Introduction to Revised Edition

The former edition of the famous Minute Tapioca Cook Book was compiled in order to give you a booklet of choice recipes that would further acquaint you with the uses of this versatile product.

This book has such revisions and additions as we feel sure will make the Minute Tapioca Cook Book more helpful to you than ever before. The 78 recipes in this book are the result of a world-wide contest. 121,619 housewives at home and abroad sent us their favorite recipes. From this vast number, the judges selected 78 recipes as the ones that would lend greater variety to your meals, make new economies possible, and help you in maintaining your reputation as a skilled cook.

The judges in this contest were the following ably-qualified women: Miss Mabel Jewett Crosby, Home Economics Editor of the Ladies' Home Journal; Miss Katherine A. Fisher, Director of Good Housekeeping Institute; and Mrs. Elizabeth A. MacDonald, Professor of Home Economics, Boston University, College of Practical Arts and Letters.

This new edition of the Minute Tapioca Cook Book has been retested and revised by the educational department of the Minute Tapioca Company. It contains recipes not only for an amazing variety of delicious and economical desserts, but also points out the importance of Minute Tapioca as a children’s food and shows in a large variety of recipes how Minute Tapioca as a precision ingredient helps to insure more complete success in cookery.

You will, therefore, find this Minute Tapioca Cook Book divided into three sections: Minute Tapioca in a wide range of wonderful desserts; Minute Tapioca as a precision ingredient in a variety of soups, soufflés, omelets, and entrées; and Minute Tapioca in the diets of children.
NOTHING gives the housewife more satisfaction than to serve her family a delicious and economical home-made dessert. The popularity of Minute Tapioca rose by leaps and bounds when women learned how to make an infinite variety of luscious puddings and tempting desserts with this versatile product.

No other dessert ingredient offers such amazing variety, such remarkable economy of time and work. None other is more easily digested.

It is literally true that you can serve a different Minute Tapioca dessert every day for more than a month without exhausting the possibilities of this many-sided ingredient. Why Skilled Cooks Call Minute Tapioca a Precision Ingredient

VERY probably you, like most women, know Minute Tapioca only as the incomparable dessert ingredient that it really is. But to limit Minute Tapioca to use in desserts only, is to disregard its wide range of other uses in the realm of cookery.

Minute Tapioca has recently taken on a new and important culinary significance. Food experts have come to rely upon it as an ingredient that takes much of the guesswork out of cooking. For Minute Tapioca used in certain types of recipes can prevent discouraging failures and insure successful results. This unique quality makes Minute Tapioca a precision ingredient. Used in this way, Minute Tapioca gives to many dishes that ideal appearance, flavor, or texture that is otherwise difficult to attain.

With Minute Tapioca you can make a delicious omelet that does not fall; is not tough and leathery. The tapioca strengthens the cell walls of the beaten eggs and adds a gratifying smoothness. Here Minute Tapioca is the precision ingredient that makes it possible for you to make a perfect omelet easily, every time. An omelet that is tender, moist, and fluffy—one that stays light even while it is being served and eaten.

Meat extenders are all very well, but they do often veil the flavor of the meat and result in a meat loaf or a croquette that is either too dry or too soggy. Minute Tapioca, because of its delicacy leaves the flavor of the meat intact, while at the same time it is an ingredient that holds the other ingredients together in a deliciously moist and appetizing dish.

You know how hard it is to make a luscious sandwich filling that will be agreeably moist and yet not soak into the bread. But when you combine Minute Tapioca in a filling you get just the ideal moist consistency with the unchanged flavor and color of the other ingredients. Think of being able to make your sandwiches six to eight hours before they are to be eaten—and still being assured that they will be just as perfect as when you made them!

Used as a precision ingredient Minute Tapioca can convert bits of left-over chicken, cold meat, fish or vegetables into one of the delicious entrées described on pages 19, 20, 21, 22, and 23.

Tomato Bisque, made according to the recipe on page 19, is simpler to make than the ordinary Tomato Bisque. Minute Tapioca used as thickening in soups gives a texture that is agreeably different and a translucence that is unusually attractive.

Try the soufflé recipe given on page 26. Minute Tapioca gives it a master touch that makes it melt in your mouth.

Why Minute Tapioca is Valuable

A Modern and Convenient Tapioca

In the past twenty years has come unprecedented help to the housewife through the amazing advances in modern methods of food manufacture. Tapioca is an example of this.

There was a day when pearl tapioca was the only tapioca available. Long hours were necessary to prepare it; its use was definitely limited by its texture and it often came to the table in a sad, half-cooked state.

Now Minute Tapioca, the modern form, has taken its place. Perhaps you do not realize how different a product this is. But you do know that it has a delicate, smooth texture, that it is easily and quickly prepared, and that it is an unparalleled basic ingredient for countless delicious desserts.

But have you tried a Minute Tapioca Cheese Soufflé? Here is a delicious soufflé that literally melts in your mouth—and, what is more, one that stays light while it is being served and eaten.

Also, do you know the satisfaction of making juicy berry pies that do not boil over and burn in the oven? If not, use Minute Tapioca in the filling and see how perfectly it keeps the juices within the pie.

Minute Tapioca is a tapioca, ready for instant use without soaking and requiring only a few minutes cooking; a tapioca capable of infinite uses besides puddings; a tapioca that can be used all through the menu from soup to dessert.

The Function of Minute Tapioca as a Food

The science of nutrition grows more comprehensive each year. Women, in their homes, have access to more and more information about how to choose the proper foods to feed a family that wants to grow strong and healthy. Each day’s food must supply sufficient quantities of protein and minerals for building body tissues; water, certain minerals, and vitamins for regulating bodily functions; carbohydrates and fats for supplying adequate energy.

Energy is required for every movement of the body. Sixty per cent of the day’s meals should consist of carbohydrates in order to supply sufficient energy for the body. How essential it is then to vary this large amount in order to avoid monotony! And to have carbohydrate in a form that is economical, simple to prepare, and easily digested. Minute Tapioca ideally meets all of these requirements.

An Easily Digested Carbohydrate

Minute Tapioca is one of the most easily digested of the carbohydrates. The photomicrographs on this page show why. Because tapioca cells are so small, they afford a ready supply of energy with very little tax on the digestive system. Minute Tapioca comes to you already partially cooked. Our cooking process bursts many of the tiny granules, partially converting them into dextrin and making them readily digestible.
Mothers have always relied on tapioca pudding as one of the few desserts really good for children. And tapioca combines ideally with milk and eggs—two foods which children need daily.

Now Minute Tapioca has completely solved the problem of healthful desserts for children, for this modern tapioca has made it possible for mothers to make not one, but dozens of different tapioca desserts, each one as nourishing as the old-fashioned tapioca pudding. Now that there is such a tempting variety of tapioca desserts, mothers find it possible to serve this wonderful family dessert several times a week.

Growing children who spend their strength in tireless activity must be fed plenty of the energy-producing carbohydrates. And Minute Tapioca is the ideal carbohydrate because it is pure nourishment in an easily digested form.

Minute Tapioca also affords an ideal way of serving fresh and stewed fruit which is so good for children. Any fruit can be made into a tempting dessert simply by pouring a delicate tapioca cream over it. The busiest mother can make this delicious dessert in a very few minutes.

Tapioca may well assume an important place in the child’s diet as early as the eighteenth month. During the third year a large bowl of tapioca porridge may frequently serve as the child’s entire supper. Children may safely be given their share of many of the more elaborate “grown-up” tapioca desserts, for tapioca is one of the few desserts that doctors recommend for children.
