Cleveland's Superior Absolutely the Best Baking Powder
A good many husbands are utterly spoiled by mismanagement. Some women go about it as if their husbands were bladders and so "blow them up;" others keep them continually in hot water; others again let them freeze by their carelessness and indifference; others roast them; while some keep them in a pickle all their lives. It cannot be supposed that any husband will be tender and good managed in this way, but they are really delicious when properly treated.

In selecting your husband you should not be guided by the silvery appearance, as in buying mackerel; nor by the golden tint as if you wanted salmon. Be sure to select him yourself, as tastes differ. Do not go to market for him, as the best are always brought to your door; and even then it is far better to have none, unless you patiently learn how to cook him. A preserving kettle of finest porcelain is best; but if you have nothing but an earthenware pipkin it will do with care. See that the linen you wrap him in is nicely washed and mended, with the required number of buttons and strings tightly sewed on. Tie him in the kettle by a strong silk cord called "comfort," as the one called "duty" is apt to be too weak. They are apt to fly out of the kettle, or be burned and crusty on the edges, since, like crabs and lobsters, you must cook them while alive. Make a clear, steady fire out of love, neatness and cheerfulness. Set him as near this as seems to agree with him. If he sputters and fizzes do not be anxious; some husbands do this until they are quite done. Add a little sugar, in the form of what confectioners call kisses, but no vinegar or pepper on any account. A little spice improves them, but must be used with judgment. Do not stick any sharp instrument into him to see if he is becoming tender. Stir him gently, watching the while lest he lies too flat and close to the kettle, and so becomes useless. You cannot fail to know when he is done. If thus treated you will find him very digestible, agreeing nicely with you and the children, and he will keep as long as you want, unless you become careless, or set him in too cold a place. A level teaspoonful of Cleveland’s Baking Powder will do as much as a heaping teaspoonful of any other.
