Frosh Open Sale Of Frolic Ducats To All Classes

Marking the first time this college year that any class party has opened ticket sales to any class other than members of its own Frolic Ducats will go on sale this morning to all students of the surrounding offices. It was announced by class president, Bob Markov, yesterday. Priority of tickets are available at this date.

Reason for small number of tickets issued by freshmen is attributed to the fact that ticket sales were opened so far in advance of the party, which will be held Friday, May 17, in the auditorium with Jack Teagarden as emcee.

Officers of the class will pick a Frolic Ducat from among the tickets. Tickets will be picked at 11 p. m. and will edge for an hour. Selection will be on the basis of beauty and personality.

The Green Helmet will not be selected to attend and every effort is being made to prevent previous popularity of judges, said Markov.

Band Proves Versatility As It Goes From Field to Stage

By Len Barnes

Demonstrating extreme versatility by stepping from a dusty military parade ground to the concert stage of the new auditorium, M.S.C. 95 piece concert band, directed by Leonard Falcione, opened its spring concert season last night at 7:30 p. m.

Falcione and the band were applauded deservedly at the end of the program by approximately 2,000 listeners. Well planned and executed, the program included many pieces originally written for symphony orchestra and rewritten for concert band work.

First number on the program was "Symphony No. 1" by Beethoven, arranged by Falcione. The band was directed by Falcione, who was assisted by his wife, Mrs. Falcione.

Next number on the program was "The Three Trumpets" by Agostini. Trumpet solo was played by Robert L. Shaw, followed by Robert L. Shaw and Robert L. Shaw.

The Women Have the Idea

A. W. S. again shows the way! This time through the institution of "Hints to Leaders," a series of discussions to aid office holders in becoming better administrators.

Interest is centered on the project because it is the first time that all women's organizations have had inclusive and intensive training to hold important offices.

It includes presidents, cabinets, and councils of various women's groups and all others who are interested in such a course.

Besides giving straight training courses, the series gives background training in such topics as student organization, faculty relation, relations of student organizations to each other, and student government relations.

A. W. S. deserves a lot of credit for taking the initiative in forming such a course. Having trained officers in student organizations will certainly speed up action at meetings. The first step has been taken. It remains for the course to grow into an all-college series. It would serve doubly if it were to grow to train both women and men.

Hospital Policy

In response to a statement in a recent issue of State News concerning the fact that an injured person was turned away from College hospital because he was not a student, Dr. C. F. Holland, director of the Health Center, explained that the hospital is a student health service.

Although a health service for students, the hospital has never turned away anyone in need of immediate medical attention. In the instance involved the person was examined and found not to be seriously injured, hence he was taken to a Lansing hospital.

Because the cost of caring for students is considerable, and no means is provided for additional funds to care for outsiders, the Health Center sends non-students to other hospitals, except in those cases needing immediate attention.

Too, the college hospital has no way of collecting fees incurred by this service.

This statement of policy is essential if the hospital is to function for best interests of students, after all it is a student health service.

Quotable Quotes

"When opinion gets confused—living opinion—the colleges can always fall back on the opinion of the dead. If living men can't think, let's have a catalogue of all that dead men ever thought, and the students can learn that. In fact, economics can be all dosed up with history, as doctors dose a patient with iron. And statistics. If we don't understand the industrial world, at least let us have statistics. The continental area of the United States is 3,026,780 square miles and the number of spindles in Lowell, Mass., is 201,608 (or is it?). That's the stuff. Make a four-year course and give a degree in it—a D. F." Teacher, humorist Stephen Leacock thinks that facts, like food, need to be digested before they can give any nourishment.

Students Believe 'Wards Hell'

New York City—(ACP)—Campus polls conducted this week as an aftermath to the nationwide student peace action, reaffirmed youth's demand that America stay at peace.

At Columbia university, 88 per cent of 1,500 students voted opposition to war participation, 6.5 per cent favored entry, and 4.7 per cent were without opinion. Three per cent at Radcliffe college voted for America's participation in the war now and 97 per cent vetoed the suggestion.

An estimated 1,000,000 students in colleges and high schools demonstrated their opposition to American involvement in war in the peace action, called by the United Student Peace committee under the slogan "The Yanks Are Not Coming."

Reports at the USPC office here indicate this year's mobilization, given impetus by the actuality of war and the spread of fighting to the Scandinavian front, was the greatest in numbers and effect in the history of the student peace movement.

WASHINGTON, May 9—The President ran into an unexpected hornet's nest when he broke the news privately to Representative Vinson and Senator Walsh, chairmen of the House and Senate Naval Committees, that he intended to veto the Navy personnel bill.

This bill was designed to rid the higher ranks of deadwood and also to retain in the service eight of the Navy's ablest flyers, slated for retirement largely because they are not Annapolis graduates. The bill encountered tremendous opposition from the brass hats, who when defeated in Congress, turned to the White House—with better luck.

Apparently figuring he had a selling job to do, Roosevelt summoned Vinson and Walsh and told them he was going to ax the bill.

Walsh promptly protested, quietly told the President he was making a mistake. Roosevelt expected this, since the Massachusetts Senator, who is no friend of the brass hats, does his own thinking on naval matters. The big surprise came from Vinson.

The Georgia Congressman is generally considered a close ally of the Navy high command, but this time he hit the ceiling. "You can't do that, Mr. President," he exclaimed. "That isn't right."

The President tried to soothe him by arguing that everything proposed in the bill would be done anyway. Ten, and possibly eleven admirals will be retired, and the eight crack pilots would be retained on active duty.

"Don't get excited, Carl," pacified the President, "everything will be all right without this bill."

CONGRESS VS. NAVY

"But the question isn't whether you will do these things without this bill, Mr. President," shot back Vinson. "The question goes much deeper than that. It is whether Congress or the brass hats shall do the legislating for the Navy. It has always been my understanding that it was Congress, elected by the people, which had this power. But apparently I was wrong and it's the brass hats who decide Navy policies."

Controlling his temper, though clearly irked by this blast, Roosevelt protested that he was not trying to flout the will of Congress. He insisted that there was a "better way" to handle the matters covered by the bill.

"I disagree with you," retorted Vinson. "It was the judgment of Congress that these things should be done, and if they are right, then what's wrong with legislating on them? Furthermore, I would point out to you that we spent almost two years getting this vital bill through Congress. Now all our time and efforts are wasted simply because you choose to be guided by the admirals instead of by Congress."

After this fusillade the President made still another attempt to soothe Vinson, but the Georgian rose and started for the door with this parting shot—"I still expect you to stand by us, Mr. President. Don't let us down. We're your real friends."

Note: One of the admirals slated by Roosevelt for retirement is Rear Admiral Joseph Taussig, whose "war with Japan is inevitable" statement was officially repudiated.

NORWEGIAN NAZIS

Not much of it got beyond the censors, but confidential reports to U. S. officials showed that there was almost as much Norwegian resentment against the Allies as against the Germans.

This was because of skillful Nazi propaganda. Norway was deluged with pamphlets and dinned with radio broadcasts to the effect that the British had been about to invade Norway. In other words, the Nazis had come merely to head off the British.

The effect on Norwegian opinion was one of the chief reasons for a full dress press conference in Berlin at which Foreign Minister Ribbentrop issued a White Paper alleging that the British had everything cooked up to plunge into Norway.

Unquestionably, the Norwegians believed this to a considerable extent, since many of their upper crust are pro-Nazi.

The Amalgamated Clothing Workers, second largest union in the CIO and strongly pro-Roosevelt, holds its annual convention this month. Sidney Hillman, smart ACWU head, is returning the United Mine Workers' compliment of inviting him to address their Columbus convention, and has asked John L. Lewis to address the Clothing Workers.

Lewis accepted. Whereupon Hillman, with a broad grin, inquired, "John, when would you prefer to make your speech—before or after we pass a third term resolution?"

Lewis laughed, replied that he would leave it up to Hillman.

Note—Despite Lewis' hot blasts against a third term, he has told a number of CIO leaders that his statements did not mean he would oppose Roosevelt if he runs.

Student Tells of Winner Of Pulitzer Prize

Edward Robert Gewirtz

A freak has invaded East Lansing. Disguised as fiction, it has overflooded the bookshop shelves; disguised as photography, it has paraded across the screen of the local theater. As literature, the critics have spilled it over their columns; as education, the progressives have lauded it.

John Steinbeck's "Grapes of Wrath," rears on its hind legs at the same period of history when a federal investigator reports two-thirds of this nation to be inadequately clothed, inadequately housed and inadequately fed. It describes in emotional reactions what theses tabulate in dry statistics.

The American intelligentsia has been astounded that social consciousness can be expressed in Hollywood among the usual pseudo-sophistication and vapid customery; but this astonishment has repaid the producers with box office receipts and well-earned praise.

What says the "Grapes of Wrath?" It says that our esteemed police are more interested in protecting property rights than they are civil liberties; it says that there is a movement in the bowels of the masses and the "causes are a hunger in a stomach, multiplied a million times; a hunger in a single soul, multiplied a million times; muscles and mind aching to grow, to work, to create, multiplied a million times." It says that the causes of the causes, the reasons for the hunger and aches, lie deep in a juggernaut of society that has broken brakes, that crushes the minds and souls and bodies of a class of people with only labor to sell, and with none to buy that labor.

But John Steinbeck doesn't merely present a problem and then become a defeatist, throwing up his hands with disgust and impotency. He uses Tom Joad as a mouthpiece. He uses Tom Joad who went back to sharecropping, hunger and pellagra, only to find he could no longer sharecrop, who went out west to become a migrant picker with hope to eat, work and keep the family together. But five thousand people came from 47 states for 800 jobs.

Then, spoke the mouth of Tom Joad. "I been thinkin' a hell of a lot, thinkin' about our people livin' like pigs, an' the good rich lan' layin' fallow, or maybe one fella with a million acres, while

PERSHING RIFLES DRILL MEET

Test Case Is Improbable On City Liquor Clause

By Jerry Dewar

Test case on the liquor clause in the city charter, one of the stumbling blocks to complete revision of city government in the city, received two blows today from the office of J. T. Caswell, assistant professor of history and political science at Michigan State college.

Caswell stated in an interview yesterday that there are two methods that might be used to avoid the test case hazard.

"It is improbable," Caswell said, "that a test case will ever come before the courts because no one will take it upon himself to run the risk."

NO INTENTIONAL WRITS

He further explained that no person can intentionally secure a writ granting permission to erect a "beer joint" to purposely test the liquor clause. According to Caswell it will be necessary to begin actual erection of such a building before a case can be carried to court.

However, it was pointed out by Caswell that the council may carry the case to the Supreme court without a test case. This was affirmed by Harry Hubbard, city attorney, in an interview today. However, the city attorney said that it was improbable that the Council would act in that manner.

Caswell was in favor of incorporating a clause in the city charter which would make it mandatory for the city council to refer any petition for a liquor establishment permit to the people in a general referendum. According to Caswell this would make it just as difficult to secure a permit as under the present clause, which he believes will not pass a test case.

DISCUSSION IS PLANNED

Harry Loft, city clerk, stated today that the special council meeting this coming Monday night will be devoted to the discussion and action on the petitions and open letter referred to the council last Monday night.

In regard to the Commercial club meeting Tuesday night, the city clerk stated that he believed William J. Balgoveen, city attorney of Michigan Heights, had brought up a most important point when he mentioned the quality of officials. Balgoveen pointed out that the form of commission government is not so important as the quality of men elected to fill the elected positions and the type of men appointed to fill the appointing positions.

Woman to Talk At YWCA May Breakfast

Mrs. Ralph Pano, Detroit civic leader, has been announced as principal speaker for Y. W. C. A. May Morning breakfast Saturday, May 11, at 10 a. m. in Peoples church. Her topic will be "Harmony in Human Relationships."

Miss Emma Sater, Y. W. C. A. secretary, will give the invocation. Janet Weimer will give a toast solo, Ruth Ricker will give the toast to mothers, and Mrs. Albert Ricker, Evanston, Ill., will give the reply to daughters.

Advisory board, including Mrs. R. S. Shaw, Mrs. N. A. McCarty, Mrs. H. D. Dick, Mrs. L. C. Emerson, Mrs. F. T. Mitchell, Mrs. V. R. G. Gable, Mrs. M. H. W. Williams, Mrs. E. L. Anthony, Mrs. W. L. Malham, and Mrs. Elizabeth Clark, will be introduced as guests.

Mrs. Sater announced that resolutions from Y. W. C. A. members, mothers, and individual girls should be completed by Thursday evening.

A public address system has been installed for the program.

Student Club Will Cheat Rag-Man At Party

Going on the supposition that hard times and scavenger hunting are cause and effect, Student club has combined the two in a "hard times scavenger hunt" which will start Friday at 8:30 p. m. from Peoples church. Instructions will be handed out at the church.

Oldest clothes available are in order, it was stated by Ed Morey, publicity chairman, yesterday. A prize will be given for the best hard times costume, and also for winners of the hunt. Refreshments will be served after the hunt, and M. E. Peters of the forestry department will be formally presented as faculty adviser for the coming year.

Co-chairmen for the party are Patricia Tighe and Jane Wootton, assisted by Raymie Taylor, Elsie Kooki, and Howard Kelly. Louise Churchill will be in charge of refreshments.

