Insurance Protection

About four-fifths of the farmers in the United States have their buildings and other property insured against fire, but less than one-half have any life insurance. More than two-thirds have windstorm insurance, but the majority of farmers still lack adequate automobile insurance protection, according to V. N. Valgren, economist for the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Mr. Valgren added that to some extent the farmer's lack of insurance is due to a disregard to the need for protection. To a much larger extent it is due to his inability to make his income buy the forms of protection he needs.

On the other hand, serious losses cripple the individual upon whom they fall and therefore call for insurance protection. An ounce of prevention is still worth more than a pound of cure, The nearest one can get to adequate protection is far better than having none.

English in 850 Words

A condensed English vocabulary of 850 key words has been constructed by a member of England's Cambridge University staff.

It is said to be so simple that an intelligent native of another country can memorize enough words in a week to read it, and can write it in a month. The 850 words, all English, are adequate for all ordinary punposes.

In Shakespeare's time English was the least important of any European language. Now it is the world's most important language. More than 500,000,000 persons speak English. Secret of the new basic English is the careful selection of a few words that will give much service. Hundreds of verbs are replaced by 18 "operator" verbs, such as go, come, get, give, let, make, do, see. To these are added such directions as in, out, up, and the like. Go in is used for enter; go up for ascend or climb, etc.

Professor Wentworth of Cornell compares a standard English sentence with the basic English version, as: He was as disturbed as if he had seen an omen or spirit from the lower regions.

In basic English it is: He was as troubled as if he had seen some unnatural sign or shade from the land of the dead.

BROWN SPOT IN SPUDS BRINGS A SPECIAL RULING

State Acts to Make Salable Potatoes In Certain

Areas. Lansing-Through co-operative arrangement between Michigan potato growers, potato shippers and the State Department of Agriculture a special regulation affecting the sale of Michigan grown spuds is being put into effect as an emergency measure to protect many producers and shippers and to protect the buying public. Herbert E. Powell, Commissioner of Agriculure, announced the new rule this week as a move to eliminate promscuous retailing of considerable quantities of potatoes of this season's crop, from certain sections of the state, which are affected with an internal brown spot, called "Heat Necrosis.'

Women's Part At Farm Bureau Annual

By MRS. EDITH M. WAGAR

What will there be of special interest to women of the Farm Bureau at the coming annual meeting at State College, Thursday and Friday, Nov. 12 and 13?

Wednesday evening, Nov. 11, Farm Bureau members and State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance agents and friends are invited to attend a program at the Little Theatre in the Home Economics building, on the campus.

State Farm Bureau headquarters employes will present a play, under direction of Professor King and Mr. Miller of the College dramatics dep't. A Michigan Farm Bureau motion picture will be shown.

Thursday morning the annual Home and Community breakfast will be held in the club room of the Union Building at 7:45 Eastern tme. Farm Bureau women are invited. After the program, a tour will be made to the Farm Bureau headquarters on No. Cedar Street, after which all will be taken to the general meeting in the ballroom of Demonstration Hall, on the campus. Thursday evening the annual Farm Bureau will be held at the Hotel Olds, Lansing.

The Farm Bureau needs women at all of its business sessions. The present farm problem is one that requires the keenest minds, the deepest thought, the broadest views, the most sympathetic understanding and the most loyal support of both men and women.

There are many things we do not understand, so let's attend this annual meeting with the one purpose of learning all that can be learned; there are many things that we want different, so let's go there and do our part in making them so. Let's attend with the idea of strengthening co-operative effort.

Cabbage Is Tasty, Healthful

One way in which housewives can help their families to better health is to use plenty of cabbage in the winter meals.

"Cabbage is rich in vitamin C and n minerals, and it also furnishes the bulk which is so necessary in order to keep the body functioning properly," according to Mrs. Luella Mortenson of the home economics extension staff at the University of Wisconsin. "Of course, some of these materials are lost in cooking, even with the utmost care, so that it really is more advantageous to serve cabbage raw. There is almost no end to the possibilities of using cabbage in salads. It combines well with other foods, and because it is cheap, it makes excellent filler to use with the more expensive fruits and vegetables," Mrs. Mortenson writes.

To Cook Properly

This is the way she recommends ooking cabbage in order to avoid an undesirable odor in the house and prevent the gas on the stomach which often results from improperly cooked cabbage

"Drop the sliced or shredded cabfully so as to have one eye to a hill age," she says, "into enough boiling and plant after all danger of frost is salted water (using 1½ teaspoons salt to every quart of water) to cover it.
