The 672 delegates to the 37th annual meeting of the Michigan Farm Bureau met in East Lansing November 8 and 9, determined the policies for the coming year, and elected directors.

The deliberations of the convention had their origin and were given direction long before President Hodg nodded the gavel for opening the meeting on the morning of November 8. In fact, this assembly of delegates chosen by the respective County Farm Bureaus under the leadership of their officers, legislative and resolutions committees, discussion leaders, and 1,500 Minutemen marks the culmination of the entire year's activities.

The program laid out was the consolidation of the resolutions previously adopted by the 66 County Farm Bureau annual meetings. The County Farm Bureau expressions, in turn, resulted from the discussions and activities of the 1,580 Community Farm Bureaus in their meetings held throughout the year.

These were developed in the Community Farm Bureau under the leadership of their officers, legislative and resolutions committees, discussion leaders, and 1,500 Minutemen.

Thus, the annual meeting of the Michigan Farm Bureau serves as the true barometer of the viewpoints and interests of our 67,154 farm family members.

This annual assembly constitutes a most representative and effective forum for the clarification, codification, and implementation of former opinion. It has been largely due to this fact that the Michigan Farm Bureau has endured through all the changes and problems for well over a third of a century.

The bedrock source of all this organization activity, county, state, and national, lies in the interest and understanding of the Farm Bureau members themselves. This is manifested in the work of several local farm women and women who each year enlist as membership teams to interest their neighbors in joining the Farm Bureau and in promoting its program.

It is in the initiative and voluntary action on the part of the individual members that the basic strength of the Farm Bureau is generated. Through the Farm Bureau programs each farm family is provided with the opportunity to function in making its influence effective in shaping and activating policies that vitally concern the welfare and progress of farm people.

The growing realization of this opportunity was demonstrated last month by the large proportion of the delegate body that took an active and serious part in the policy discussions.

It was encouraging to note the increased use of the Farm Bureau to deal with local projects in the communities and counties. President Charles Shuman of the American Farm Bureau commented, in turn, that the Farm Bureau to deal with local projects in the communities and counties.

The director re-elected President Ward G. Hodge and Vice-President Blaise Kaik for their third terms. J. Young was re-appointed as executive secretary, treasurer, and general manager.

At the 37th annual meeting, eight of a board of directors were elected for two year terms:

- Blaise Kaik, Quincy
- Elouise R. Smith, Caledonia
- Ward G. Hodge, Rossford
- Kenneth O. Johnson, Freeland
- Albert A. Brindley, West Branch
- Robert J. Sipes, Saginaw
- Robert W. Stone, Flint
- Mr. Sager of the Upper Peninsula was elected for one year so that in fall of 1957 all directors from odd-numbered districts will be elected for two years.

School Bus

The passengers who board my bus are of varying ages. They are related to a four-year-old on the morning round. Adored and adored by the three remaining. The evening round is my turn. The younger variety. They shout at the start. "Please wait. Terrible noise. Not true, no."

Reason: The particular love that lives on every street.

They scream the trip they take, they shout and play, they ride, they move, they move, they move. The love that cooled and collected such a was, advancing to speed, then another stop, another long-distance trip.

But even the last to enter knows that boys and girls still go to the yellow bus.

The day goes by, and school again we will fill the bus.
The whole dimple-dirty-disked pack of us.

With easy breath, with laughter, with happiness. The gesture which ride to infect each other the homework round. The party of pilots, who they are, who they are, where they are, are not known by the year. As well known as invisible voices they speed the afternoon along.

And then, it's gone, by and day and chance, with schoolings safely wrinkled, with struck lines,

With many a showed Perifound wood, with wild harrisons, fun.

Nothing, is a better day.

And as I witness their return in guidance I won't, I can't, how I shall find. What must have numbers not.

Yet in this was a normal day. A hundred each wait for every child in the room, and someone his fun. But children are resilient and they will survive, the signs of the public interest, morning across, in every day begins with Mother's love again. That sweet and tender love, that must keep them clean and stick and classic, R. B. Clark 155 North Graham Street Jackson, Michigan.

Farm Bureau's Resolutions on State Affairs

They Outline the Program of Work

We present the resolutions on state affairs adopted at the 37th annual meeting of the Michigan Farm Bureau at East Lansing, Nov. 8-9, 1956. These resolutions are Farm Bureau policy and program.

Resolutions were adopted also on national and international affairs. These become recommendations to the American Farm Bureau resolutions committee and to the voting delegates representing Michigan at the national convention to be held in St. Louis Dec. 8-12.

The resolutions approved by the voting delegates at the AFBF convention become Michigan Farm Bureau's policy on national and international matters.

It is expected that the text of the national resolutions will be printed in the January edition of the National Agriculture News.

Another section of the Michigan resolutions is "Our Farm Bureau." It will be printed in a later edition.

MICHIGAN RESOLUTIONS ON STATE AFFAIRS

Michigan State University grows in research and extent. There is increasing awareness of its value, we believe that it is a fundamental responsibility of all citizens of the state to support Michigan State University.

Recently representatives of many farm groups have written the Secretary of State of Michigan expressing dissatisfaction with the procedures of the state university. We urge the Michigan legislature to consider these recommendations and try to satisfy their demands.

In order to ensure that the educational interests of the state are satisfied, the legislature should be given the power to appropriate funds for the university and colleges of the state. It is essential that the state provide a sufficient amount of money to meet the needs of the university.

The university is the keystone of the educational structure of the state. It is the source of knowledge and the source of scientific information. It is the source of knowledge and the source of scientific information.

GUARD YOURSELF from possible road-accident errors. Some drivers for outsiders just don't understand when the edge of the highway is so near that an outside vehicle can get into trouble. Trouble may develop at any point where there is a break in this line of thought. Especially dangerous gaps are the ones in front of station-vehicles, vegetable stands, and the like. These drivers锟絝unicipal, or in other parking or driving, must see especially dangerous gaps which are made blind by parked trucks.

The only safe assumption is that a vehicle or tractor coming into the street from behind will not veer to the right or turn at an angle. Ideally the vehicle or tractor may turn left in front of you.

One of the first courses that anyone must learn is how to make an emergency stop. Professional drivers don't have a car or vehicle stopped, but the inexperienced driver must learn this right now.

Provision made to cover the cost of medical expenses and hospitalization, surgical and funeral expenses.

Strength for the future is needed. For instance, the number of farm families at the time it was needed in the national economy. Each family, whether it be a part of the national economy, is an essential part of the family's economy.

When Farm Bureau began to operate with the idea of the farm family, the state was paid for the first time. They got their savings on materials, supplies, and machinery. The job still lies ahead. Great Savings were realized for the state as a whole. They got their savings on materials, supplies, and machinery.

One form of combining effort — and other people had become organized, so to speak. An organization of the Soil Bank, as proposed by the farmer, has been established in 1922. It operates with the idea of the farm family, and was paid for the first time.

A new action was necessary. Other people had become organized, to the hilt. It was the time to act. They gathered 100,000 signatures on the petitions for a farm family.

If you don't have a net worth of millions, you are better off in the first place. If you are not, you have no money in dues. They took office and went to work for a fair brand of representation for our state. In 1933 the State sought to improve markets for their products, to the hilt. The job still lies ahead.

One of our goals is to get more Federal, state, and local governments to work together in the interest of the public.
