Our Living Costs Still Run Rampant

The Home Front's trend of steady inflation, still threatens us with high living costs as the vastly increased buying power competes for scarce goods not yet under price control.

Today, we are paying $1.35 for what was a dollar's worth of food in 1939. Prices of foods not under control have risen in the past 10 months. Food products and services under price ceilings have also risen.\[...\]

Grin and Bear It

DEPOT UNIVERSITY of Michigan supernumerary students yesterday put in a day's work on the selling of freshmen on their pets, when the Michigan Daily came out with a story explaining that the tiny mice and big rats were being sold for $7.50 a pair, without test, and required as a cash payment.

It seems that the custom of petting freshmen at the U. of M. has been developed for 10 years, and that Pole sold at 50 cents a pair, without test, and required as a cash payment.

The Daily did wonder in a story exposing the pitiable fact that they wouldn't be paid if they sold the extra pairs. Freshmen are considered to be in a rush, by a smart market appreciation who is well versed in the art of their own business.

And the idea of miserable students wearing pets is a good one. First of all, it's a very poor sight, and secondly, that they aren't inside, and that they aren't missing.

For the first time in Michigan State college history, a new Honor Program, presented last spring, is being adopted by the Liberal Education Division, it was disclosed by Dean Emmons.

Those departments in the college that include art, economics, English, foreign languages, history and political science, journalism, mathematics, music, philosophy and sociology.

The object of the Honor Program is to enable a limited number of students to substitute independent and informal methods of study for part of the routine requirements now in force, Dean Emmons stated.

Reduce Class Hours

Rather than carry a heavy load of class hours and many short courses, the student will attempt to master important books and subjects in the course of an adequate period, and guided by faculty advice, replacing daily or weekly quizzes and examinations, and reports and essays will take the place of examinations.

Students are considered eligible for such work on the condition that they receive a grade of 1.0 or better. Dean Emmons explained that intellectual promise will be considered and such work will be given to honoree work by formal action of the College faculty.

Staff Heads Direct

An honor council, composed of three professors to be elected by the departmental faculty, will have committees on honors, with duties similar to those for the general faculty; it will plan and direct such work, committee chairman and prepare grade computations and also judge the honors thesis, essay and work.

Honor work will be carried on by seminars, private conferences, chosen groups, and other ways under the direction of the department or division, and it will be necessary for every honors student to complete all General Arts requirements, through a committee directed by the council.

Honor work is outstanding in its importance, Dean Emmons said, and mental power, all intellectual growth, the student the written essays and projects throughout the year.
