Nihon's communications were cut again after Maj. Gen. Leland C. Spear's sixth division crowned all of Okinawa with a Republic flag between the harbor and the American main body. The Japanese lost three battleships, 25 medium and light ships, 176 tanks and hundreds of aircraft. The American losses were 428 casualties by yesterday. Before Yanks took control of their bombs and tanks, they were趴趴于 in the place.

The worst damage east of the point at Maj. Gen. Archibald V. Arnott's 36th division came on the six miles of the southwest of Naha. The 36th was on the road to the vicinity of Ter and in full control of the eastern port city in which Naha, Yonaguni, and the capital were situated.

In the center of the area, one section of the 36th ran into Japanese artillery on Shuri. Maj. Gen. Paul de Guzman of the 4th Marine Division, who leads the 36th, said the fighting was heavy in various indications that the Japanese might have become prepared for the defense.
