Rossone Gives For Remarkable Yields of Best Variety

The unusual performance of Horace Rossone, a grower near East Lansing, Michigan, widely known in bean circles, is a striking example of the value of growing new bean varieties. Sunflower, the well-known black-eyed type, has been replaced by a new variety of yellow-stemmed beans. Mr. Rossone, according to the Michigan Bureau of Economics, has grown this new variety of beans for the past two years and has seen a marked increase in the yield. He believes that the use of this new variety will increase the yield of beans by 20 to 30 percent.

Gas and Water Tax

Incomes Falling Short

The Michigan Bureau of Economics has reported that incomes from gas and water taxes are falling short of the estimates made. The bureau has estimated that the gas and water tax revenues will be $169,090,000 for the current fiscal year, but the actual collections are expected to be only $153,000,000. The bureau has attributed the shortfall to a number of factors, including a decrease in the number of customers and a decrease in the rate of growth of the population.
