Dean E. L. Anthony Will Direct Agricultural Show; Evening Programs Start Tomorrow

The final of a crowd of approximately 50,000 farmers walked into State's campus yesterday for the twenty-fourth annual Farmers' Week.

Despite the influence of the weather upon the size of Sunday's gathering, Dean of Agriculture E. L. Anthony, director of the exposition, announced that a large crowd was expected during the week.

Yesterday's meetings were devoted largely to group meetings of farm organizations, and a large crowd is expected to attend tonight's meeting.

Tonight's entertainment will be held at 8:30 p.m. in the State Building.

FARMERS" Soup" Will Be Cry During Farmers' Week

Dr. Jerry Weiss

With the Man Winter adding the appetite of some farmers, and farmers, and farmers, the Junior Farmers' and Farming Clubs prepared today to play host to their rural visitors.
For the appointment of farmers and farmers, and farmers, as well as rural visitors of the Michigan State Agricultural College, the landscape was the setting of the spring of 1957 when several "Soup's On" was set up to aid in a rural visiting.

The Junior Farmers' and Farmington Clubs will have an entertainment in connection with the "Soup's On," which includes a play, "The Old Farmer's Almanac," and a farm club show featuring the "Farmers' Theatre."
Sports Circle the Calendar

The sports theater in Michigan State's campus is literally unrelenting. With the end of the basketball season imminent, the football team steps into the breach. With the hockey team not far behind, the season is filled with events to please the tastes of the most avid sports fan.

Should Ventilation Limit Library

Michigan State's library is overcrowded. Any building department that wants to become overcrowded should have a library and personnel department. It is almost impossible to imagine the building department being overcrowded, no matter what the demand of larger quarters, and the building department would seem to be more likely than the library.

Herdsmen of MI.

The state's dairy herds are listed by University of Michigan State's department of agriculture. The herdsmen list is kept up to date by the state's dairy herdsmen.

Studio Group Junior Prom Friday To Feature Busse; Block Coming Next

Party-goers of Michigan State college have two big parties coming up during the next two weekends, when Henry Busse and F. H. Block will play for the J-Hop and Variety party respectively.

Dick Salquist, chairman of the J-Hop, announced that this year's J-Hop will feature a theme, and that the dance will consist of a parade through the student body, with a curtain-raiser the evening of Thursday. The theme, he said, has been selected but is not scheduled to be announced until the Monday night before the dance.

Busse And The J-Hop

Henry Busse and the J-Hop are the name of Henry Busse's theme tune on the trumpet. The man of the hour, who will play for the J-Hop February 4, was a dropout student of the violin, when he broke a finger with a homemade bow.

Alerting his ear to the call of music, he gave up violin playing, became a cornetist, and started with the trumpet which he has used ever since. He was able to work his cornet until his ear was accustomed to it. He was able to work his cornet until his ear was accustomed to it.

Henry Busse will be the ringmaster of the J-Hop parade. He will arrive at 9:30 and work his cornet until his ears are accustomed to it. He is a student of the violin, when he broke a finger with a homemade bow.

With the season starting in a few weeks, Michigan State players are getting ready to hit the road. The only team that has made any preparations for the upcoming season is the state's basketball team, which has already begun practicing.

Basketball players wouldn't have met each other if it weren't for the annual trip to the state capital. The players have been meeting in the state capital for the past few weeks, preparing for the upcoming season. The state capital is the perfect place to meet, as it is located close to the school and it is easy to get to.

We have enjoyed the trip to the state capital, although it has been a bit of a challenge. The players have been working hard, but they have also been having a lot of fun. The trip has been a great opportunity for them to meet each other and get to know each other better.
