Thought for the Day

"When college students are faced with the problem of picking up extra income to pay extra tax for the past year, then you can be sure that all is not well in this old world." But that's exactly the problem that Jim Allen, of the junior sophomore class, has. The number of students who realize they must do more to pay for their education is growing. In fact, many students are finding that their financial needs are greater than their income. This problem is not limited to the junior class, but is faced by students in all years. In fact, the problem is so widespread that many students are looking for ways to supplement their income. Some are taking part-time jobs, while others are enrolling in additional courses to receive extra credits. In any case, it seems that more students are realizing the importance of being financially independent.

Math Department Reports Success in Instructor-Borrowing Policy

The cosmopolitan atmosphere around the mathematics department is given a boost by the new "borrowing policy" as recently brought about by the administration.

Because of so many vacancies in the department, plans were made to obtain professors from other departments for mathematics teaching. The result is that entire botany, farm crops, English and zoology faculty members are now trying their hand at trigonometry and algebra.

Those teachers from other departments who are cooperating with the math department include Prof. J. T. Backer of the music department; Prof. H. C. Brown and R. T. Zeiter, farm crops; and Miss Margaret M. Anderson, secretary for the orientation office.

History is repeating itself in the case of Prof. H. T. Darlington, head of the botany department, who taught mathematics under Prof. L. C. Plant.

Offices are being held by Prof. Harrison Hunt, head of the zoology department, C. F. Lawrence, director of English, and H. W. Lewis, instructor of botany.
