House to Vote Today on New Draft Law

Senate Committee Votes Out Its Own Bill; Little Opposition Expected

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16 (AP)—The Senate Commerce Committee yesterday unanimously voted out a bill to extend the Selective Service Act for four years while the Senate arranged to consider and pass a similar measure Saturday.

Foreseeing little or no opposition, congressional leaders settled on placing the bill in the Roosevelt's hands at the earliest possible moment.

While the house stood ready to vote on the bill, an obstacle to immediate passage arose in the form of a protest by Senators McCarthy (R., Iowa), the Republican floor leader that many members of the senate returned to the floor in a week ago on the assurance of the administration that no legislation would be taken up during that period.

Under the circumstances, although bitterly in favor of the bill, McCarthy said he would not be able to oppose any motion to have the bill up until the house will have been notified and given ample time to consider it.

Veto Delay in Senate

While the Senate leaders had planned to bring the bill before the Senate on Tuesday, it appeared that it probably would not come up before Thursday or Friday, or possibly not until the following week.

The measure approved by the upper house on Monday was drafted by Senator Gurney (R., Wash.) and is similar to one that was considered by the Senate in 1941.

Approximately 80,000 Michigan youths are now registered for the draft, although the state has a quota of 88,600, according to the draft board. Approximately 500,000 youths are now registered for the draft, although the state has a quota of 88,600, according to the draft board.

If it is to be expected that the state's enlistment quota of 88,600 youths will be filled soon, the state draft board has announced that it will try to fill the quota as quickly as possible.

Soldiers Show Up State Students

What's all the talk about Michigan State needing a cheering section? We have one... but it isn't made up of students.

The Army arrived at game time for the Wayne college band -- a mighty roar from the stands... from men who had just watched the game with half sold. Every man-jeck put out 65 cents to watch the stadium, as provided in legislation enacted last year.

During the first period, the soldiers, quartered on the campus, marched to the Bell Tower, where they were led in a State cheer by State cheerleaders. They clearly drowned out any spirit the State students could unfold.

Cheerleader Ernie Guy has a remedy for this situation.
It doesn't mean to cut down the volume of the soldiers. He wants to organize a special cheering section to act as a backbone for Spartan spirit. Students who take an interest in athletics should give Ernie all the languor they can muster.

New Elementary Teaching Curriculum to Be Continued; Enrollment Peaks

By SALLY OWENS

The Elementary Teaching curriculum which began this fall and continues through the year, has been well received and there are already many interested students who have registered in the course.

The first year the college has offered the elementary teaching field and it is proving popular, not only with members of the elementary grade staff, but also with other students desiring to enter that field.

Students entering the course are made up of freshmen, sophomores and many transfers from Normal and Liberal Arts colleges. It was reported that about 150 students were interested in the field, and that the full-time student teaching methods and related courses in education.

The two new courses which were 'added' are a one-year course leading to a Church Layman's Certificate for teaching jobs, and a three-year degree program earning an Elementary Provisions certificate.

The two new faculty members responsible for these courses are Professor A. L. Huggett, who will teach the elementary courses in education at the college, and who will direct the work for the provisional course in education; and Miss Corinna Wilson, who will teach the elementary courses in education at the college and who will be responsible for the joint teacher's certificate with the state.
