Traditions, Curricula Seen in Coat of Arms

By EMILY KALLED

With the days of tradition passed into history and the world in a state of emergency, a new coat of arms has been adopted by Michigan State College. Its design was submitted by Captain Joseph A. Kley, a member of the 47th Artillery Corps, overseas, and member of the Alpha Sigma Alpha fraternity, of which he is also a charter member.

The coat of arms consists of a helmet surmounted by a crest. The crest is composed of a blue ray and a palm. The helmet is surmounted by a plume of feathers. The coat of arms is supported by two elephants, representing administrative staff, alumni relations, and other divisions of the college. The coat of arms is to be worn on the front of all faculty members of the college.

We have private tests for the blood but there is little known about these blood conditions that are not detectable by the usual, routine blood tests. Some people are predisposed to having defective blood systems or components, and yet are not aware of it. We have found people whose blood systems are not working properly, and yet no one knew it. The tests are not expensive and do not take much time. You can be sure that you are not going to find out anything that will hurt you, and it may be the best thing you ever decided to do.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS...

In Campus Quarters

By SCOTTIE MCMILLAN

THE KAPAN has come, and in the style of that popular British comedian, he has found an audience very willing to laugh. This is probably because the audience is somewhat inebriated, although the comedian is the least likely of the two parties to be the source of the laughter. The comedian, known only as "Mockery," is the first of his kind to appear in the Kapan for some years. He has a reputation for being an able mimic and has been known to imitate such personalities as Chico Marx, Charlie Chaplin, and Robert H. Field. His performance consists mainly of skits and songs, and he was accompanied by a novelty band, the All-American Orchestra. The function was held in the Student Union and lasted from 7:30 to 11:30. The audience numbered in the hundreds and included many students, alumni, and faculty members.

Free French Troops Move Into Action Near Cassino in Italy

American Troops Continue to Push Beyond Cervaro

ALLIED HQS, Algiers, Jan. 15 (AP) - French troops, under Gen. Alphonse Juin, opened a flanking drive through Italy. Troops, including some 2,000 tanks and self-propelled guns, are now assorted in Cassino, about 15 miles from Rome. "There are no German troops in the area," an Allied commander said today. American troops, however, are being sent in from the south as the Allied command pushes forward.
