The Jell-O Girl is on a trip around the world. Her best friend, Polly, is traveling with her. First they go to Washington, the capital city of the United States, because the Jell-O Girl wants to shake hands with the President.

The Capitol at Washington is a big and beautiful building with a great dome. She felt quite small as she stood under the dome. But she liked to watch the famous men pass by. Polly however, did not like it. “Where do we go next?” she croaked.

“To look at the Senators,” answered the Jell-O Girl. So they went to the Senate Chamber where the United States Senate helps to make laws.

“They are just like other men,” cried out the Jell-O Girl. A page boy came ran up saying: “You must not talk out loud while the Senate is meeting.”

“Bless my heart,” said Polly, “where next?”

“Well, Polly,” she said, “if you do not like it here, we shall go to the White House to see the President.” So they drove up Pennsylvania Avenue and got out at the gate of the White House.

“How pretty it is,” said the Jell-O Girl with delight. “Bless my heart,” answered Polly, who could not say very much to express herself. They walked up the great steps and into the White House. “May we see the President?” asked the Jell-O Girl of a guard at the door. The guard went away but came back in a few minutes. “Come with me,” he said. They then went into a large room and there standing beside his desk and smiling was the President. “I am very glad to see you,” said the President in a kind voice. “You have a pretty parrot, haven’t you?” Polly croaked with pride and said “Bless my heart” twice to show her pleasure. “Oh, Mr. President,” said the Jell-O Girl, “I thought I was going to be afraid of you, but you are nice and kind like my Daddy.”

“It isn’t often that pretty little girls come to visit me,” answered the President. “Shall I have a guard show you all over the White House?”

That pleased her greatly. They went through one beautiful room after another and Polly said “Bless my heart” so many times that she quite lost count. Afterwards they played with the squirrels on the lawn and fed the pigeons. “It is so lovely,” she cried. “How happy the President must

(Continued on last page.)
Jell-O Recipes

LEMON JELL-O WITH FRUITS

One package Lemon Jell-O, 1 pint of boiling water, a few cherries, pineapple, and slices of banana. Place a layer of Jell-O on bottom of mould when it has congealed, place cubes of pineapple, cherries and banana, add another layer of cold Jell-O; continue with fruit and Jell-O until mould has been filled, let harden. Serve with whipped cream or custard.

ORANGE CUPS AND BASKETS

To make orange cups cut large oranges in two, take juice and pulp out so carefully as not to break the shell, and when perfectly clean scallop edges with scissors. The “baskets” are made by cutting the oranges in basket shape.

For a filling, dissolve a package of Orange Jell-O in half a pint of boiling water and add one-half cup of sugar. When cool combine with the juice from the oranges to which has been added enough water to make a half-pint. Also add small pieces of orange or nutmeats. Put into cups or baskets. Any fresh fruits may be used.
CALIFORNIA SPECIAL

To the juice from a can of white cherries add enough water to make a pint. Heat to boiling point and dissolve a package of Lemon Jell-O in it. When it begins to thicken add a cup of chopped white cherries, half a cup of nutmeats, half a cup of celery. Set away to harden. This dish may be used either as a dessert or a salad. Serve on lettuce leaves with mayonnaise, as a salad; serve without the lettuce leaves, with whipped cream as a dessert.

There are other delightful salads described in our free Jell-O book—send for one.

PARADISE PUDDING

Take one-quarter pound blanched almonds, one dozen marshmallows, one dozen candied cherries, one half-dozen macaroons. Cut these fine and stand aside in a cool place. To a package of Lemon Jell-O add a pint of boiling water, and when cold set the dish in cold (or ice) water and whip to consistency of whipped cream. Then fold in one cup of whipped cream, the cut fruit and one-quarter cup of sugar. Turn into a square pan and set in a cold place to harden. Serve in slices. Will serve twelve or more.
be to live in such a beautiful place!” But Polly was tired by that time. “Where do we go next?” she croaked.

“We are going to take a train to New York,” answered the Jell-O Girl, “and there we shall get on a big boat to go to Europe.”

THE GENESEE PURE FOOD CO., LeRoy, N. Y.