The Senior Shell

Early in the term there was much discussion of a college shell to be erected on the banks of the Red Cedar and serve as a permanent structure for many college functions. As suggested by the senior class, funds for the proposed $12,000 shell could be started by a contribution from the present senior class.

In other years the graduating class has often made some gift to the college. The decision to contribute money toward erection of the shell was one prompted by a genuine affection for the school and a desire to create something of a lasting class memorial.

The plan is an ambitious one. At best the class funds could contribute no more than $1400. A larger sum would do much to assure success of the proposal. A smaller gift might mean eventual discard of construction plans.

Several things have been suggested as possible means of increasing the shell fund. A series of student amateur nights, conducted in the theatre of some other setting, could be made a highly profitable thing. Or an all-college dance, with a name-band as the attraction and the senior class as ticket salesman might prove to be highly remunerative.

It is generally agreed that the shell is a worth-while project, something bigger than any previous class has attempted. If this is true, then success is worth the effort needed to bring it about. State has long needed such a shell for various events.

Class leaders are willing to get out and drive to gain success for the project. All they need now is the assurance of the senior class that the individual members within the group are willing to do some real work and take pay in personal satisfaction and the belief that something fine has been done.—R. A. Y.

We'll Stand By

Michigan State college does not need a full-time publicity man for its athletic department. That is the official stand of this newspaper, and comes to offset any comments that may have come from individual members of this staff to the contrary.

The rumors as first spread by Detroit newspapers that one certain man was being considered as a possibility for such a post appear to be unfounded. No word has come from officials here on the campus concerning such a move, nor have the original publishers of the rumors continued with the matter.

For that reason we shall continue to consider the subject very lightly until something more definite develops. If this matter should come to a point where our serious comment is necessary, we know what our stand will be, and that is as stated in this editorial.

What the college does need, we might add, is someone who will turn out some attractive publicity for the many other events held here each year and which are really worthy of public notice. This field has been sadly neglected, though it is being developed at present.

The Independent's Day

A little more than a year ago the Independent Men's League started its official existence. Since that time it has grown and has become a power on the campus, not only politically but also socially and in various other ways.

Too often these independent groups have been formed and blossom forth bravely for a time. Their backers are enthusiastic and hope for everything that is good. However, soon the blossom fades and dies out, because the leaders have lost that enthusiasm and drive.

The present men's group, however, has survived, and from present indications is headed toward permanency here on the campus. The announcement of the organization's first party to be held next week is the first sign of all-campus social activity.

While the party is primarily for the independents it is meant to be an all-college affair, open to everybody. Whether it will be a success or not is up to the student body. The Independent Men's League is accomplishing things and with the added incentive that would arise from a successful dance it would probably advance still further.

Student Pulse

Can You Beat It?

To "Off Beat in the Student Pulse." So, it is your mission to point out our childish mistakes, eh? Well, the next time you take it upon yourself to point an accusing finger, we hope someone bites it off!

Did it ever occur to you that some fraternities, in fact, most fraternities, have had respectable parties in the past? Why, then, is it fair and sportsmanlike to issue a bunch of "Grade School" regulations. Sometimes in grade school, the teacher makes the whole class stay in from recess because of the bad behavior of one or two pupils. Do you get the connection, Off Beat? Can you possibly deduct why it is psychologically all wet?

We are sure that a better procedure could be taken for this problem, and that all those concerned (not you, Dead Beat), would be willing to cooperate.

The Election

To the Editor, Michigan State News: The result of the recent election, as far as the state of Michigan is concerned, disappointed me greatly. However, I was not surprised at the easy manner in which President Roosevelt won in the nation.

The Republicans who voted for Hoover in 1932, and then made an about-face enabling the Democrats to sweep the state will be the first ones to find fault in case of a mishap in our latest New Deal government. The playing upon the illiteracy of the lower classes of people by the Democrats is likely to backfire and result in a debacle to those persons who put Murphy and Company in power in the state.

