Little-Known Departments Do Vital Jobs

BY JIM HOPPS

Turned in the corners of the university are many departments which perform functions necessary for the maintenance of the college and many of which have a direct bearing on the lives of students. Among the latter is the Industrial Department, which is concerned with the health and welfare of students.

The Industrial Department, under the direction of Dr. A. B. Brown, provides health services for students, including advice on health matters and the treatment of illnesses. The department also provides vocational counseling and guidance for students.

At Hall Offices

In the basement of the Administration Building, the Hall Offices are located. These offices are responsible for the registration of students, the maintenance of records, and the issuance of diplomas. The Hall Offices also provide administrative services to the various academic departments, including the scheduling of exams and the grading of papers. The Hall Offices are staffed by professional staff members who are available to students throughout the day.

The Hall Offices are also responsible for the maintenance of student records, including transcripts and academic records. These records are kept confidential and are available only to authorized personnel.

The Hall Offices are open from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. on weekdays, and are closed on weekends and holidays.
THE LESS SAID...

By NEVA ACKERMAN

With the sounding of initial gong, people think of time. But the horizons of time that Michigan State students are facing are different. For time is not the enemy, but rather the enemy is the feeling of despair it creates. Time is a weapon that can be used to make us feel futile. Michigan State may help us understand our horizons. And that doesn't happen by sitting in front of a teacher. The world of learning is an understanding of how to live, not just how to get through. The measurement of time is not just a clock, but also the clock's tick-tock. The measurement of time is an understanding of the value of our lives and the value of our time. We can't afford to waste time, because students don't have time to waste.

The less said the army's needs--for technicians in specific fields of work in its various government agencies and departments--the better.

A hiring officer of the British Ministry of Aircraft Production says, "There is no doubt that we are short of men with the necessary qualifications, and there is a good chance of finding them among those who have been discharged from the army." He adds that "the army's needs are paramount." The army's needs are paramount.
