Lactated Food

THE UNIVERSAL FOOD.

From White to Black, Gentile or Greek, Babies the self same ailments meet, In every clime this truth holds sway From Frigid Zones to far Bombay.

On Ganges bank, the young Hindoo Crows cheerily the same"Goo goo," That animates all Natures brood Rejoicing in"Lactated Food."
Babies Lives Saved.

FIVE CHILDREN IN MASSACHUSETTS WERE VERY NEAR DEATH'S DOOR.

NOW THEY ARE HEALTHY, HAPPY, AND HEARTY.

When a little baby came to gladden the home of F. A. Sylvester, South Sherborn, Mass., the doctor said the child could not live. It weighed only three pounds and was such a tiny bit of humanity that no one thought it could grow to be a stout, healthy child. But fortunately the little one's grandfather was a physician and knew what would make babies strong and vigorous—it was a food that the best physicians of the country recommended. The child lived upon this food, and at the end of the first year weighed 23 pounds. When three years old she weighed 32½ pounds and had had hardly a sick day. Her teeth came without trouble, and her mother says there is nothing like Lactated Food, for it saved her little one's life.

Mrs. F. D. Valpey, Lawrence, Mass., is another mother whose opinion is of value to those with small children. She says, "I tried seven kinds of food before I used Lactated. That is the only one that digested and I feel sure it saved my baby's life."

"My baby would have been in his grave had it not been for Lactated Food," is the strong statement of Mrs. Foster B. Putney, Billerica Center, Mass. When she began to feed her little one Lactated Food, he was a cross, sickly baby. She tried more than half a dozen different kinds of food and none of them did him any good, but he has not had one sick day all the time he has been living upon Lactated Food.

Mrs. E. L. Dearborn, Westfield, Mass., in a recent note, wrote, "My baby was very sick last summer. I think Lactated Food saved his life."

"I think we were starving our baby until we commenced using Lactated Food. It had but little life or activity, but now it is lively as a cricket," writes George K. Dennett, 23 Bromfield St., Boston.

These babies are but five of the many thousands who owe their health, their happiness—yes, life itself, to the use of Lactated Food. It is a perfect food for babies of all ages, and in the summer time is even safer than the mother's milk.

A Mother's Responsibility.

The boon of life that the mother gives to her child but begins a never-ending responsibility. She is accountable in great measure for the little one's health and happiness, and it is owing to her loving care and wisdom that the child grows to vigorous manhood or womanhood. It is the mother's duty to use the best means of which she has knowledge to preserve her baby's health, and every child who is delicate or sickly should be fed with Lactated Food. A small sized can costs but 25 cents, and yet in many instances has saved a baby's life. This is a pure, scientific, and reliable food, heartily endorsed by the best physicians. Give it a trial at once, and see how quickly it will bring the rosy glow of health to the cheeks of your darling baby.

Baby's Birthday.

A beautiful Birthday Card of baby faces sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents address. The Baby.

Another little wave,
Upon the sea of life;
Another soul to save
Amid its toil and strife.

Two more little feet,
To walk the dusty road;
To choose where two paths meet,
The narrow or the broad.

Two more little hands,
To work for good or ill;
Two more little eyes,
Another little will.

Another heart to love,
Receiving love again;
And so the baby came,
A thing of joy and pain.

150 Meals for $1.00.

BABY'S FOOD DOES NOT COST MUCH WHEN
THE BILL OF FARE IS PROPERLY
ARRANGED.

[Boston Daily Globe.]

“When Lactated Food, of which I am speaking, is prepared for infants, its cost is less than five cents per quart—not as expensive as cow's milk alone. And think of the sickness, the suffering, the sorrow that can be prevented by its use.”

The words of this physician should be remembered by all to whom a young life has been intrusted; and acted upon by all who wish their children to be happy and healthy,
instead of pale and puny.

What Shall the Invalid Eat?

Miss Parloa, the authority on cooking, says:

“There is no reason why sick people should take
insipid, tasteless food,
but how seldom it is that they get anything

A friend of mine was recovering from a wasting fever, and kind hands prepared beef tea, gruel, and other tasteless dishes that are supposed to be the only proper food for invalids.
Instead of gaining in strength he became weaker and finally was able to sup a few spoonfuls of coffee only. He said to me afterwards, “It was getting to be a serious question what to eat to sustain life. Finally my wife had an idea. My youngest boy was a 'bottle baby,' brought up on a well known artificial food, and she reasoned that if this food agreed with his weak stomach, it ought to with mine. To please my palate she flavored it with a little extract of vanilla.
It tasted good, and what was more, built up my weakened system. It was so agreeable, palatable and satisfying that Lactated Food
and I are now fast friends.”

My friend's experience is valuable. It shows that there is a diet for invalids, for dyspeptics, for the aged, and for all whose digestion is weak, that not only is a delicacy, but strengthens and builds up the enfeebled system, thus bringing back health, strength and vitality.
When Afric's sable seion ails
And utters forth such plaintive wails,
All know his wants, perceive his mood
And soothe him with "LACTATED FOOD."

While all with one consent delight
To wake their parents in the night,
Their cries at once are understood
And answered by "LACTATED FOOD."

Their language innocent and sweet
Is never that of vain deceit,
Their Testimony's always good
And always for "LACTATED FOOD."