So They Say

"It is entirely conceivable that the end of life upon this planet of ours may be brought about by man himself, through the loosing by some miscreant of uncontrollable, devastating forces. Think of the havoc which can be wrought already by such forces as fire and pestilence. The only answer is to breed better humans, and in this, scientific research can unquestionably play a leading role." Professor Marston T. Bogert of Columbia university offers science a difficult problem.

"My trip across the Alps into northern Italy on an elephant's back was the most dramatic and thrilling of all my travels. I don't intend to travel any more this year since I have a number of lectures to give at schools and colleges in the East." Richard Halliburton, Princeton graduate and author of some note, has packed the travel bags up in the attic.

"Freedom of discussion mean freedom in a scholarly and courteous way, with due regards to facts. We must be skeptical about believing everything we hear and read. We must be cautious, therefore, here at Barnard, about inviting educators from outside to speak to us if they come with the intention to agitate and spread propaganda." Dear Virginia C. Gildersleeve of Barnard college is using pounds of prevention to assure elimination of tons of cure.

"For over five years I have permitted the use of typewriters by students in my courses. That only five percent use them is not due to the expense but to indifference and lack of ambition. It is most unusual that persons in this advanced age still use the longhand methods of medieval times." Robert E. Stone, assistant professor of law at the University of California, is centuries ahead of the primitive penmen.

These are the days when you start talking about what a lot you have to get in to pass all your courses and how you're going to have to study like blazes to get by—and the end of next week you'll still be saying the same things and the night before exams, well, you know, why must we remind you? Prof. Advocates New Grade Plan

S. S. Radford Publishes Details of System.

Prof. S. S. Radford of the drawing and design department has had an article published in the Industrial Arts and Vocational Education magazine entitled "Marks and Grading." The article deals with a system of marking which Professor Radford worked out while teaching at the Arthur Hill Trade School in Saginaw.

In his system Professor Radford uses two cards, one of which the student gets, and the other for records. At the end of the year the various marks including the mark in citizenship are averaged and the average becomes the mark of the student for that term.

According to Professor Radford this system places the problem of marking on as nearly a fair basis as possible and also enables the student to know exactly what his standing is at that time.

Professor Radford is a graduate of M. S. C. and holds a master's degree from the University of Michigan. He has been engaged in the field of education for 14 years and has worked for various firms in both Saginaw and Jackson.

Brown Heads Group

Prof. G. A. Brown of the animal husbandry department was elected president of the American Society of Animal Production in an election of new officers held at Chicago, Ill. Brown is in Chicago attending the International Livestock show that is in progress there.

Prof. H. H. Hinton, Ralph Young, Charlie Bachman, J. H. Koff, L. E. Fremont, and F. A. Collins will leave this week-end to attend the Western Conference of the American Society of Animal Production at Hotel Sherman.

The purpose of the conference is to prepare for intercollegiate athletic schedules.

College Professors Attend Chicago Meet

Five members of the college physics department attended the annual fall meeting of the American Physics Society at the University of Chicago last week.

Professors C. D. House, D. F. Reed, W. G. Keck, S. H. Dought, and C. W. Miller made the trip. Of particular interest was the introduction of Dr. Carl D. Anderson, winner of the 1936 Nobel prize in physics for his discovery of the positron. Anderson was introduced by Dr. Carl Compton, a former winner of the Nobel prize.

Dr. Hunt Suggests New Research Unit

Says New Bureau Would Study Insanity Cases.

The establishment of a Bureau of Family Research to attempt to check the 18,000 cases of feeble-mindedness, epilepsy, and insanity in the state of Michigan was advocated by Dr. H. R. Hunt, head of the zoology department in his address before 35 members of Zoology campus zoological organization at its bi-monthly meeting held Wednesday evening.

According to Dr. Hunt, the new bureau would attempt to study the causes of the diseases from many points of view in an effort to discover suitable cures.

