woman can kill a bear what can she not do with a gun?

It is delightfully refreshing to read of the hunting exploits of Miss Marie Clark, a California schoolgirl of 17 years. When vacation time comes she does not pack a trunk full of ball and tennis gowns and while away the hours in flirting on the verandas of a summer hotel. She starts out with

MIDNIGHT PHOTOGRAPHS.

Departing Audience of Broadway Theater Photographed, Letters Written Thereon in the Wonderful Art of Photography.

Mr. Rockwood, the well known Photographer, has completed his arrangements for the demonstration of his art, which he calls Photography, and presents photographic conditions under which it can now be made at midnight as in the blaze of the noonday sun. A photograph of the audience at the Broadway Theatre was recently taken between 11 and 12 o'clock at night, the time of departing. The means for accomplishing this result are the invention of Mr. Rockwood. The Rockwood has just introduced. The positive form of the instrument is a tube, which, when fully developed, will be about 3 feet long. The means for accomplishing this result are now manifest. Mr. Rockwood prophesies this new discovery will be the greatest he has accomplished. With the resources of this Art, Mr. Rockwood has made a map which is to be sure that he goes to the theatre with his own girl instead of some other fellow's sweetheart.

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and if it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.—We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Finest Apple country in the World.—President Parker Earle of the Am. Pomo-Horticultural society and, perhaps, the greatest authority on the United States, pronounces the Upper Pecos valley of New-Mexico the finest apple country in the world. In an address delivered at Roswell, New Mexico, on the occasion of the first train over the Pecos Valley railroad to that place, Oct. 15, 1894, he spoke glowingly of the adaptability of the Pecos valley for apple raising, and predicted that in a few years it would be the leading apple market with the finest apples anywhere obtainable. The magnificent crop of apples in the Pecos valley at present exceeds were laden, was proven when the first carload of fruit was shipped and he was confident that its superior indeed its equal, could not be found in any part of the world. He was about to show his faith by his works; he was about to plant an orchard in interest to engage in apple raising in the Pecos valley on a large scale.
