RING FINGER AND HEART

The Man Behind the Plow

By Helen R. Kesser

They say about the horses of the man behind the plow that they are gentle, sensible, and willing to do their work. They are his partners in labor, always ready to help him with the tasks of the farm. And in this way they become a part of the family, sharing in the daily life of the homestead.

Women and the Farm Bureau

By Mrs. Edith Wazer

Many women in our community are members of the Farm Bureau because it is a place where they can find support and guidance in their farming endeavors. It offers them a chance to learn about new technologies and practices, and it provides a platform for them to be heard in the decision-making process of their communities.

Our Kitchen Laboratory

To wash blander than feathers, Cape Poults vigorously rub with sack-it-wet, wash water and soap. If a brush is used, stroke in the same direction. Rinse well, make sure there is no soap left. When dry, hang on wire to wind, or hang in dry place. Then, put a few inches of hot water in the sink to rinse them. To wash the parts that will be put in the oven, use a soft brush and soap. Rinse well.

Ring Finger and Other Nitions Incredibly Old

Common beliefs about the ring finger and other parts of the body have been around for centuries. They are often based on superstition and folklore, and they may not have any scientific basis.

Rings of Yesteryear

Although many people still wear rings as a symbol of love and commitment, they were not always associated with these meanings. In ancient Rome, for example, rings were used to indicate marriage status and social rank.
Boost Gold Production, Hold Diamonds Back

Cape Town, S. Africa.—While the world is generally in favor of gold mining, as is evidenced by the rising stock of Rand shares, a number of Rand Miners' Alliance from the Witwatersrand have been working in the Kimberley diamond field near the same time. This is not the first time that Rand Miners have been working in the same area.

The market at one time, some of the Rand miners believed that the production of gold in the Kimberley diamond field was going to be increased, but now it is clear that the Kimberley diamond field is an area that is not suitable for gold mining.

The World of Diamonds

Diamonds are very valuable, and the Rand Miners believe that they can continue to produce diamonds in the Kimberley diamond field. The Rand Miners believe that the diamond field is a valuable resource, and they want to ensure that it is produced sustainably.

The Rand Miners have been working in the same area since the early 1900s, and they believe that they have the expertise to continue to produce diamonds in a sustainable way.
