Post-War Domination by U.S. in Pacific to be Discussed

LONDON, March 8 (AP)—A guarantee of United States post-war domination of the Pacific in the form of island bases—stepping stones to security against future Japanese aggression—was reported to be one of the topics likely to be discussed in the forthcoming British-American talks here.

It is expected that this subject will be explored on a preliminary basis when Howard H. Metaxas, U. S. undersecretary of state, arrives here this morning for a review of the conference and discussions in great detail at public conferences at which Joseph C. Grew, former American ambassador to Japan, is likely to outline the United States' basic views.

The timeliness of the discussion is emphasized by the approach of a congressional debate on renewal of the lend-lease act, a subject which, on the basis of past experience, is due to prejudice a legislative demand for the organization of bases in advance of any peace conference.
