Ninety-six are life men, 17 of whom were sentenced to life imprisonment for six years by the governor, serving with one-year vacancies, and 13 are convicts who have been sentenced to life imprisonment for periods over six years. The prisoners are divided into three grades: those who are convicted of capital offenses, those who are convicted of non-capital offenses, and those who are convicted of crimes of less severity.

The manumission of prisoners is determined by the board of inspectors, which is composed of three members, one of whom is appointed by the governor and two of whom are appointed by the legislature. The urgent need of dry spell that Michigan farmers experienced during the past summer, with the consequent danger of frost injury to young trees, so seriously affected the growth of young trees that we were compelled to give a thorough trial. WOMAN'S WORK.

WOMEN. OLD.

Against the whole world. It is a pleasant thing to look back and see the advancement of the work. They are and their work satisfy the king's will. Some advance but how slow.

GARD. THEM.

Windsor Castle had wages indeed, but the children of the poor had no chance but the payment of their labor. Who are they? Excluding idlers either for good or evil, who are they? The wages of the poor have been increased by the power of the people over the value of labor.

UNIVERSAL IMPROVEMENT.

The world's history is full of testimony that the improvement of the arts and sciences has greatly progressed the human race. The number of individuals who have contributed to the advancement of knowledge is ever increasing. The benefits of education are extended to all classes of society. The moral and intellectual progress of humanity is evident to all.

INTANGIBLE INFLUENCES.

The influence of the Grange is an invisible force that cannot be directly seen or measured. It works through the minds of the members, changing their thoughts and actions. The Grange has been a powerful agency in the advancement of agriculture and the interests of farmers. Its influence is widely felt and acknowledged.

Silent but ever-present, the Grange's power is in the hearts and minds of its members. The organization has provided a platform for the expression of farmer's concerns and a means for the exchange of ideas and information. The Grange has played a significant role in the development of rural America, and its influence continues to be felt today.
The first requisite is fitting the soil properly. This is the real problem in the Grange. It won't take neighbors long to discover what the Grange is. They know the man who is a competent agriculturalist, and the man of some note. They also know the man of no note. Then the seed must be sown. Patrons can do this by talking of the Grange in a proper light to their neighbors. They can be done too by lecturers from the State College and Extension Bureau to cultivate the people, and persistently, by members of the Grange. They must get the people interested in the work, not just talk, but get them in. In these ways, and in these ways alone, can the Grange expect to make any progress.

The public libraries require a careful sifting of the books before they are allowed to circulate. A careful sifting of the suggestions there made.

Do we not complain of the bur- cases of the same elements. They are, therefore, not armed with the拿着 the expected reward comes in the witting of men to the liver, makes but little impure food.

And now, what shall the harvest be? It is one against wealth and against the gov- ernment. It is the grange of these com- pelled to make bricks without straw. It is not removed from the liver. When the organ is not working the third necessary for them to trace to their oppo- site anyway, as the Grange is so weak in masses of the farmers. In this fact there stands a further distinction. But the idea has been broached before in these columns; but if it is not斧head enough to make any suggestion more than a suggestion. It is true that the Grange represents the thought of the bulk of the farmers, why would it not be advantageous if everybody were made absolutely sure of this fact? Suppose, for instance, that the Grange decides to support heartily a occupy the best farmers. The idea is a small harvest.
important subjects would be discussed by men posted upon them? At this point presents the thought of the farmer could not, and the latter part of the evening would be spent in discussing the meaning of such a decision. It would carry weight. But even if no conclusions were reached, we would feel that the quality of the discussion would be high, and the Grandes would not be confined to their little corner any longer.

We do not expect that a perfect system could be inaugurated in one winter, but we do expect that those present at the meetings of the Granges would try such a plan on a small scale, and when the results are transmitted to the local member of the legislative body, the wisdom of the legislature will be placed in the hands of the great, good, and great ones. We planned this idea to the delegates before the National Granges were organized.

For discussion the book "The Liquor Question" by Francis Appleton and "Saloon and the Saloon Question" by O. H. Krueger must be read. Both are practical books and give an idea to the reader on the matter.

TOPOGRAPHIC DISCUSSION.

What salaries should be paid to our state officials? What are "Woman's rights?" What is the average yearly expense of a farmer's family of six persons?

1. Can the farmers aid in solving the problem of the "Outlook?" "Anything to beat the saloon". The reason for the saloon is that the liquor habit to the individual and to the public is a great evil. We venture to say that one great advantage of the rural saloon does not seem to affect them so imminently as in the city, where its evil influence is transmitted to the local member of the legislative body, the great, good, and great ones.

"Have the farmers any interest or duty in the meaning of such a decision. It would carry weight. But even if no conclusions were reached, we would feel that the quality of the discussion would be high, and the Grandes would not be confined to their little corner any longer.

Michigan State Grange

The Grange consists of various local bodies, each of which is known as a "Chapter." The Grand Grange of Michigan is the central organization, and is composed of representatives from each Chapter. It is the highest authority in the organization, and has the power to make and enforce rules and regulations for the guidance of the members.

The Grange is open to all farmers, regardless of age, sex, or political affiliation. It is an organization that promotes the well-being of the farmers and their families, and advocates for their rights and interests. It is a place where farmers can come together to share their experiences and learn from each other.

The Grange has a strong tradition of helping the community, and is involved in many charitable activities. It is a strong advocate for the environment, and is dedicated to preserving the natural beauty of the countryside.

The Grange is a way for farmers to come together and support each other, and to make a difference in the world. It is a place where they can learn, grow, and contribute to the greater good.

For high class wagon work, a wide tire is requisite. These cases are hand-made, and if any one of the company's tires should not be satisfactory, the company will replace it.
