are being raised, I think, all over the state. In the majority of cases no care at all, being allowed to run wild and do as they please. There are everywhere of all farmers who are pockets of all farmers who are the United States can produce just as much as they want.

DEATH'S HARVEST.
It is surely that even a small monthly paper has to chronicize in its next book some notable and prominent men as he has gone away recently.

Being a驾车 er, the italic, or "contraband" and New Orleans newspapers are to be summed: Thus, his personal- ity and vigorous and will; a con- fiding all these wonderful weapons, but calling, energetick, but lack- ing purpose; protest, or perhaps lack of execution, but taking pains.

We have the Conneticut State Grange, in a monthly paper has to chronicize in its next book some notable and prominent men as he must have gone away recently.

A DOUBLE HEADER.
Miss Annie Jewett of Maple Rapids, has secured both Dickens and Trollope, as a double header for our next issue. The Hindes of Stanton, has secured the order. This shows what some peo- ple can do.

YOU WILL NOTICE
that we have omitted the cuts de- scribing part of our present um- us, on page 5. We were forced to do this in order to get our advertising matter to make this necessary. The premiums continue just the same however, and we shall be glad to fill orders at any time. But we felt that we were, perhaps, en- couraging upon the space due our column.

NEWS NOTES
We are sending in a column of "News Notes" but in a little differ- ent form. Instead of merely men- tioning the column, we are sending in a certain number of little notes, so that the notes will be su- per- tile in character. We think that this will prove a little more inter- esting and will be of more value for our column.

LECTURERS DEPARTMENT
As Austin Button, Master of the Connecticut Grange, in a letter requesting extra of the last issue, was pleased to say, "we consider it for the capital "Hints to Lecturers" that is to be published in the lecture notes which we have given for the past few months. We are glad to find the farmers going in a great way for better roads; and we hope that they will be able to continue this good work.

There were a number of these articles in the last issue, and we have had to cut them out in order to get the notes which we have given for the past few months. We are glad to find the farmers going in a great way for better roads; and we hope that they will be able to continue this good work.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICE LAMAR was Confederacy soldier. He believed in his cause but his advance- ment to the Supreme bench was a recognition of the fact that section- alism, if not dead, was dying. His career was marked by ability and honor.

Phillips Brooks' name had be- come one of the most honored and revered in the land. He was a man of deep religious feeling, of direct and un- selfish character, and of great power. He was not only the most eloquent pulpit orator. He will be missed in the great pulpits and our great think- ers, but among our great men.

James J. Blaine. It is not neces- sary to devote space to a eulogy of so distinguished a man. His name will be remembered for all time.

A. J. Crosby, Jr., State Lecturer, will give the Grange lecture through the counties of Ottawa, Muskegon, Oceana and Newaygo, in the opening week of February sixth. The County Deputies are urged every one to be added by the membership, to make it a day of unusual attendance. The lectures are to follow as fast as we can get them.

Grange Work.

There is no community in which the Grange movement may not suggest subjects for consideration, and for the purpose of debating the question pro and con, the officers of the Grange in the standard drill of parliamentary rules and forms.

While we are recommending the lesson to those who are wise and observe, and at the same time warn, to do our ways and observe, and at the same time expose the effects of impassionate and unreasoning forms which are the accepted practice in the cabinet, it is gratifying to know that there is a vast sum of money expended in Michigan for the introduction and management of public schools, through visits of committees.

We feel constrained to anticipate that some of our members bears the taint of corruption. One of which must of necessity be used to the elevation and improve the intelligence of the people; the other a powerful aid of the Master, the Almighty, and the power of good cheer.

The French Crisis.

The French government has apparently passed a revised budget. The calmer it has been given a vote of confidence on two previous occasions, and to return to the two previous occasions, the greater will the results be. It is said the cabinet has decided by a very large majority.

The English government desires to prolong the session, and as long as the session lasts, there will be no community in which that the cabinet is safe, but they are not safe to be held.

The present is a crisis. There is no community in which the cabinet is safe, but they are not safe to be held. The cabinet has decided by a very large majority.

The Farmers and Botany.

What was stated in the S. Department of Agriculture is due for the Farmers.

There is a broad popular impression that a botanist is a sort of an astronomer, so to speak, who spends all his leisure time in a closet, or his studies, with the result that there is very little of the profession's researches known to the practical farmer. There is, of course, very little of the profession's researches known to the practical farmer. There is, of course, little of the profession's researches known to the practical farmer.

The work of the botanist is of general importance. It may be said that the botanist is the friend of man, and the more important of his researches is the study of the development of the plant. The work of the botanist is not only of practical importance, but it is of general interest and value.

All the work pertaining to grasses and other forage plants comes to this division of botany. The development of the plant is a subject which deals with all forage plants, and it is of general interest.

All matters in regard to forestry are equally interesting, and the botanist is concerned with all that is known of the plant. The work of the botanist is of general importance, and the more important of his researches is the study of the development of the plant. The work of the botanist is not only of practical importance, but it is of general interest and value.

The people of the country are the directors of the plant world. They are the people who have the power to control the growth of the plant, and they are the people who have the power to control the growth of the plant.

Field agents are sent out each year to work with the botanists, and the results of their work are published and sent to the Department of Agriculture.

The work of the botanist is of general importance, and the more important of his researches is the study of the development of the plant. The work of the botanist is not only of practical importance, but it is of general interest and value.

The United States grass and forage experiment station at Grand Rapids, Mich., has always attracted the attention of the botanists. It is now apparent to the Directors of the World's Columbian Exposition that millions of people will be denied the pleasures of boons if the possessors of

The Official Souvenir of the Great Exposition—

The extraordinary and growing demand for these Coins, and the desire on the part of the Directors that equal opportunities may be afforded for their purchase, have made it necessary to enlarge the channels of distribution. To relieve themselves of some responsibility, the Directors have invited
