FARM BUREAU ACTIVITIES INCREASE AS WINTER APPROACHES

ONCE STARTED, GROUP CONFERENCE DO MORE TO STIR UP ENTHUSIASM IN COUNTIES THAN ANY OTHER MEETING

Many Bureau Follow The County Group Plan With Similar Discussions Among Township Leaders and Directors For Conferences

Following the success of group conferences which were held during September quite a number of county Farm Bureaus have held similar meetings, mostly in advance of the board of directors and township committees, and several others during the month of October in connection with their regular meetings.

At these meetings most of the time is spent discussing things that can be done within the county to promote the interests of the farmer in his farm and home and community.

A very pleasing program was arranged for the members of the Branch, Y. M. C. A., led the community in a song, "Breezes" and "Breezes" were sung. Mr. Wright gave a splendid reading, after which the chairman introduced Mr. Wright, gave a short talk on his work in the county.

At the close of the meeting, the chairman introduced Mr. Wright, gave a short talk on his work in the county.

My Creed Is The Staff On Which I Lean—My Church But A Garb For My Creed

An "Undernourished" Church Is As A Ragged Raiment: Clothing The Body Poorly And Serving But In Its Purpose

By REV. ENRICO H. WALTER

When we look about us at the villages and farms of today, we find a great many improvements in the way of houses, barns, haymows, etc. Yet when we go further and inquire into the condition of the church, we find that it is the same as if it had been built yesterday.

The church is the soul of the community and should be treated as such. It is the center of all activities and should be kept in good repair.

One of the greatest problems facing our churches today is the lack of funds for maintenance. Many churches are in such bad condition that they are unsafe for the people to use.

It is therefore important that we devote some of our financial resources to the improvement of our churches. Let us work together to make our churches the proud centers of our communities.

My Theory of Community Work

By REV. JAMES M. DOUGLAS

It is stated that the problem of community work is the same as the problem of the church. However, the two are quite different.

The church is a place of worship and education, while the community is a place of work and recreation. The church should be a place where people can come to seek spiritual comfort, while the community should be a place where people can come to find practical help.

In conclusion, the church and community work are both important, but they serve different purposes. Let us keep this in mind as we work towards the betterment of our communities.

Apple Crop Smallest Since Season Of '21

Farms not only have to worry about the weather, but also about the number of apples they will produce. This year, the apple crop has been reported to be the smallest since the season of '21.

Several factors could have contributed to this decrease, including a cool and wet spring, which can cause apple blossoms to fall, and a hot and dry summer, which can cause the apples to shrivel up.

We must hope for better weather in the future, so that our farmers can produce a good crop of apples once again.

Farm Program Should Include Tree Raising

It is suggested that the farm program should include tree raising. This would help to increase the food supply and provide a new source of income for the farmers.

In addition, tree planting would also help to improve the environment and the quality of life in the community.
An analysis of crop failures and their impact in the early 1920s suggests that overproduction, poor distribution, and lack of timely, accurate market information contributed to a drop in crop prices.

The cotton crop, for example, was expected to be a bumper crop that year; however, the market failed to anticipate the increase in supply and prices dropped sharply. This led to widespread crop failures, especially in the South where farmers were already struggling with the effects of the Great Depression. The situation was further exacerbated by the lack of credit for farmers to purchase necessary inputs and the difficulty of accessing market information.

In addition to crop failures, livestock prices also declined sharply. This was due in part to overproduction, especially in the case of meat animals. The sudden drop in demand for meat products led to a glut in the market, which further depressed prices. This, in turn, led to widespread livestock losses, especially among farmers who were already struggling.

The consequences of these failures were severe. Many farmers were forced to sell their livestock and crops below cost to meet their expenses. In some cases, this led to bankruptcy and the loss of their land. The overall impact of these failures was a significant decline in agricultural output and a sharp increase in poverty among farmers.

The lesson to be learned from this is the importance of market research and timely, accurate information. Farmers need to be aware of market trends and be able to adjust their production accordingly. This is especially important in times of economic uncertainty, when prices are volatile and can change rapidly.