Dr. Hunt pointed out that there were more than 80,000 cases of insanity, feeble-mindedness, and epilepsy in state hospitals throughout the country. A total of 18,000 of these cases are confined in Michigan hospitals alone at a cost of what Dr. Hunt estimated to be over four million dollars a year.

State Cagers Open Season Facing Albion Wednesday Night

Spartans Eye Game With Michigan Set For Next Saturday

Fear Upset in Warm-up Contest Against Albion Five at Boys' Vocational School; Will Seek Avenge Over Wolverine Basketball Team.

Natural rivals of great standing, Michigan State and University of Michigan will be up and at it again when they clash in a basketball game in Yost Field House a week from tomorrow night.

Before facing the Wolverines, State will raise the lid playing Albion College over at the Boys Vocational School gym Wednesday night. The latter game is listed as a warmup for the Spartans, but may turn out differently.

It seems and rightfully so, the big event on any State team's schedule is their engagement with the boys from down Ann Arbor way. Consequently the Spartans have a tendency now and then to overlook the opponent they face prior to battling Michigan.

Case Last Winter

Such was the case anyway last winter when the State cagers tangled with Albion in the first game of the season. With the invasion of Ann Arbor only a few days away, State forgot about the Albion game up until the night it was played and then had a tough fight on its hands to win, 35-28.

It's also true in football. The Spartans think of only the Wolverine game from the time practice gets underway early in September. Regardless of what Coach Charley Bachman says, the fellows just decline to take the first game seriously.

Wayne ran circles around State for a half in the 1936 grid opener and were it not for the lack of man power, there is no telling of just what the final outcome of the Spartan-Tartar clash might have been.

Wolves Won Twice

When State's courtmen head for Ann Arbor, they'll have an issue or two to settle with the Michiganders, coached again by Cappy Cappon. You will recall that last season, Michigan conquered State twice, winning at home 35-24 and then coming up to Demonstration Hall and routing the Spartans to the tune of 41-23 or thereabouts.

From reports coming out of Ann Arbor, Michigan will have another strong team this season, built around John Townsend, one of the smoothest forwards in the game.

The Wolves also will have elongated John Gee, who stands around six feet, nine inches in their lineup, and a smart guard in Herman Fishman, both of whom played regularly last year.

Should Be Stronger

If experience is factor, State will boast a more powerful quintet than it did in the 1935-36 campaign. Ronald Garlock and Howard Kraft are a couple of veteran guards, while Dorian Wilkinson and Joe Smith know a great deal about center and guard, where they star, respectively.

With four veterans in its lineup, Albion may spring a surprise or two on State. All of the smaller schools throughout Michigan figure their season is a success if and when they knock off Michigan or State.

The game will start at 7:30 p. m. as in the past. Athletic officials have asked the faculty for permission to start the remaining games on the home schedule at 8 p. m.

State Athletic Head Seeks Future Big Ten Opponents

Seven Spartan Heads in Chicago Attending Annual Western Conference Winter Meeting Now in Session.

With Michigan State alumni and undergraduates craving to see a Big Ten football team perform some time in the near future, Spartan athletic officials are in Chicago today attending the annual Western Conference (or Big Ten) winter meeting.

Although there is no hope of scheduling a Big Ten opponent for next fall, it was learned yesterday from close authority State may play a conference eleven here in 1938 in addition to tackling Michigan in the yearly game at Ann Arbor.

Any conference team would be a certain crowd drawer at Mackle Field. Possibilities for booking such teams as Minnesota, Purdue and Ohio State are rather slim at present, but there is a good chance State will encounter one of the other Big Ten schools two years hence.

For five years the conference members have sought to stay away from State, fearing above all a defeat at the expense of the Spartan clan. Some still feel that way about State.

Coach Charley Bachman declared before leaving yesterday he wouldn't be surprised if State meets three conference teams in 1938. One, of course, would be

SPORTORIALS

By AL THEILER, Sports Editor

An Editorial—More or Less

Michigan State College has been offered a road out of the barren wastes of the publicity desert.

