Cigarettes, like Foods need Seasoning

That's the part Turkish Tobaccos play in making Chesterfield Taste Better

Smokers notice a certain "mouth" in Chesterfields that comes from having just enough Turkish tobacco in them... a spicy, aromatic flavor that's much the same to a cigarette as seasoning is to food.

Four only by blending and cross-basting the right amounts of mild Domestic tobaccos with the right amount of Turkish can we get the flavor and aroma that Chesterfield smokers enjoy.

Next time, ask for "The Cigarette that Satisfies"... you'll get Chesterfields, with Milder, Better Taste.

Tobacco

to smoke right

has to be a different kind of tobacco from that used in cigarettes...and it has to be made by an entirely different process...

Out in Kentucky, where they have the prettiest women, last hot and blue grass, there grows a tobacco called White Burley. It doesn't grow anywhere else in the world.

There is a type of this White Burley that is best suited for pipe smoking. It is neither too thick nor too thin. It is not light and chatty; at the same time, it is not rank or strong. "U.S. Type A1" is the government classification for White Burley.

None of the other pipe tobaccos has yet been found which seems to equal White Burley. This is what we use in making Granger Rought Cut.

Next, we use the Wellman Method, a famous 1870 method of making pipe tobacco, to give Granger its fine flavor and fragrance. Then, too, Granger is "Rought Cut"—just like they used to "whittle" their tobaccos off a plug with a jackknife. It smokes cool, last longer and never gums a pipe.

Initially, we want to sell Granger for 10 cents. Good tobacco—right process—out right. So we put Granger in a sensible soft foil pouch instead of an expensive package, knowing that a man can't smoke the package.

Granger has not been on sale very long, but it has grown to be a popular smoke. Folks seem to like it.
