Hannah, Conrad Defend Hours Plan Under Fire by Pan-Hellenic Council

The plan to have State women get up at 7:30 a.m. and see to bed at 11:30 p.m. was welcomed by Professor John A. Hannah, president of the Pan-Hellenic Council, as "excellent training for young women to keep regular hours." Miss Joan A. Hannah, president of the Women's Auxiliary to the Pan-Hellenic Council, favored the plan as well.

Hannah's statement was given after the plan had been under fire. A week from campus groups finding it difficult to cooperate with these regulations. These objections were refused, however. The new plan will be effective after the winter break.

The plan, which is expected to catch on after the winter break, is based on the idea that women can have more leisure time.

Air Students' Cagney Canine Mascot Finds Life Wonderful in the Army

Nurse Winnie with caption "Littlest" found down in the barrel and brought back to the base in a box. She was the cutest little dog and quickly became a favorite of the students. And when the students went on leave, they would often leave her behind with the nurses. She was a typical small dog with a black nose and friendly brown eyes. She was lovingly captivated and became a favorite of the students.

Although Brunette, the students' favorite dog, had been adopted by the hospital staff, Winnie was still a favorite of the students. She was often seen running around the base, keeping the place clean and happy. She had a special talent for finding lost items, and it was said that she had a talent for finding lost items. This was attributed to her strong sense of smell and her ability to track down lost items.
