The Mines Field Illumination

The Mines Field, Los Angeles, is famous as the scene of the 1928 International Air Races and Astronautical Exposition. Equally famous among fliers is the perfect illumination which enabled pilots on the night programs to land with all the ease and assurance of those who did their flying there by day.

To blanket the field with brilliance and yet avoid dangerous glare was the problem assigned to the Westinghouse engineers who designed the Mines Field lighting for this greatest of air meets. Twenty-one huge floodlight projectors, each with a maximum beam candlepower of one million, provided the brilliance. An ingenious system of lenses cutting off upward rays of light provided protection from glare at all times.

The result was an achievement in airport lighting which has been pronounced the most nearly perfect of any in the United States.

The outstanding jobs go to organizations with the resources and facilities to handle them. Westinghouse, because of the outstanding opportunities which are almost daily occurrences within its organization, offers strong attractions to young men of every background and ability who are anxious to make a mark in the world.

Madjde Bellamy explains the growing popularity of Old Golds in Hollywood.

"The 'Star' in a movie may well become the ' Villain ' if the coughs at the wrong time. A cough isn't overnice, but when it's interpreted as the opening of a movie scene, it's deadly!" Why not a cough in a caridad . . .

They're as smooth as the polished surface of Adolphus Morgan, who himself is an OLD GOLD man. "While they're the most respectable of cigarettes, OLD GOLD means absolute "de luxe" for throat sensitive and smoker's cough."

"Old Golds Cigarettes, the most incisive advertising campaign in the smoking world."
