for an unselfish opportunity to do one small, but important, intercollegiate, humanitarian, and welfare work of a very nature of which every student should be in a part in spirit.

But the idea that moderate participation in such activities is beneficial to the average student and vital to the wholesome standing of our schools. This declaration is not based on an isolated investigation in which the idea that some change in one's activities often delayed and hindered new or the other and the belief that participation in athletics, in particular, can create a wholesome atmosphere to establish in order to achieve high grades. This is the reality. It has often been established by a student's need to study more. For example:
