Injured Star

Is Going to See Grid Games This Fall from Portable Cot

By Norabelle Wilcox

One of the most interested pre-season enthusiasts of the coming football season is Tom Johnson, smiling Detroit junior, who handled a tackle position on Michigan State squads of 1940 and 1941.

Johnson was injured in an automobile accident last April, while on his way to Detroit to enlist in the marine reserve. A fractured right femur has kept him in Olin Memorial Health center since that time, where he has undergone a series of treatments, including tractions and casts.

Playing Screens

Workmen were installing screen doors at Mason hall this week as the height of the fly season approached and August waned.

The reason for this tardiness was neither official laxity nor priorities on materials, it appeared. A worker at the scene reported, "Wall, it's just all the ding-foozled red tape you gotta go through these days... takes a little time."

Busy Tomorrow

A bit of censored mail from Mexico City, Mex., brings word of the whereabouts of wandering Rolf Illsley, from Muskegon, student at Michigan State in parts of 1938, '39, '40, and '41. At different times during those years he has been in several foreign countries, toured the United States, and managed to spend term each year in East Lansing.

Registering in the tourist bureau as a visitor, Illsley made his observation: "I have come to the conclusion that down here 'manana' is the busiest day of the week."

Victory Notches?

Contrary to what some persons may think, the notches appearing in the Macklin field benches are not caused by rabbits, according to B and G men. However, the process of notching, which B and G men are doing, is called "rabbiting."

and is for the purpose of eliminating deterioration of the football seats by the elements. It also helps the seats to dry out quicker if it rains or snows shortly before game time, they explain. All seats are being reupholstered in their traditional gray preparation for the first football game with Wayne on Oct. 10.

Experiments at Psych Building May Lead to All-American Spice Flavors

Over in the basement of the psych building they're conducting experiments which may lead to public consumption of pickles with 100 per cent American flavor, and it's all on account of Japanese thrusts in the Far East. Because Jap advances have cut off the normal flow of spices from the Netherlands East Indies and China, Dr. F. W. Fabian, research professor of bacteriology, is experimenting with American-grown extracts in an attempt to find substitutes for the cloves, nutmeg, all-spice and cinnamon usually used in making pickles.

"The pickles we've prepared with extracts of orange, apple, peppermint, wintergreen, spearmint, and lemon have been even better tasting than the normal

Tom can take it when it comes to pain, or tough going, but the ache that is hard to endure comes from the realization that he will not be in the lineup this fall. However, friends are making arrangements to take him to the stadium where he will witness some of the games from a portable cot.

Six feet three inches tall, weighing 230 pounds, Tommy is able now to "cart" himself down the hall to the sunroom, as he says, "to give the bed a rest." He enjoys reading the sports forecasts, and listening to the radio, a gift of the Varsity club. Tom, majoring in physical education and history, says he has lots of time now to read and appreciate the books and magazines that are brought in by his friends.

Never very interested in women, Tom says he isn't burdened with visits from the fairer sex. He thinks that women aren't interested in a "guy with a busted leg." But according to Dr. Charles F. Holland, the hospital has received "thousands of calls" from his friends on the campus inquiring about the condition and recovery of Michigan State's popular, good-natured, football Gargantua.

MSC Veterinarians Attend Chicago AVMA Meeting

A delegation of more than 50 Michigan State faculty members and students is attending the 79th annual American Veterinary Medical association convention, concluding its four-day session today in Chicago.

Among the prominent veterinarians addressing the convention was Brig. Gen. Raymond A. Kelsner of the Veterinary corps.

variety, I think," Dr. Fabian says. "They have a sort of refreshing taste, especially the mint flavors."

Dr. Fabian said several pickle companies were already using combinations of the usual spices and native extracts in order to begin cultivating the public taste for flavored pickles.

"The ideal spice mixture is a combination of the heavy and light oils," he pointed out.

"At present, only the heavy oils—cloves, cinnamon, all-spice—are used, and the lighter home-grown oils are neglected. What the pickle companies are doing is moving to correct this."

Dr. Fabian said his researches have shown that the use of whole spices is extremely inefficient.

Knappen Becomes Air Force Officer

DR. M. M. KNAPPEN
... to leave Sept. 2 ...

Notified yesterday that he has been commissioned a captain in the army-air force, Dr. Marshall M. Knappen, head of the history and political science department, is to leave Michigan State college Sept. 2 for preliminary training at Miami Beach.

Doctor Knappen becomes the second Liberal Arts department head within a week to be called into the armed forces. Last week Dr. David Worcester, head of the English department, was granted a leave of absence to enter the naval arm.

Doctor Knappen came to Michigan State in the fall of 1939, and immediately assumed the role of department head. Previously he was a member of the University of Chicago staff.

An expert on international affairs, Doctor Knappen received his B.A. at Wooster (Ohio), his M.A. at Oxford, and his Ph.D. at Cornell.

Grid Site Is Changed

A shift in the site for the Michigan State - Washington State intersectional football clash was acknowledged yesterday by Ralph H. Young, Spartan athletic director.

Young said that the contest will be played at Gonzaga stadium in Spokane instead of at Pullman on Nov. 7. The move was made in conjunction with a new wartime program to schedule important intersectional games in large urbanized centers so fans will not have to use their tires getting to the stadiums.

Leininger to Attend War Gas Meeting

Prof. E. Leininger, who rounds out his work in the chemistry department with being senior war gas officer for Ingham county in the citizen's defense corps, will attend a three-day gas officers' conference in Detroit, Aug. 28 to 30.

In the near future, assistant gas officers will be trained on campus to assist in the defense against war gases. Included in the duties of these officers will be identification of war gases and the inspection and decontamination of food and water supplies.

Registrar Predicts Drop In Returning Students; Freshmen Total High

Dean Conrad Acts to Avert Likely Shortage in Women's Housing Accommodations; Temporary Quarters Are Planned

Enrollment at Michigan State college will slump from the 6,390 figure of last fall to approximately 5,500 this fall, predictions by Registrar R. S. Linton indicated yesterday.

Linton said he estimated the drop would cut the student body between 7 and 8 per cent from the 1941-42 average.

Calendar

Thursday and Friday, Sept. 3-4—Post-session final examinations; school closes.

Monday, Sept. 21—Freshman week begins.

Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Sept. 23-24-25—Fall term registration for upper-classmen.

Friday, Sept. 25—Movie in College auditorium, 8 p. m.

Saturday, Sept. 26—All-college dance, College auditorium, 9-12 p. m.

Monday, Sept. 28—Fall term classes begin.

Labor Day Show to Feature 4-H

A war model 4-H livestock show and a later-than-usual Farmer's Day go into combination in a special Labor Day program September 7 on the Michigan State college campus.

Usually held at the Michigan State Fair, which has been postponed for the duration, this year's 4-H show will be the largest ever held in the state, with more than 800 entries of livestock expected. Exhibits will be shown at the stadium and Demonstration hall.

Farmer's Day, later than usual this year, is the official "open house" for the college farms. Farmers inspect the various experiments, take home hints for better farming.

Ralph W. Tenny, short course director and program chairman, says that six farm products which the federal government has asked be given special emphasis on farms—sugar, beets, hemp, soy beans, pork, wool and dairy products—will be on display.

Merchandising Course Attracts Foresters

Fall enrollment figures indicate an increase in forestry students because of the new housing and lumber merchandising course, to be offered for the first time this fall, according to Prof. Paul Herbert, department head.

Urged by retail building material dealers to give training that directly applies to the building industry, the forestry department has carefully outlined the curriculum of this course to meet the need of these employers. Many retail lumbermen have already signified their willingness to cooperate by employing students during summer vacations.

Requirements in the new course include a minimum of six months of practical experience in some phase of the industry.

"Even though we expect about the same number of freshmen this year as last, when we had 2,079, decreases in the upper classes and in the graduate school will not keep up the pace," Linton said.

Women's Total Drops

Linton estimated that the drop in women students would at least equal that in men. He pointed out that many more lucrative positions are now open to women than in former years.

By far the largest drop will occur in the Liberal Arts division, it was indicated, with slight drops in every other division except Engineering, where a slight increase is expected. Freshman admissions in both Engineering and forestry have shown increases over 1941.

Act on Housing Problem

Dean of Women Elisabeth Conrad said this week that measures were being taken to avert the threatened shortage of women's living quarters, numerical seriousness of which could not be determined.

Recreation rooms in women's dormitories will be used as temporary quarters, holding about 20 women each, Miss Conrad said, and announced also the opening of a women's residence at 117 Fern street, where meals will be served but which will not be classified as a cooperative. Fourteen women will be accommodated.

Private homes will take care of the rest of the surplus and will be under the same rules as dormitories, Miss Conrad said.

The housing problem for men is complicated by the government's use of Wells hall for military barracks.

STATE NEWS NOTICE

With this edition the Michigan State News concludes publication until Sept. 26, at the beginning of fall term.

The daily State News will be delivered by carriers to all students living in campus dormitories, and fraternity, sorority and rooming houses within the city limits of East Lansing.

Students who commute from Lansing, East Lansing, rural areas and other towns in the vicinity may pick up their paper daily at the Union desk or another convenient point on campus to be designated at a later date. Because of the frequency of publication and excessive handling charges, no papers will be mailed to students.

Indicate your local address or your intention to pick up your copy at the Union desk on the State News delivery card at time of registration.

Ag Board Does Business 'Right Way'

WHEN the first Michigan State faculty members began to leave for service in the armed forces, even before Pearl Harbor, the State Ag board passed a ruling that clarified their standing on the matter.

They decided that the position of any facultyman going to serve his country would be held open till he returned.

As more and more State teachers go off to war, the wisdom of this ruling becomes more apparent. Even though instructors of the caliber needed for college work are practically impossible to hire on a part time basis today, the board is to be complimented for making its stand so definite. Other employers have made halfway promises to hold jobs open, and made replacements, with no such "We've hired you only till the man whose place you took comes back" stipulations.

But that's the basis on which new Michigan State faculty members are being hired today. And it's the only fair way to do it.

It's Been a Great Summer Session

WITH the appearance of issue No. 10 of the Summer State News, the end of the 27th summer session of Michigan State college approaches.

This session has been unique in several ways. It has enjoyed the largest enrollment in the history of summer school. It is the first term in the accelerated education program at State. It is also the first year that this paper has been published for the entire session.

Both faculty members and students who have sacrificed their usual vacations to help educate more men to the allied war needs are to be complimented. There are more pleasant and more lucrative things to do than study or teach during a Michigan summer.

The social and lecture committees especially have done a fine job in making the session more pleasant and diversified. Everyone who has taken part in the session can feel that he or she has done a patriotic duty, however small. The 1942 summer school, under the capable leadership of S. E. Crowe, supervised by President Hannah, must indeed be acclaimed a success.

Don't Write to Unknown Soldiers

LAST week the State News urged students to write their friends in the armed forces. Now the State News reiterates its encouragement, but asks that the writers use discrimination and discretion.

Here's the letter writing situation as it has developed recently: Don't write to a soldier, sailor, marine or coast guardsman unless you know him personally, say military officials.

It is claimed that misguided enthusiasm of many clubs and individual students has been harming the war effort. Wherein lies the rub?

Military officials say it is vital that secrecy be maintained about what organizations are overseas or on active war duty. Thus, correspondence with unknown persons by members of the armed forces might easily be a means of spies obtaining information that should be kept secret.

This does not mean that writing letters to soldiers who are relatives or friends should stop. This, in fact, is encouraged by officials of the armed forces, but unsolicited letters from persons unknown are not.

THINKIN' OUT LOUD

By Sheldon Moyer

ANOTHER summer has just about gone to pot, final examinations are just around the corner, bills keep coming in, the telephones don't stop ringing, somebody else didn't get their paper this morning—and on top of all this, my Aunt Emma writes that she wants me to keep an eye on Cousin Willis when he comes to school this fall.

There just isn't any justice in this ole world any more. At least you don't know Cousin Willis like I do. But why not forget about your troubles and mine—those troubles that are confined to the area between the Red Cedar river and Grand River avenue—and take a look at these:

In an unnamed Canadian port, the survivors of a torpedoed ship tell of chewing the tops of their shoes and allowing each man to wet his lips four times a day with a dwindling water supply during 41 days adrift on the Atlantic.

But in Cleveland, a business man complains to the management of a cafeteria that was not allowing enough sugar and implies that rationing is a government racket.

In Rome, Mussolini orders a further reduction of already inadequate milk rations.

And in New York, night club operators warn patrons that gin drinks probably will disappear within several weeks.

In New Guinea, four American flyers, forced down in the jungle, find an abandoned plane, patch up its wings with sheets, and make a getaway.

But in Illinois, four youths are killed when they try to make an "L" turn in a car traveling 85 miles an hour.

In Windsor, Ont., an aged widow is informed that her four sons in the Canadian army were reported missing after the Allied onslaught on Dieppe.

And in New York, four men are indicted for turning out counterfeit war savings stamps.

We could ramble on and on, but it's the same old story—no justice in this ole world any more. So maybe we shouldn't complain about trivial troubles around here. It won't be so hard keeping an eye on Cousin Willis next fall.

See you then!

Spartans At War

By ELLIS BRANDT

With the war progressing on fronts all over the world, the activities of Michigan State men in the services are also expanding.

Maynard Hill, former capitol correspondent of the State Journal and a member of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalism fraternity, has joined another member of S. D. X., Ken Kuhn, at Camp Roberts, Cal. Pvt. Hill, who joined the army volunteer officers' corps, was stationed first at Camp Custer.

A third member of Sigma Delta Chi, George Herbert, was part of the largest class ever to enter the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., last month.

After starting out as a cadet captain in the ROTC department, First Lt. William Beekman was recently promoted from second lieutenant and is now on duty overseas. A Lansing product, Lieut. Beekman was a member of Scabbard and Blade and Mortar and Ball, military societies.

ALONG THE WINDING CEDAR

By Len Barnes

THEY say the weather is a tricky subject, but people insist on talking about it. More times than we can count, faculty members and students who have suffered through a Summer session in East Lansing before, bring up the point.

"You certainly can't kick about the temperature being too hot for study this summer," they say in effect. And except for a couple of heat waves, it has been cool here. Of course, we can't see how anyone could study when it was any warmer, and it does furnish a good excuse for not hitting the books.

This condition seems to be prevalent all over the United States, with weather unrest in other parts of the world also. Experts blame it on the war.

They say war always causes a thermometer and barometer to act up. Not being a weather expert, we wouldn't know.

Memory of the fine weather this summer will undoubtedly affect favorably the enrollment in the 1943 "fourth term." It may help to break registration records set this year. And it may be an indicator of weather to come—meaning this fall.

Usually a cool summer suggests a long warm autumn. There is nothing so delightful on a warm fall day as the shade of the M. S. Campus. Then it is that nature is at her best, and "all's right with the world."

But please, Mr. Weatherman, make it cold enough for coats and earmuffs the day of the Michigan game.

The Sporting Scene

By Bruce Monks

AS WE recently were glancing through the Michigan Daily, published by the students of the University of Michigan, an article by Mike Dann, sports editor of the aforementioned sheet, caught our eyes.

Mr. Dann undoubtedly read our article of last week's State News concerning State's football prospects and commented thusly, with:

"Coach Charley Bachman, sly Michigan State mentor, isn't letting Crisler get the jump on him as far as practice goes. He issued a call for 48 men (a good guess—ed. note) to start working out on Sept. 9.

"But from all indications, Bachman could have started practicing with the bunch he now has five years ago, and he would still have a very mediocre team."

"Not one Spartan lineman of last year's team has returned this season and only two backs with any experience at all will answer Bachman's call.

"The school from East Lansing hasn't much of a freshman squad to choose from, and unless Bachman cancels all his games except Wayne, State will take an awful beating.

"Some years you got it and other years you didn't get it. This year is an 'ain't for State."

With such an outburst against our Spartans, one might expect us to refute the words of Mr. Dann, but strangely enough, they have a slight semblance of truth.

It is true that out of 17 lettermen, only two were starters last year. But many of them have seen much action. Before starting to criticize the Wolverine sports columnist's words, let us look up some records.

In 1933, when Bachman coached his first Michigan State football team, only nine lettermen returned for fall practice. That inexperienced team won four games, lost two, and tied two, including Michigan.

In the next year the same number of veterans returned, but this time the Spartan warriors won eight of their nine games, and defeated Michigan, 21-19.

Although these figures do not prove that Michigan State will win all of its games this fall, it does demonstrate that Bachman and his assistants are able to go a long way with little material.

So keep your shirt on Mike, because no Bachman-coached team is going to take an awful beating from anybody, including the Wolverines. Be prepared for one helluva battle Oct. 3.

Spartan Gridders Named for Varsity Football Practice

Schlademan to Replace Pogor as Assistant Line Coach

Coach Charles W. Bachman recently mailed out invitations to 47 Michigan State football players to report for practice on Sept. 9. Included in the group are 17 major letter winners of other years, eight backs and nine linemen; nine reserves and 20 sophomores.

Because of Edmund S. Pogor's resignation to join the navy as an ensign, Karl A. Schlademan, varsity track coach, will take over Pogor's duties on the football staff. Schlademan was also assistant football coach at Washington State before coming to State to assume the track coach's position.

Forty-Seven Are Listed

The complete list of those invited to the early practice is as follows:

Kenneth Balge, Dearborn; William W. Beardslee, Beaverton; Howard Beyer, Muskegon; Gordon Bischman, LaGrange, Ill.; Louis J. Brand, Grand Rapids; Paul T. Carter, Marquette; Don E. Chamberlain, Ovid; William Chirota, Detroit; Alger Conners, Pontiac; Fenwick Crane, Pleasant Ridge; Glenn E. Deibert, Pontiac; Royden E. Dygert, East Lansing; Jack W. Fenton, Richmond; Robert H. Fischer, Benton Harbor; Peter A. Fornari, Detroit; Roy G. Fraleigh, Detroit.

Other Players Named

William K. Gaylord, Pontiac; Russell L. Gilpin, Detroit; Morgan Gingrass, Marquette; Stanley V. Gunn, East Lansing; Harry Huber, Detroit; Glenn H. Johnson, Grosse Ile; Ernest Keckinen, Detroit; Richard N. Kieppe, Lansing; Donald E. Leclair, Wyandotte; Richard W. Mangrum, Durand; Frank S. Manko, Pontiac; Robert A. McNeil, Phoenix, Ariz.; Edo Menocotti, Detroit; William Monroe, Three Rivers; Austin J. Miller, Detroit; Mike Miktinac, Hermansville; Wm. F. Milliken, Chicago; Vincent Mroz, East Chicago, Ind.

Bernard E. Neubert, Chicago; Robert W. Otting, Flint; James Pingel, Mt. Clemens; Walter L. Pawlowski, East Chicago, Ind.; George Radulescu, Imlay City; Bernard G. Roskopp, Mt. Clemens; P. Edward Ripmaster, Grand Rapids; Theodore G. Smolinski, Rogers City; Elbert Stark, Geneva, Ill.; Robert C. Thomas, Detroit; Leslie Von Eberstein, Royal Oak; Eugene Wright, Chicago.

In the independent league, the DZVs defeated Mayo Boys Tuesday night, 4-2, and the Twilighters sunk the Mayo Boys last Wednesday, 10-0.

Tennis Finalists To Play Sunday

Finals for the Lansing City tennis tournament will be held in the college clay courts at 10:30 Sunday afternoon, with Michigan State well represented in both men's and women's divisions.

Seeded No. 4 in the men's division is Rex Norris, '34, who was Michigan Intercollegiate champion during his days at Michigan State. Herb Hoover and Roger Cesna, varsitymen who will be returning for next season, are also in the finals.

Marshall Goodwin, resident adviser for Abbot hall, is another State alumnus in the men's division, while Mrs. Goodwin is seeded No. 1 in the women's finals. Peggy Ball, daughter of tennis coach C. D. Ball, and Prof. D. J. Parker of the woman's physical education department, are also among the women's entries.

Intramural Loop Games Discontinued Until Fall

Because of the lack of interest shown in the softball leagues, the Michigan State News is omitting the league standings this week. In the dormitory division, there has not been a game played since last Wednesday evening.

Topsy-Turvy Institution Takes Only Lowest Quarter of Prep Graduates

Tabor College Accepts Only Bottom 25 Per Cent As Dr. O'Brian Introduces His Own Ideas In 80-Year Old Iowa Institution

BY ASSOCIATED COLLEGIATE PRESS

TABOR, IA.—A unique college, which will accept only those boys who finish high school in the lowest 25 per cent of their class, has been established in this southwest Iowa town of fewer than 1,000 residents.

This amazing entrance requirement, setting the educational world topsy-turvy, was created by Dr. Robert Enlow O'Brian, preacher, educator, politician, and business man, the new president of Tabor college.

Former president of Morning-side college at Sioux City, and former Iowa secretary of state, Dr. O'Brian has always wanted to run a college for the "lower one-fourth" who seldom get invitations to college campuses these days. Last winter he got his chance. The president of Tabor resigned, and the college faced its second closing in its 80-year history. Some of the trustees asked Dr. O'Brian to take over. He agreed, on the understanding that he could introduce his scholarship ideas.

Started With Dozen

Last September the school opened with a dozen students; Dr. O'Brian hopes to add 26 each semester, until the maximum of 200, set by the new by-laws, is reached. The course is what Dr. O'Brian describes as the "old liberal arts course, brought up to date." All students must master typing and shorthand, as well as German and Spanish.

English composition is taught as a "remedial" course, stressing correct spelling and use of clear, coherent, proper sentences. Mathematics is of the statistical and accounting varieties. The rest of the course follows traditional liberal arts lines.

Graduates should be able to enter business or industry, Dr. O'Brian feels. He hopes to see them get jobs as private secretaries, shipping clerks and similar positions, and "with the prestige of an A. B. degree and the training of a solid, practical course behind them," he believes they can work up to higher executive posts or to ownership of their own businesses in a few years.

Part of the school's programs, says Dr. O'Brian, is to have students entertained occasionally by business men so they get to know what these men are like and learn to talk their language. There will be no intercollegiate athletics, because Dr. O'Brian feels that they add nothing of value to the student's life.

However, every boy must master some sport that he can use throughout life, such as hunting, fishing, bowling and billiards.

No rules are to be invoked, except those made by the boys themselves.

"Wild Animals," is the title of Howard Cleaves' talk. He will be at State Saturday, Nov. 14. Herbert Knapp will speak and show movies on South America Saturday, Nov. 21.

He will be followed by William Beebe, an expert on ocean photography and underwater life. Beebe will take as his topic "Undersea Pictures," and will appear Saturday, Dec. 5.

Concluding fall term adventure will be Aloha Baker, on "Australia," Saturday, Dec. 12.

Giltner Elected to Post

Dr. Ward Giltner, dean of the Michigan State college Veterinary Science division, was elected a vice-president of the American Veterinary Medical association at a meeting in Chicago yesterday.

"We therefore advocate the use of extracts, which make use of all the oil, in order to conserve the spice supply," he said.

In another war-born experiment, Dr. Fabian is perfecting a method of preserving vegetables with brine. "The scarcity of tin for cans may make preservation of food by this method a necessity later," he said. "Several manufacturers have already expressed their interest in it."

Although he can already preserve fresh peas indefinitely with a brine solution, he is now experimenting further to find whether the salt harms the nutritional value in any way before presenting it commercially, Dr. Fabian said.

CAMPUS CHURCHES

By HARRY WHITLEY

From all available information, this summer has seen a greatly accelerated religious program carried out by East Lansing churches.

This has been necessitated by the increased summer enrollment at M.S.C., the stationing of army, navy and aviation personnel in the community, and the influx of new families into East Lansing. Many students have matriculated during the summer term in accordance with the three-year plan, and this has meant a host of new students checking up on religious facilities.

Five religious organizations now serve the student body. Peoples church, an interdenominational organization, will have its regular Sunday worship service at 11 a. m. Sunday. The Rev. H. G. Gaige, assistant minister, will preach on the subject "Storm-tossed Souls."

At the Chapel of Christ the King (Episcopal) the 8:45 a. m. Holy Communion will also end the Vacation church school which has been meeting for the past 10 days. Children of the faculty and families of East Lansing will attend this service and remain for a breakfast in the adjoining parlors of Canterbury house. The Rev. C. W. Brickman, Episcopal college chaplain, will speak on the school's theme, "Prayer and Worship."

The subject at the First Church of Christ, Scientist, for Aug. 30 is "Christ Jesus." The Christian Science congregation meets in the Masonic temple on M.A.C.

Masses will be offered on Sunday at St. Thomas Aquinas church at 9 and 11 a. m. by the Rev. Fr. C. M. Winters, pastor. The College Lutheran church will meet in the State theater at 10:30 a. m.

"Doc" is a busy man.

Besides being a virtual foster-father to about 435 in Mason hall, Dr. L. J. Luker functions as assistant professor in the department of education, president of the Lansing branch of the National Vocational Guidance association and chairman of the state commission of occupational information in guidance.

As a side line he plans the vocational information series of radio programs broadcast over WKAR Monday afternoons at 4 p. m.

Has Four Main Hobbies

But when it comes to recreation Doc is no desk-bound genius, his four main hobbies being riding a bicycle, playing tennis, horseback riding, and swimming.

Dr. and Mrs. Luker came to Michigan State college in the fall of 1937 and acted as assistant counselors at Mason hall. In '38 the Lukers were put in charge of these activities and since then have lived at the dormitory and worked out the personnel problems, adjustments, general behavior, and planned the dorm social activities.

Before coming to Michigan State, Luker taught for years at the University of Idaho and acted as counselor one year there. Earlier he was a graduate assistant for years at the University of Minnesota where he took his Ph.D. degree.

Forget Keys

There is one request made him so often at the dormitory, according to Luker, that he almost read it upon a student's face when he appears in the door.

It is "Doc, I can't get in, can't imagine how it happens, but I must have left my key in my other pants pocket in a room."

So "Doc" Luker draws, see," sticks his tongue in his cheek, whips out his master key and unlocks another door.
