Here's Patriotic, Profitable Pickle

A CRITICAL labor shortage on farms exists at the present time. This is especially true in regard to Michigan's sugar beet crop. In previous years Michigan workers have been imported to harvest the beet, but better opportunities have developed in the land of King Carson have attracted them this year, and Michigan farmers are left short-handed.

Consumers should be concerned about the matter as farmers. Sugar being the important commodity that it is, we are not only losing millions of pounds of sugar waste in unharvested beet fields.

The beet crop must be harvested within the next few weeks. A letter from Professor John Hannah, acting jointly with other presidents of schools and colleges in the state, declared: "Harvesting is in full swing, and it is incumbent upon everyone to cooperate with students and staff.*

Members of the faculty have already volunteered their services and automobiles to provide transportation for students who will be paid for their work. It is now up to the student body to come forward and help cope with this emergency. As division Dean E. L. Anthony is the man to contact.

Scissors Pick OSU As Top Gridiron Team

Stakeholders, coaches, players, and fans alike have been buzzing about the upcoming football season, with Ohio State University's football team being favored to emerge as the top gridiron team. The Buckeyes, led by head coach Urban Meyer, have been a dominant force in recent years, and many predict they will continue their success in the upcoming season.

The landscape of college football is always evolving, and this year is no exception. Teams like Clemson, Alabama, and Oklahoma are also viewed as strong contenders, but Ohio State is currently one of the favorites to win the national championship.

As fans prepare for the season, they are excited to see how the Buckeyes will fare against their competitors. With a strong roster and a talented coaching staff, Ohio State is poised to make a run at the top spot.

While the team's success is certainly a matter of speculation, the excitement and anticipation for the upcoming season is palpable. Fans are eager to see how the Buckeyes will perform, and the team itself is focused on preparing for the challenges that lie ahead.

In the end, only time will tell who will emerge as the top gridiron team, but for now, Ohio State holds the top spot in the rankings. Fans are counting down the days until the season begins, ready to cheer on their beloved Buckeyes as they strive for success on the gridiron.
Five United Nations Heroes, Students Will Bring War Home to Spartans

LOUISE BETH

Representing the youth of the United Nations, five outstanding students and students from the Allied battlefronts will visit M. S. C. next Friday to give State students a deeper comprehension of the total war which we are fighting.

Although this delegation of five United Nations heroes came to the United States to address the International Student Assemblies of the M. S. C. and the College of Education, they were persuaded to postpone their departure for a few weeks in order to meet students and faculty members at representative American colleges.

So that State students may have every opportunity of meeting and hearing the delegation, student council has arranged a full and varied schedule. Included in the day’s activities are luncheons for invited faculty and student council members, a tour of the campus and college, a coffee and informal discussion in the Union, a viewing of the mentioned and a special program in College auditorium from 8 to 9 p.m., and an evening program in College auditorium from 8 to 9 p.m., and an evening.

No admission will be charged for either the afternoon or evening program, or for the “evening program.”

STALINGRAD

V. M. A. students

The mood of the American students of the Volga University who are teaching in Stalingrad is one of a world united, as they have expressed it. They say that the American students are as friendly toward the Allied soldiers as they are toward their Russian countrymen. The students work in close cooperation with the Allied forces and consider themselves as part of the Allied team.

Many of the American students have made friends with the Russian students and have been invited to their homes. They have been given Russian clothes and have been introduced to Russian culture.

The American students have been working on educational projects in the city of Stalingrad and have been a great help to the Russian people.

One of the American students said: “We are happy to be here and to do our part in the great work of victory.”

STALINGRAD BATTLE BREAKS OUT AGAIN

RUSSIA

The battle for Stalingrad has been raging for weeks, with both sides suffering heavy losses. The Russian Red Army has been fighting bravely to hold the city against the German invaders.

The battle has been described as one of the most brutal and costly battles in history. Both sides have suffered heavy losses, with the Russian Army suffering the greater number of casualties.

Despite the heavy losses, the Russian Army has held the city and has inflicted heavy losses on the German invaders.

The battle continues to rage and it is expected that the fighting will continue for some time. The outcome of the battle is uncertain, but it is clear that both sides are determined to win.

(Cotton Senators Defied by Jeffers)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12 (AP) — A large group of cotton state senators, including the state’s chief executive, today announced that they will not vote to extend the embargo on the sale of cotton to Japan.

Senators from several states who are leaders in the cotton industry have been seeking to delay the sale of cotton to Japan, which is engaged in a war with the United States.

The senators announced that they would not vote for the extension of the embargo, but that they would continue to oppose the sale of cotton to Japan.

The senators called on the Japanese government to cease hostilities and to negotiate a peaceful solution to the conflict.
