WAVES Offer Coed Opportunities

The military service vs. college argument is a difficult problem to undergraduates but to senior women it is of utmost importance. Now, with their college education behind them, comes the moment to decide, for it's either take a job or take a uniform with no compromise of another year of college to fall back on.

It is each one's personal problem to discover where her duty, her talents, and her future lie. At the present, opportunities are many for swift financial success in any field. Perhaps the WAVES can offer more.

A college graduate is first in line for a commission in the women's branch of the navy, and a commission means additional education, experience in the field, and a base salary ranging from $100 to $200 per month.

Standards for WAVES commissions are high, but graduates in the fields of retailing, banking, personnel, statistics, engineering, physics, and radio could do no greater service than to use their knowledge to aid their country. At the end of the war they would have the experience necessary for obtaining a worthwhile position in civilian life.

Movies and billboards may stress "the smart navy uniform" or the "exciting naval lassies" but whatever the motive, anyone with a sound education to offer, in top physical condition and in search of a place to help can find her niche in the women's reserve of the navy. The navy can use as many women as will volunteer, and it may well prove to be a convenient stepping-stone for women of college caliper, — J. H.

German Skimp on Aerial Warfare

LONDON, May 9 (AP)— The Germans have adopted a "miser" policy of aerial warfare at the expense of their ground forces. The reports from London and Paris indicate that the German air force is being concentrated in the air forces of Allied bases in the West and is not being used to support ground forces in the fight against the Axis forces. The Germans are relying on their air force to keep the Allies off balance and to prevent them from establishing a foothold in the West. The British and American air forces are being used to support the ground forces in the fighting in the West, and the British and American air forces are also being used to support the ground forces in the fighting in the East.

British Eighteenth Pushes Germans Back

ALLIED HQ., NAPLES, May 9 (AP)—The Germans, strengthing their lines, have withdrawn approximately nine miles on the right flank of the British Eighth Army's Adriatic front and have been followed up by the Allied Eighth Army and announced today.

The Nazi retreat was south of Monte Melato in the vicinity of Palena, 32 miles inland from the Adriatic coast, on the right bank of little Aventino river and 11 miles southeast of Solunia, and near the village of Lottso Palena, which is near the southeast of Palena.

Bridges Destroyed

Before pulling back, the enemy demolished bridges and houses and a tunnel.

The official report failed to give the specific depth of the withdrawal, but the villages named are nine miles from the last announced line of the eighth army in that area.

Dean Blasted

It appeared likely that Allied patrols had been operating beyond those positions in recent weeks. Palena is 22 miles south of the big Penza river which is the last bastion of the Allied army last Friday afternoon.

The countryside along Axis communications lines was blasted, but there was no mention of a death, to indicate that the withdrawal could be attributed to the burning of the dam.

Area Shaded Heavily

On the An佐i beachhead the Germans heavily shelled the rear area and poured a strong mortar fire against the left flank.

The lower Istrian hill was west of Mimbro, enemy motor vehicle movement was stopped by American guns. It is in this sector that the Axis forces are believed to have evacuated all civilians in a helicopter airlift.

Today there was a report of an explosion heard by Allied observers posts in this region near Anzoa.
