The news that the army is planning to draft men between the ages of 18 and 19 hits a lot of Michigan State college underclassmen right between the eyes.

They don't know where to turn. Many of them, superpatriotic in their zeal, are planning to drop out of college and enlist. They don't stop to realize that this is as much a war of education as anything else.

A great percentage of them haven't heretofore given much thought to immediate service with the army, and consequently know nothing of the enlisted reserve or naval reserve programs whereby they may continue their college training, going into the armed services with a very good chance of becoming officers.

Keep Your Shirts On' its:

College men 18 and 19 years old would do well, in common parlance, to "keep their shirts on," and remain where they are. When the new draft measure does go through they will be in the same position as men of 20 and 21 years and there are a lot of them-at Michigan State college today. If they join one of the reserve programs, they won't be taken any sooner than any other reservists.

And regardless of what happens, the army will not be able to process them fast enough to take them out of school in fall term. The army needs men, but it needs them trained, and every term of education a man has before he goes to fight will be an extra bit to match against

In spite of Secretary of War Stimson's statement about college enlisted reservists going in at the end of the current term, there is no definite indication today that any of the enlisted reservists will go in before the end of the col-

Not All to Be Called

Stimson has since amended the statement to say that not all college men in the enlisted reserve will be taken at the end of the present term. This definitely points to a selection of enlisted reservists based on merit, with the poorest students going first.

An Associated Press story elsewhere in this paper tells of plans to place the best of the 18 and 19 year men in colleges for training. Every man who drops out to enlist. and is placed in a college by the army, will have wasted a term of education, when time is so essential to victory.

A joint military board with representatives of the army. navy and marines, will be at Michigan State Monday, Nov. 2. Officer candidate enlistments will be discussed then for the three units at a general meeting of all men stu-

It is the patriotic duty of every man at Michigan State to get the full story at that time before enlisting where he is not needed most.

Olson Walks Briskly Again, and All Because of a Dog

If a school teacher of 1890m walked into a modern day classroom at Michigan State college and saw Paul Olson's dog lying LETTERS on the floor, she probably would throw up her hands and shriek; "What is this younger generation coming to!"

But everything is legal, old airl, for the beautiful brown and tiack German shepherd owned by Olson, is a member of the famed guide dog clan. If, however, stu-dents see Olson give what they think is a savage yank on the chain, it is all a part of the game, Oison stated. It doesn't hurt the dog as much as one might think, and really is necessary.

The leader dog cannot lead Otson to a designated spot. That is a common misconception. The dog merely keeps Olson on the path he desires, and warns him about curbs or approaching cars.

first annual Michigan The State Woman's day, with women taking over campus activities, is being scheduled for Wednesday, October 28, according to General Chairman Kay Welch, H. E. '44. Woman's day will give women students an opportunity to conduct affairs and will also replace the traditional Co-ed Carnival in acquainting new students with women's organizations, Miss Welch said. The theme for the day will be "We can take responsibility-watch us prove it."

Tentative plans for the day include a general convocation with a keynote speaker to be an-nounced later and an open luncheon. During the afternoon all womens' organizations will sponsor booths in the Union lounge to acquaint new students with work of the groups. There will be an evening program in the Union ballroom.

Nazis Press Back Reds as Winter NipsVolgaFront

By HENRY C. CASSIDY

MOSCOW, Oct. 16 (AP)-The Germans, in a new offensive spurt, hurled two infantry divi-sions supported by 100 tanks and huge air formations against northwestern Stalingrad Thurs-day, and "succeeded in slightly pressing back our troops," Russians announced early Friday on the 53rd day of siege.

This German gain, made in a race with approaching winter, cost the enemy 1,500 dead and about 45 of their tanks, the midnight communique said.

The fresh German attempt to reduce battered Stalingrad occurred as freezing cold, already gripping the vast Russian front from the Arctic to Moscow, was creeping on south toward Stalingrad.

South of the besieged Volga river city the Russians said an-other 300 Germans were slain, and five guns and six block-houses and two munition dumps were destroyed by one Red army

The Nazi blockhouse garrisons either were killed or captured, the communique added.

Above the city where the Red army has driven wedges into the Nazi flank extending from the river to Stalingrad, the communique reported only indecisive fighting of local importance . The Russians there were still attacking however, and using their artillery to disperse German concentrations.

In the mid-Caucasian area of Mozdok the Soviet bulletin said the Red army fought off three successive Nazi attacks. The Russians in this area also were reported to have broken into a series of Nazi trenches where several scores of Germans were Fighting also flared on the Bryansk front, about 210 miles southwest of Moscow. Two German attacks were reported to have been repulsed.

Flying is now a required course at the United States Military academy, West Point.

Rain Hampers Debut of Hunting Season

LANSING, Oct. 15 (AP) General unfavorable weather spoiled the opening of the lower peninsula upland small game season, it was reported today. but only sunshine is needed to make the coming week-end a bountiful one for sportsmen

The state conservation department said the number of hunters and the kill was reduced by rain in most sections of the lower peninsula. Foliage still was heavy in most sections, hampering the movements of both hunters and their dogs.
