Experience is a Costly Teacher

Q It's expensive when a farmer sees a promising stand of alfalfa or clover winter-killed,—or ruined by disease in summer.

Q He loses his crop, his seed, his labor and land investment and is set back a year's time in his operations. The failure is a mystery.

Q Why such losses? Because alfalfa and clover seeds from southern states or South America LOOK like Michigan seeds, but our winters and diseases kill them. Make SURE your seed is good.

Q Farm Bureau GUARANTEES northern grown, winter hardy alfalfa and clover seeds; they are genuine, heavy yielding varieties,—free from weeds and crop mixtures. Thesinpurity, quality and germination are top notch.

Q Michigan's co-op men have booked hundreds of thousands of pounds of Farm Bureau's dependable alfalfa and clover seeds for 1934. They produce the best stands and the high yields.
