Resolutions of Farm Bureau Indicate Policies For Future

FORTY DELEGATES OUTLINE A LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM AND VOTE THEIR POSITION ON NATIONAL ISSUES

Policy Of Organization Is Shown To Be One Of Bringing Greatest Benefits To Farmer In Times Of Agricultural Depression To Help Market His Farm Products

Central of commodity surplus was the center pole around which all other problems of agriculture were arranged at the annual convention of the American Farm Bureau Federation at Chicago, a week ago. Twenty-eight matters of major importance as affecting agriculture in its varied applications were included in the resolutions acted upon by the Federation delegates.

For the first time, mid-west farmers and the farmers of the cotton belt allied themselves in a clear-cut attempt to achieve a definite accomplishment in the establishment of legislation that would add all farmers in an orderly marketing of their crops and eliminate the big losses too frequently confronting the producer in times of overproduction of any given farm commodity.

Official delegations registering at the convention totaled well over 500, which was an increase over previous conventions. Michigan was one of 50 states to delegate representatives for a vote in the business session, having sent two qualified delegates, L. N. Young, of Ionia, and W. M. McPherson, of Lowell.

These two were accompanied by the Michigan Farm Bureau board of directors and many other members, giving the state fairly strong representation at the convention.

The keynote speaker on the convention program was former Governor of Illinois, whose address was the feature of the closing day of the meeting.

One of his own representatives on a diversified farm in Illinois and a cotton grower in Mississippi, Mr. Lemond told the farmers of the Board of coordinate effort in organizing an economic system in which a farmer referred dairy becomes the hallmark of a

With the advent of hard-surfaced roads, there has been a development of a municipal fire-protection system in the form of fire and police departments, each of which should be equipped and put into operation as soon as possible, with a view to their being as effective as possible in the event of fire.

Many rural communities are relying on the help of the American Farm Bureau Federation's fire protection system, which is being developed. It is imperative that a fire prevention program be established in every community.

In some instances, arrangements have been made to keep the equipment at a central location in the area to be protected; while in other cases it is returned to the central fire-station in the city. A few days ago, the municipal apparatus at the City of Albion, Mich., for use at fires within a radius of ten miles, was made a four-mile run and saved the complete loss of a farm dwelling which could not be rebuilt for $20,000. The apparatus, which was purchased by the farmer, was on the way to the city when it was received.
