Churchill Arrives in London

Many of the world's newspapers and news agencies filled their front pages yesterday with news of the fairly certain arrival of Prime Minister Winston Churchill in London from America. It was reported that Churchill had been in Washington for a conference with President Roosevelt.

World Watches Atlee Strategy

In keeping with the editorial policies of most overseas newspapers, it is our sad, solemn duty to put the reports reflecting the great event between Britain and America to the credit of the British Empire and to those men and women who have made the Empire what it is today.

We are bound to witness the end of the Churchill-Roosevelt era in the United States and the beginning of the Mayoral Democratic era in the world. The spirit of cooperation that has ruled the world for the past 20 years must now come to an end.

England has been a great power and empire for centuries, and the United States has been her friend. Now England is in a position to make the same statement about England.

The spirit of cooperation must end in the world, and the automatic barrier of war must be the only barrier between the British Empire and America.

When the war is over, the British Empire will be the only power remaining in the world. The United States will be the only power remaining in the world.

Spartans at War

By MARSHALL STUART

U.S. Army American Expeditionary Force, Casablanca, Morocco

Spartans at War is a term that has come to mean something very different from what it meant in ancient times. In ancient times, it meant a soldier who fought for his country and died for his country.

Today, Spartans at War is a term that is used to mean a soldier who fights for his country and dies for his country. It is a term that is used to describe the brave men who fight for their country and die for their country.

The Spartans at War are the men who fight for their country and die for their country. They are the men who fight for their country and die for their country. They are the men who fight for their country and die for their country.

These men are the Spartans at War.
State's Squad Sees Films of Scrimmages

State college's football squad has been studying films of their opponents as part of its busy schedule of afternoon practice and off-season workout. Daily hours have revealed to the players the inside gossip of being on an opposing team's part of its visual program.

Fieldhouse has screened a couple of unusual motion pictures, but part of its visual training has proven real for the players. "The real thing" is the work of the University of Michigan Monday, Center of Saginaw.

New ASTPR Section Arrives

250 Trainees to Remain
At Michigan State
Three Months

Approximately 250 new army trainees arrived on campus yesterday to join the college units of the ASTPR. This group of men will remain at Michigan State for at least three months; and thereafter will report for active duty with the army.

Until Monday they will be occupied with an orientation program to acquaint them with traditions of both the army and of MSU.

This group will take a type of course different from the work done by the former group because they are not slated for army duty when they join other regular army units.

RECORD

mailed first class to men and women in service overseas in both the YTS and Pacific Theaters. Alumni, faculty, Michigan representatives, and students, dormitories, sororities and fratterities are all regular receivers of the Record.

Then there is the story within the story. A separate four page folder slipped into the regular magazine is the tale of giving the Michigan State college athletic teams a sporting name. After the change from Michigan Agricultural college to MSC in April, 1925, the Aggie no longer had claim to being strictly farmers.

Kept on Looking

News writers and students who had been a good catchwords to hang on the pumpkin heads and the endpapers. Finally a campus committee sponsored a contest offering a ten dollar prize for the winning name. The staffy "Michigan Staters" title claimed the ten books.

But if anyone has ever written headlines or butt out stories at 4:30 to meet a 5 p.m. deadline, be would despise the stumbling John Henry which had been attached to the State teams.

A Name at Last

George Alberson, sports editor of the State Journal, was one of those fortunate writers. He and several men from the publication department went back over the contest entries, discarding Bears, Wolverines, and the usual fictitious names, which so often fail to give a realistic picture of a team's strengths.

"Spartans" the entry of Perry Brown, catcher on the baseball team, struck better than all others. Pratt lived at Port Ren-ning, Ga., in a baseball story.
Alberston claims he was the first to get the name into print.

For several months the Sportan nickname was meted Sportan, but eventually the error was caught, and after the student publication adopted the Greek title, the men down at publication department knew they had a winner.
