FARM BUREAU
To Agriculture, Labor, and Industry
Resolution Adopted at New Orleans Convention
December 1939

DEMONSTRATION BAND
We are under the leadership of our women's clubs, and we are ready to roll. We have been in action since the start of the season, and we are ready to go. We are under the leadership of our women's clubs, and we are ready to roll. We have been in action since the start of the season, and we are ready to go.
Letters to the Editor

State Farm Mutual Insurance Co.

You Can Always TELEPHONE

Snow may block the highways... the thermometer may read zero... or rain may be flooding the roads and be freezing to make travel perilous.

But You Can Always Telephone!

It is comforting to know, too, that regardless of weather or time of day or night, the doctor, veterinarian and neighbors are as close as your telephone.

Aside from its value in social and business activities, the farm telephone offers priceless protection.
Labor, Industry, and Agriculture Point the Road to Better Times

National Spokesmen at American Farm Bureau Meeting Say Demands of Other Groups Block Way to Prosperity

No Group Can Prosper Long at the Expense of the Others

EVERYONE feels that he is entitled to a large share of the national income. Most of us feel that labor, industry, transportation, mining, real estate, etc., have made their gains at the expense of each other. The laborer has come to feel that he is not getting his full share. Industry has come to feel that it has had a hard time and cannot get any more accordingly for its efforts than we do. It depends upon the way in which the American farmer follows his blessings and turns out a fat cat to his beneficiaries. We have troubles of one kind or another.

To its annual convention at New Orleans in December, the American Farm Bureau invited four nationally known business men to address the meeting, and public officials to tell what should be done to secure a national prosperity.

The four weeks spent in the South were the most interesting.

Agriculture called for machinery to insure high yields in the domestic market and was critical of Labor's wage and hour programs. Labor retorted that high wages made the farm market; that prices bring great corporations against both Agriculture and Labor. Public officials said high farm prices and high wages can live together, but not prosperity in one field and poverty in the other.

Future of Agriculture

The proverb goes, "When the farmer is not getting his full share, he is not getting any share at all." This is not the case in the history of the world. Even in the days when labor was cheap, because he is a valuable commodity, and not because of any other need, we have to face the fact that there are certain industries that are not able to pay a living wage to the laborer. The laborer has to rely on the market for his livelihood.

The laborer has come to feel that he is not getting his full share. Industry has come to feel that it has had a hard time and cannot get any more accordingly for its efforts than we do. It depends upon the way in which the American farmer follows his blessings and turns out a fat cat to his beneficiaries. We have troubles of one kind or another.

To its annual convention at New Orleans in December, the American Farm Bureau invited four nationally known business men to address the meeting, and public officials to tell what should be done to secure a national prosperity.

The four weeks spent in the South were the most interesting.

Agriculture called for machinery to insure high yields in the domestic market and was critical of Labor's wage and hour programs. Labor retorted that high wages made the farm market; that prices bring great corporations against both Agriculture and Labor. Public officials said high farm prices and high wages can live together, but not prosperity in one field and poverty in the other.

Future of Agriculture

The proverb goes, "When the farmer is not getting his full share, he is not getting any share at all." This is not the case in the history of the world. Even in the days when labor was cheap, because he is a valuable commodity, and not because of any other need, we have to face the fact that there are certain industries that are not able to pay a living wage to the laborer. The laborer has to rely on the market for his livelihood.

The laborer has come to feel that he is not getting his full share. Industry has come to feel that it has had a hard time and cannot get any more accordingly for its efforts than we do. It depends upon the way in which the American farmer follows his blessings and turns out a fat cat to his beneficiaries. We have troubles of one kind or another.
The State Farm Bureau and the Commodity Exchanges

Questions and Answers for Jan. Community Meetings

By J. E. Vaden
Director of Membership Relations

(Continued from November Edition)

The Farm Bureau is an organization which has as its fundamental goal the well-being of all farmers, and it is not necessary for all farmers to be members of the Farm Bureau. The Farm Bureau has a very important role in the national economy and in the well-being of all Americans. Its primary goal is to improve the economic conditions of farmers, and it works to ensure that farmers have access to adequate credit, markets, and government programs. The Farm Bureau also works to promote the principles of fair play in the marketplace and to support policies that benefit farmers. It is the organization that represents the interests of farmers at both the state and national levels. The Farm Bureau is an effective voice for farmers and works to ensure that their concerns are heard by government officials and other decision-makers. It is an organization that is dedicated to the well-being of farmers and is committed to ensuring that farmers have the resources and opportunities they need to succeed. The Farm Bureau is an organization that is devoted to the well-being of farmers and is committed to ensuring that farmers have the resources and opportunities they need to succeed.
Labor, Industry and Agriculture Point the Road to Better Times

Business on Labor Organization Proposes. I feel that the time has arrived for serious consideration of the union movement in business. I am convinced that the labor movement is here to stay, and that the only way it can help the country is to become an industry of its own. I think we should see the labor movement as a business, and not as a political or social movement.

The time has come to organize in business on a larger scale. The labor movement should be taken seriously by those who are in charge of the economy. It is essential that we recognize the importance of labor in the economy, and that we work to ensure that labor is treated fairly and justly.

I hope that this movement will continue to grow, and that we will see a more just and equitable economy. The labor movement has the potential to create a better future for all of us. Let us work together to ensure that this happens.