HEINZ TARRAGON VINEGAR
Nobody knows the name of the first ingenious woman who served up a lettuce leaf or two with dressing—and called it a salad. But everybody knows what a popular, versatile part of the American cuisine the salad has become! This universal favorite can be pretty as a picture—a sturdy, he-man dish full of chopped meat or seafood—or merely a tempting disguise for vegetables and fruits.

To give your salad courses greater variety and appeal, the Home Economics staff of H. J. Heinz Company presents these 57 ideas for nourishing and attractive vegetable, fruit, molded, meat and main-dish salads. We've also included a number of recipes for delicious and distinctive dressings. And you'll find many helpful hints for cutting down preparation time and insuring better results.

We hope you will enjoy using this booklet—and that it may inspire you to novel salad ideas of your own!
Dressing a Salad Correctly

- There's an old Spanish proverb about salad dressings requiring the work of four people—a spendthrift for oil, a miser for the vinegar, a counsellor for salt and a madman to stir it up! We'd like to add a fifth—a wise soul who knows which dressing to serve with each salad!

- While there are no set rules, it is a generally accepted fact that French dressing is best for leafy and fruit salads; Mayonnaise glorifies molded, main-dish or heavier salads; and cooked salad dressing is ideal with almost every kind of salad under the culinary sun!

- In this booklet you will find not only three basic recipes for these dressings but unusual, tasty variations of each kind! They're all easy to prepare—and you'll be surprised at what a delicious difference they make in your salads!

- Then, of course, some folks like to use plain oil and vinegar, seasoned to taste, for their tossed salads. Heinz Vinegars are perfect for this purpose.

Choosing the

- Fine vinegar costs so little for salads and home canning—yet makes such a remarkable difference in the results—thrifty homemakers just naturally insist on Heinz! Made with the scientific skill and homelike care which characterize the preparation of all the 57 Varieties, Heinz Vinegars are wonderfully clear and aromatic—natural in flavor and color. Rigid hourly tests by food technicians in Heinz Quality Control Laboratories assure their uniform strength. Heinz Vinegars are so full-bodied and concentrated you'll find you actually use less to get more flavorful results.

- Heinz makes four vinegars—each destined to serve a special purpose.

Heinz Cider Vinegar — made from the first pressing of sound, juicy apples—has been called the all-purpose vinegar because of the versatile way it blends with so many types of food. You'll find, however, that it lends extraordinary zest to fruit and vegetable salads.
CORRECT VINEGARS

Heinz Malt Vinegar—brewed from choice barley malt—has an unusually rich color and a fine aromatic bouquet. It's the ideal vinegar for heartier salads of meat, seafoods or macaroni, and it adds a welcome pungency to meat or fish sauce.

Heinz Tarragon Vinegar—delicately infused with the piquant tarragon herb—has a fine, winey fragrance. Subtly used, it points up hidden flavors in salads of greens, meat, eggs or fish. (Refrain, by the way, from using it with fruit—since you'll find that the flavors are highly incompatible!)

Heinz Distilled White Vinegar—the kind developed for Heinz own famous pickles and relishes—is a crystal-clear vinegar distilled from corn, rye and barley malt. Its mellow tartness brings out the full flavor of foods without dominating them. And because of its uniform strength, you can always count on Heinz Distilled White Vinegar for best results with your own home pickling and preserving.

Hints

- To insure freshness of salads in torrid weather—chill salad plates in refrigerator before serving salad.

- To wash lettuce—remove core with knife. Let water from faucet flow into head and force the leaves apart.

- To skin tomatoes—stick sharp fork through stem end of tomato. Plunge in boiling water for a few seconds. Dip in cold water. With tip of paring knife break skin and peel. If desired, hold tomato over gas flame to make easy to peel.

- To make radish roses—cut well through the skin into the radish from the top to stem and making 6 to 8 cuts. Cut back the petals thus formed, making sure petals are thick enough not to break easily. And here's an interesting trick: make \(\frac{3}{8}\)-inch parallel-vertical cuts almost to top of radish. Place in ice water for an hour or more.

- To hard-cook eggs—place in cold water. Cover. Bring to boil and turn off heat. Let stand 20 minutes. Rinse well in cold water. This prevents the dark green discoloration around yolks.

- To marinate—sprinkle vegetables, meat, fish, or fruits with French Dressing or other dressing, tossing as they are sprinkled. Use just enough dressing to coat food. Let stand in refrigerator an hour or so to chill.

- To prevent discoloration of peeled fruits—sprinkle with Heinz Distilled White or Cider Vinegar which has been diluted with water.
