SPARTANS AT WAR

By: Anne Logan

It is another new book behind the gate at Michigan State University. The book is called "The Spartan," and it is a collection of stories written by students and faculty who have been at the university during World War II.

The book contains contributions from many people, including the editor, George VanHorn, and several professors. It features stories about experiences during the war, as well as anecdotes and reminiscences from people who were at Michigan State during the war years.

The book is a way for the university to remember and honor the contributions of its students during this difficult time in history.