Audubons to Meet On Campus Friday

Michigan Audubon society will hold its annual convention Friday and Saturday, May 10 and 11, on Michigan State campus. Friday evening session will be held in auditorium of the music building, and Saturday's meeting in forestry cabin. College and out-state speakers will participate in the program, which will be highlighted by color movies, a banquet, and a sunrise bird hike, followed by breakfast.

Poultry Man to Talk At Veterinary Meet

Clifford Carpenter, poultry expert from Allied Mills, Fort Wayne, Ind., will give an illustrated lecture on poultry at a meeting of Junior American Veterinary Medical association Friday at 7:30 p. m. on third floor of veterinary hospital.

Council Prexy Prepares For Politics in High School

By Patty Sibley

Dick Nahstoll, deep voiced Student council president, started his political career way back in his high school days. According to Dick, everyone holds offices in high school, but Dick's list is pretty complete. Besides being president of the junior class, Varsity club, H. Y., and the drama club, he was a member of the student council, an Eagle Scout, went out for football and track and was a member of the debating team.

"I never learned so much from any one thing," commented Dick in referring to his debating experience.

Here in college, Dick belongs to Y. M. C. A., has been a member of Union Hall, was general chairman for both Soph Prom and J. Hop, was secretary of Student council in his junior year and culminates his career this year as president of that organization.

TO STUDY LAW
A pre-law student, Dick plans to finish his course at University of Michigan, and "hopes eventually to contribute a little toward making the law more synonymous with justice."

Dick's favorite pastime is reading. He enjoys non-fiction most and likes especially to read about Lincoln. Biographies are his major attraction in the movie line, and he "goes for Spencer Tracy in a big way."

Group to Talk On Militarism

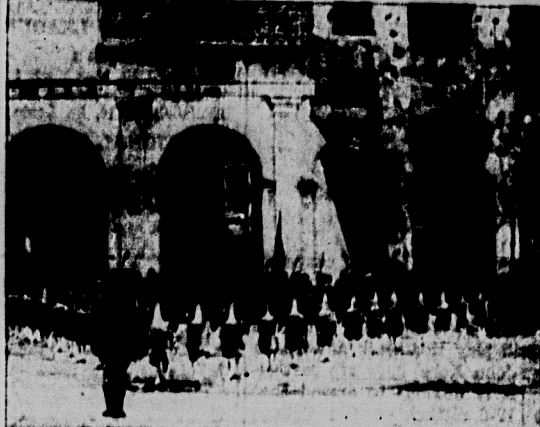

Pro and con of compulsory ROTC will be the topic of the second meeting of the Student Discussion Group tomorrow, at 7:30 p. m. in the Union organization rooms. William Martin, chairman of the group, stated.

The purpose of the organization is to allow a forum on controversial subjects, giving both sides as an aid in formulating opinion.

Many things are occurring in the world at this particular moment, including and excluding politics that severely affect the Michigan State college student. It is to his advantage to be able to hear both sides of the issues at hand. Lester Blum, committee member for this week's topic, said.

Visiting Rifle Teams to Have Corps Sponsors As Guests

Three cost corps sponsors from University of Illinois and Indiana university will be honor guests at the meeting of Pershing Rifle teams to be held tomorrow at 7 p. m. in the fieldhouse.

The sponsors, Lois Fullerton and Winnie Dorsey from Illinois and Virginia Austin of Indiana, will be guests of the Alpha Omicron Pi sorority, and East Mary Mayo dormitory, respectively.

TO ARRIVE TODAY

Visiting teams are expected to arrive on campus this evening and will look over the campus tomorrow morning and fire a rifle match. An individual contest to determine the best drilled cadet will be staged Friday afternoon.

Prizes for the rifle match and individual competition are to be awarded at conclusion of the meet. A loving cup will be presented to the team winner and medals will be given to each individual on the winning team.

TO FEATURE ZOUAVES

Featured attraction of the evening program will be the Jackson Zouaves, famous American Legion drill team, who have appeared all over the world. The Zouaves were at State last year for the Interfraternity and Big boys drum and bugle corps, a machine gun drill and firing exhibition for the infants, and a demonstration for the field artillery men from the ROTC of Michigan State college will also furnish a part of the evening's entertainment.

After the meet, a transferred dance will be held in the ballroom of Demonstration hall for all guests, with corps sponsors as special guests. Art Handland's band will furnish music.

Teams entered in the meet will represent University of Illinois, Western Kentucky State Teachers college, University of Indiana, and Michigan State college.

Student Nurses Plan Spring Frolic

Spring Frolic will be the theme of the informal dance sponsored by the college nursing students, Friday, May 10. The dance will be held at the Sparrow Nurses home from 8:30 p. m. to 12 midnight. The hospital nursing staff will compose the patrons.