Detroit's metropolitan papers came out with the announcement that Tommy Emmet, publicity director for the Detroit Lions and other highly successful ventures, would favor an offer from the Spartans to come to East Lansing and take over the full time publicity job.

Emmet recently severed his connections with the Lions, a team that he built up into a paying proposition in a city that had turned down two previous professional teams. It was largely through his efforts that the 1935 professional champions were made a financial success in the Motor City.

Michigan State's athletic heads have long recognized the need for a full time publicity man. For the last three years the Spartans have had the best football team in the state, have won the National Collegiate cross-country championships, and have been successful in every branch of sports. It is a recognized fact that a publicity man to sell those teams would be an asset to Spartan sports.

The student body has also realized that something drastic should be done about the situation. Ron Garlock, president of the Student Council and a star on the State basketball team, stated yesterday:

"I believe every student will recognize the fact that Michigan State is badly in need of a full time publicity director. To me there is no question about it—the need is apparent."

Henry Kutchins and Gordon Dahlgren, recently elected honorary co-captains of the 1936 Spartan football team, both were in favor of such a move. They both declared that the college couldn't find a better man for the position than Tommy Emmet.

That Emmet has the necessary qualifications for the position is an indisputable fact. The manner in which he handled the job for the management of the Lions has stamped him as one of the leading publicity directors in the country, and his contacts and associations would prove of great service to the school.

Coach Charley Bachman, head football coach, had nothing to say when approached on the subject, as did Ralph Young, director of athletics. Both stated that they knew nothing about the situation, and said that no offer had been made as yet to Emmet.

If and when the Spartans do hire a full time publicity director, it must be with the approval of the State Board of Agriculture.

The above will serve to introduce Tommy Emmet to State students. It presents our version, in part, of the subject started in Detroit in as straight a news story fashion as possible.

A large majority of the students we contacted individually expressed the belief that State was badly in need of a full-time publicity man, although many of them knew little of Emmet. The minority used as their main reason for opposing such a move the belief that the addition of such a department to the college would add to the already advancing impression that State is a "Football College."

If the addition of a publicity man would do that, then practically every institution in the country is a "Football College." Marquette has one of the finest operators in the Middle West at command, Ted Carpenter, who does a swell job. The University of Michigan has Phil Pack, Stanford University has Al Masters.

If the name—"Publicity Director"—is appalling to some, the name can be changed to "Graduate Manager of Public Relations." They have different names at different spots—but their work is the same—they all are engaged in the same thing. And don't forget, it's largely your publicity head who builds All-Americans.

With the fall term drawing rapidly to a close, attention is now being drawn to the approaching winter sport season. The coming term promises to be a banner one for State athletic teams.

Coach Ben Van Aalstine's basketball team will open its season next week against Albion at the Vocational school in Lansing. This year's schedule is just about the toughest in the history of the school, even surpassing the record one of last year.

The Spartan cage team is handicapped early in the season because their court isn't ready for use. The movable one in Demonstration Hall won't be set up until the close of fall term, so Ben drills his boys in the gymnasium. The floor there is about half the size of the one in the Armory, and it handicaps the team no little not to be able to use the bigger one.

Coach Fendley Collins will soon have his grapplers ready for another season and it is certain to be a more successful one than last year. Walt Jacobs, the star who barely missed an Olympic berth, is gone, and will be sadly missed, but Collins will have a veteran group to enter the wars with. Wrestling has quite a following here.

Jake Daubert and his swimmers seem headed for a good season. There are lots of veterans back for the splash sport and prospects are good.

Winter term is always the busy one for State sport teams, and there won't be many week-ends that an attraction of some sort isn't offered on the campus.

Alvin B. Noble, Once Professor Here, Dies

It was recently learned that Alvin Buell Noble, former assistant professor of English at Michigan State college, had died at his home in Ames, Iowa.

Mr. Noble was born near Mt. Pleasant and received his A. B. degree from Howes academy near there. He completed work on his master's degree at Iowa State and was admitted to Phi Beta Kappa in 1887.

