American Marines Capture Talasea Town, Airdrome

Cavalrymen Push Ahead on Admiralty Islands

ALLIED HQ, S. W. PACIFIC, Saturday, March 11

The airdrome at Talasea on the north coast of New Britain has been captured by marines who invaded William peninsula Monday, headquarters announced today.

The town of Talasea also has been captured. Marines seized the airstrip Wednesday and the town Thursday. Talasea is on the east side of the peninsula, opposite the point where the invasion force landed without air or naval support.

In the invaded Admiralty islands to the north of the New Britain action, cavalymen have pushed their steady advance, advancing three and a half miles northwest of captured Momote airdrome on Los Negros. Japanese planes strafed the area without effect.

In still another action on the borders of the Bismarck sea, Americans moving west of Salomond toward Madang, achieved steady progress. Japanese planes, heavily armed, flew over the area both night and early Wednesday but headquarters and the attack were unreported.

In the vicinity of Dutch New Guinea, Catalina planes bombed Japanese positions and had some medium enemy vessels to be beached and commandeered. Japanese tried to abandon another.
