THE LESS SAID
BY NETA AKERMAN

The chief difference between the U. S. war and Great Britain's war, in the eyes of the University of Texas Literary and Debating Society president, is the aggressor. The aggressor in war is the one that inaugures hostilities. The U.S. is not an aggressor in this war and is not initiating hostilities. The U.S. is not trying to conquer, but is trying to prevent a possible conquest. It is trying to stop the aggression of others. The aggressor is the one that is trying to conquer when it starts the war.

We've attacked it not without good reason, the President has said. He has definitely stated that there wasn't any chance of this kind of thing happening again. If they are not able to stop the aggressor in this war, they might as well go back to the dark ages and try to live by the law of the jungle. They don't want to help the aggressor, but they want to get back to the dark ages and live by the law of the jungle.

There is a general desire to make this war the last war. People want peace and they want to see an end to wars. They are tired of fighting and they want to see an end to the suffering and destruction that comes with war. People are tired of deaths and injuries and they want to see an end to the destruction of property and buildings.

We should make this war the last war. We should not let it happen again. We should not let the aggressor win. We should make sure that the aggressor is stopped and that peace is maintained.

We would like to see an end to wars and a lasting peace. We would like to see the world in peace and harmony. We would like to see a better world where people can live without fear of war. We would like to see a world where people can live in peace and harmony.

We should make this war the last war. We should not let it happen again. We should not let the aggressor win. We should make sure that the aggressor is stopped and that peace is maintained.
