Michigan Shovels Out as Storm Continues

The wind that swept over Michigan, blanketing roads with snow drifts, abated Wednesday morning. Many of the people who found themselves out of the heavy snow were those who had been county roads cleared. The residents of main villages were those who had been helped, however.

Little bone-chilling cold was shivering residents, who already had been caught from the most bitter cold of this winter, for the weather forecast indicates "continued cold." The mercury in these weather stations dropped to low as 20 below zero at High Point, 20 degrees below at Kaukaska, and 16 degrees below at Marquette. Only two temperatures above zero were recorded, one at Jackson and the other at Marquette.

Northern Arm Gains 17 Miles in One Sweep

The American air arm has advanced about 17 miles across the Rhine and has swung around to the south, a statement made by an Army official yesterday.

"Progress has been made in the past 48 hours," the official said, "and we have made it from the north and south." The official said that the American forces have been advancing at a rate of 10 to 15 miles per day.

The Current Scene on War Training

The war manpower commission and army and navy training staffs, in constant contact with America's leading educators, are hard at work on the administrative problems of the army-navy plan for sending service-men to the colleges for technical courses. Here are the steps that have been taken, and are being taken:

1. In accordance with the order which specifies that the method of selecting the schools will be determined by a board set up by Paul V. McNutt, the manpower director has met several times with educators and the final recommendations are expected to be presented to President F.D.R.

2. After the method of selection of colleges is established, the joint army-navy-WMC committee will actually select the specific colleges. This committee is composed of three members of each army, navy, and WMC, has been meeting once a week for several weeks now. On Dec. 11, six days before the plan was announced to the public, the committee sent out questionnaires to all colleges in each field of the exact facilities available. A committee member reports that practically all of those questionnaires have been answered. The joint army-navy-WMC committee is headed by Dr. Edward C. Elliott, president of Purdue university, and chief of the division of professional and technical employment training of the War Manpower commission.

3. The officers working with the "specialists"—recommended by the American Council on Education—plan its curriculum. These panels consist of leading educators in each field who have been called to Washington to work out the study courses. So far a basic course and some advanced technical courses have been formulated. The army will put its college-trainees through a 12-week course, possibly consisting of 23 hours of classroom work, 28 hours of study, and 2 and 2 hours of military drill per week.

Navy officials are drawing an already established navy advisory council on educational consultation on their curriculum planning. This advisory committee is composed of members of the Joint Base in the main and recommendations are expected to be made about a year ago to help the navy plan training courses for its college reserves. Men sent back to college by the navy will study for 16 weeks, and the army plans a 9-week course, possibly providing for a 60-hour work week, of which 9 hours will be devoted to military drill, and the remaining 51 hours to regular studies. The navy expects to have its curriculum completed by Feb. 1.

5. Advising the army's "panels of specialists" and the navy's educational advisory group is an all-over consultation group, composed of members of the Office of Education and the American Council on Education.

Although the army and navy are setting up courses and will give periodic tests to check the progress of service men assigned to the colleges, the actual day-to-day teaching will be left to the discretion of the colleges themselves.

Army Air Forces May Take MSC Teachers After Winter Term

By DEE DEERING

Army Air Corps representatives recently visited Michigan State campus to interview faculty men between the ages of 25-35 for possible army teacher material, Dean L. C. Emmet revealed.

The army needs teachers badly and spring term when enrollment is decreased, there will need be as much need for teachers in departments that are not considered vital to the war effort. From that group of instructors that are not corps is planning to obtain some of the teachers for the corps.

The armed forces have found that army men, even though they are highly trained in these specialized courses, do not necessarily make good teachers. Emmet observed that is the reason the army is interviewing men who have had years of teaching training, he added.

Out of 25 faculty men, reviewed by the army corps, 15 were found eligible. The selection process was so far as yet, nothing has been decided as to where these men will be assigned.

In their group of songs, the first of which contained four religious numbers, the second including typical Cossack songs, and the last which led to the famous Russian ruber (duet), the Cossacks repeatedly brought thunderous applause and cheers.

The program was well balanced with several dancing songs interspersed with gaiety, each of which the Cossacks delighted the audience with expected yells, whistles and exclamations.

"At the present time a large number of these men in the Army Reserve, awaiting selection, at recruiting stations. It is expected that these men will be called in the near future to approximately 100 colleges throughout the country. In localities where flying fields are convenient, the colleges selected will be some as soon as the list is completed."