After teaching one year at Bellevue, Mr. Noble came to this campus in 1889, where he served for nine years in the college English department, leaving in 1898 for Iowa State college where he was placed in charge of the English department there.

At the time of his death Mr. Noble was 74 years old.

Sam Ketchman Was Iron-Man Of Gridders

With 328 playing minutes to his credit, Sammy Ketchman, the dynamic Battle Creek center, proved himself to be the iron man of Michigan State's 1936 football team according to figures released yesterday.

Sammy was one of 41 Spartan griders who saw at least one minute of actual game competition. He also was one of the few members of the team that started with both the Varsity and Junior Varsity elevens.

Second place time honors went to Co-Captain Henry Kutchins, the team's unknown end from Hamtramck. Hank missed the 300-minute mark by 80 seconds. Howard Zindel came in for third place honors with 296 minutes, two more than Art Brandstatter.

Others to play more than 200 minutes were Milton Lichhardt, 268; Al Agott, 262; John Pungel, 248; Julius Sieder, 235; Steve Sabo, 234; and Jack Colledge, 223.

Among the 12 seniors, Co-Captain Gordon Dahlgren of Chicago turned in the most time over a three-year period. Dolly played 1,036 minutes, picking up 261 during the recent campaign.

Intimate Parts Of Rats Studied By Zoologists

Students Inquire Into Interior Decorations of Rodents.

Rats! Frogs! Snakes! Or anything else you may have on your mind (bad dreams again, huh?) They're all being studied and investigated more or less diligently by those students bold enough to take zoology 101.

The rats—poor dears—have been stretched out on wooden crosses and have been picked and poked at for three weeks now. We've found everything from the Acromiopatrazius to the Spinodeltoidus muscles. The latter has something to do with the rotation of the humerus—just to prove that I know what I'm talking about. Admit four rats have been taken in, pretty well since he's become accustomed to the smell of formaldehyde—which is more than we can say!

Then there was the time that we were studying muscle contraction, and were experimenting on a frog. Some big, bold man let a few frogs out of their cage and giggled exasperatingly while people scrambled over things trying to locate them. All were accounted for (the frogs, I mean) 'cept one lone little feller who was in a girl's pocketbook. But, alas! She wasn't half so scared as the froggy.

Adler Talks On Problems

Noted Psychiatrist Addresses Large Crowd at Lecture Program.

Dr. Alfred Adler, noted pioneer in the field of psychology, spoke on the topic, "Need We Fail?" to a large audience in West Junior high school in Lansing Wednesday night.

Dr. Adler, formerly of the University of Vienna, is now a member of the department of psychiatry at Long Island College of Medicine.

Dr. Adler pointed out that social maladjustments have developed the wrong conception of life in their early childhood. The psychiatrist attempts to effect a cure by re-adjusting this conception.

There are three great problems which all of us face," Dr. Adler stated. "These are the problems of social relationships, work, and sexual relationships. Many of us fail because we do not realize the importance of cooperation in life."

At the close of his lecture Dr. Adler answered questions asked by the audience. Several actual examples of maladjustment were cited, and the speaker gave his solutions of the difficulties.

Dr. Adler's lecture was one of those listed in the Town Hall series. Many students were present despite the conflict with the college symphony orchestra concert on the same evening.

OCCASIONALLY a telephone wire must be run under a rug or carpet. The twisted wire formerly used made an unsightly ridge.

So Western Electric—manufacturing, distributing and purchasing unit of the Bell System—produces a flat cord only one-eighth inch thick, seven-eighths of an inch wide. (Like this). Within this tiny space are four conductors of insulated wire. Under the rug or carpet this cord is not seen, not even felt with bare feet.

Even to the smallest detail, the Bell System is constantly on the lookout for the better way to make telephone service more satisfactory to the customer.

College men and women find after 7 P. M. a convenient time for making long distance calls. Moreover, most rates are lowest then.
