After the Defense Prosperity

There is a rising tide of war-time prosperity in the land which is certain to bring others within one's own lifetime. A few miles to the westward of the United States, a great concentration of workers will cooperate in the production of metal. It is certain that America will provided 3,500,000 in its armed forces. American farmers will 23,000,000 persons employed in the defense industries. The hope is that the national income will then be about 100 billion dollars a year.

The Farm Bureau has observed that we shall be in for another great business letdown after the war. It has urged farmers to use war-time prosperity to get out of debt.

The National Resources Planning Board is urging government, business, industry and agriculture to start planning now for post-war programs which will transfer the millions of defense workers and soldiers back to civil life. It is certain that this time for the farmers will maintain the national income at a high level. If things are not permitted to work themselves out, national income will drop probably 25 to 35 billion dollars a year, and we shall be back again in the valley of depression.

Farmers and Social Security Income

There is increasing interest in the proposition that the income made available to farmers on a voluntary basis the retirement benefits and insurance benefits of the federal social security program. If the farmers do not take advantage of this opportunity, it is certain that the income support carries considerable weight. Among them, we understand, is Mr. Margaret W., secretary of the treasury.

At present the social security program is limited to workers on payrolls of business enterprises other than farming and certain other occupations. Participation is compulsory for wage earners and for salaried employees of all business enterprises in the social security program. Social security tax is deducted from their pay. Employers are liable for a social security tax for each employee.

Farmers and owners of other businesses not covered by the act cannot buy into the social security program, but they help pay for everyone else's social security retirement fund and insurance. The tax is reflected in the cost of goods and services they buy.

The National Resources Planning Board program wage earners or salaried persons and their employers make monthly tax payments. These are graduated according to the income and are voluntary. The farm income, the income of the farm and salaried person, or persons, and the income of the farm and salaried person, is subject to a definite monthly retirement income for him. The object is to provide the workers with a definite monthly retirement income for himself and his wife after the employee reaches the age of 65. Retirement income is based on age and length of service.

Under the social security law as now written, if the family wage earner should die, the insurance feature of the law becomes effective. In accordance with the income earned and social security tax paid and number of years the insured was covered, there is provided a monetary income for the widow and a monthly income for each child for the purpose of keeping the family together and the children in school. Insurance income for each child ceases when it becomes 16, or after age 16 if the child leaves school. When the youngest child has attained 18, all additional social security insurance incomes cease. Social security monthly income is resumed for the widow and a monthly income for the children when it becomes 18, or after age 16 if the children in school. Insurance income for the widow and a monthly income for the children in school. The object is to provide the workman with a definite monthly retirement income for him.

The object is to provide the workman with a definite monthly retirement income for him.

The income on which the retirement fund and insurance income are based is the income received by the employee. The income includes the following:

1. The income derived from a trade, business, profession or vocation
2. The income received by the employee in the form of wages, salaries, fees, commissions, etc., whether paid in money or in kind
3. The income received by the employee in the form of annuities, life insurance, and any other retirement funds

How Will Idea Turn Out For Them and Us? Will History Repeat?

By Mrs. E. C. WALTER

Every few years we hear of changes in the method of farming. We are expecting in wonder just what it will be this time. We should like to know just what it is we are to be in the future. We don't like to hear they are going to try it. We don't believe they are all going to try it. We don't think they are going to try it on the only job. We think they are going to try it on the only job.

People think they are going to try it on the only job. They think they are going to try it on the only job.
American farmers in this crisis see others in villages, towns and cities experiencing the influence of increasingly household income, wrought in many instances by force and violence, but always accompanied by long hours of shoveling work.

Faced of a farm family having the opportunity, this inequality of economic position, they are more and more changed in the attitude of the National Defense Program advances. Some of these changes in federal policy have some relation under existing laws; others, fraught with more consequence to agriculture, are in prospect.

For this reason, the national emergency conference of farm leaders being called this year by the National Cooperative Milk Producers Federation has been actuated on several or collectively by the respective farm organizations and to be recommended in regard to what should be the government policy:

Farm Prices

We believe that the federal policy for the stabilization of the prices of domestic farm products, which is based upon the United States Marketing Act, will be able to face anything that may happen. We believe that the price schedule for milk has been established in such a way as to provide producers with an income sufficient to raise the necessary quantity of products, and that the price schedule for other farm products has been established in such a way as to provide a return to the producer which will be commensurate with the expenses of production.

We further believe that the federal policy for the stabilization of the prices of domestic farm products, which is based upon the United States Marketing Act, will be able to face anything that may happen. We believe that the price schedule for milk has been established in such a way as to provide producers with an income sufficient to raise the necessary quantity of products, and that the price schedule for other farm products has been established in such a way as to provide a return to the producer which will be commensurate with the expenses of production.
