Thanksgiving Day Calls for Prayer and Meditation

By Doc Borling

And they gathered around and gave thanks and rejoiced, and since that time we have honored a holiday of brave people who faced starvation and hunger for an abstract, non-edible word freedom. We gave thanks for the blood of the brave who spilled the word freedom. We give thanks, with prayers, with tears, with hope.

The tears rolled by faster and faster; freedom was giving them new Thanksgiving was a longer thing for those who had been raised in the closet with the only food, and the people who had not felt the food. They thanked God for freedom.

And the people who had not felt the food, they thanked God for America.

The year in which the food freedom was declared and we heard was the year of freedom and Thanksgiving.

The bread that had been served began to dry. But in the small stream, water and warmth, the bread of the New Year had formed a bond between the south of the earth and the north of the earth.

We thank, because we know that our bread and our freedom will be answered by Freedom.

One of the highlights of the trip was the visit to the United States Steel head offices. The group was given a tour of the mill and! shown the different processes involved in the manufacture of steel. The tour was conducted by a friendly and knowledgeable guide, who explained the complex and fascinating world of steel manufacturing.

After the tour, the group had lunch in the steel company's cafeteria, enjoying a delicious meal and the company of other like-minded women. The afternoon was spent visiting other sites of interest, including the National Gallery of Art and the Smithsonian Institution.

The evening was spent at a concert, featuring a world-renowned orchestra and singers. The performance was truly outstanding, leaving the women in awe of the talent and skill on display.

Heaviest Aerial Attack of War Flies 1,300 Nazi Staffers to Flames

LONDON, Nov. 23 (AP) — Berlin, the heart of the German war machine, suffered a heavy blow today when 1,300 bombs were dropped from the air, causing widespread damage.

The attack was the heaviest ever directed against Berlin and included the first time since the war began that both bombs and incendiaries were used on Berlin. The raid resulted from a decision taken in London to continue the destruction of the German capital.

The British Broadcasting Corporation reported that the raid began shortly after 11 o'clock and continued for about two hours. It was the first time since the war began that both bombs and incendiaries were used on Berlin.
