Dear Community Farm Bureau Member:

By the time you receive this paper, we hope that all of the Community Farm Bureau services will have claimed their new state of officers. This probably means that some of you will have new responsibilities. We realize that this means that we can be a new job because we often do not know what our responsibilities are.

In this article each month you will look for duties of some of the officers that we have in Farm Bureau that are not usual. By this means, each officer such as Chairman, Secretary, etc., can be assigned one of these duties. If the group has a planning committee, it may not be necessary, but the groups should have some idea of what is being done. This will be done by assigning officers of twenty minutes before the meeting.

I give you an idea that good organization can come about by the planning committee. The planning committee should look at the planner who has already made the planner. Make your plans and write your plans. Plan your meeting, plan your program.

I want to see that your group, at the least, has the opportunity of doing or planning something that will be of interest to your group.

This is the House that Farm Bureau Built

Business Services Were Developed

DONALD E. KIRBY
Coordinator of Research and Education, MFB

The Farm Bureau House could not be complete without a considerable amount of building services. The very term "farm" means business in many ways. Farmers, like manufacturers, produce goods for public consumption, and must market these goods. In this building there are offices where work could be done in the matter of marketing the products of the land. There were obstacles to be overcome in the form of resistance by groups that controlled much of the marketing activities. The variety of Michigan farmers production gave rise to the tendency to up little, independent farmer groups around commodities—somewhat walled off from the main structure. Bringing all this varied production and the related problems under one roof with a strong foundation be born has been one of the tasks in planning the House of Farm Bureau.

Farmers were quick to see the possible opportuni ties for organizing their marketing programs to better advantage. Some independent monoplies took large amalgams. The consumer paid far more than what the farmer was getting. And the farmer's price was too low.

Farmers sought means of controlling their products in sufficient volume to improve the farmer's price. They wanted to avoid "dumping" commodities on the market. The transition from the Ele

Problems in the Ownership of Mineral Rights

Community Farm Bureau Discussion Topic for October

Background Material for Program in October by our 1475 Community Farm Bureau Discussion Groups

Coordinator of Education and Research

Most every ambitious person seeks to own a parcel of property on which to build a house. The values behind this desire are by no means uncommon, and the idea of ownership have some interesting angles, if you analyze them.

In ownership there is pride—the pride of accomplishment that has earned you for the property. There is freedom to do with the things that fancy and opportunity may dictate.

There is social prestige in being a landowner. There is a thought of some security, for a home, a comfort, a refuge in the days of disaster, a sort of emergency funds.

Because of those desired values, we like to think of ownership without the interference of claims by others on what we consider ours. In addition, we are concerned if there is some question of true or clear title, or some legal claim to part of the rights on the property.

Actually the old idea of ownership is a person holding full and clear title to a piece of land, he owned that spot from the bowels of the earth clear up to the horizon of the heavens, and if there is a combination of title, if the ownership of surface rights are in the hands of one party and the rights to minerals under the surface are in the hands of another party, confusion of ownership is not.

Position in the better and sale of mineral properties governed by those values of value, location, use and value of land and may legally be divided into strips, where the parties involved in the transaction agree to buy and sell at the same time. The strip may be purchased by a party, while the rights in minerals (including oil and gas beneath the land) may be retained by the parcels involved in the time of the party. The strip may be sold to the county and local governments for the sale of water, or to the State for the sale of mineral rights.

Michigan Law Maxes Right, History, Land of our story. It takes no time to see why this is so. There are two kinds of farms in the county of Ottawa, and a part of Lenawee county introduced a bill at the recent legislature to the effect that the State have the right to purchase surface rights in the hands of one party and the rights to minerals under the surface are in the hands of another party, confusion of ownership is not an issue.

Legislative varieties bills were introduced in the Senate and House bearing this matter in any way or another. None of these bills was passed. None of these bills were passed. Following this at the time of the sale of the property.
