THE mercy-ground of com¬ plaints starts next week, but things really have to get live before the old shtick politics play is to get going this year.

A quick check of newspaper files on the subject (took a good hour, and nosh Thanksgiving through dours) shows that the last mud-slinging, name-calling advertis¬ ing was in 1943. By the following year, Spartan had a passing interest in other things on their minds—always a good sign.

In the dead of winter days beyond recall, hucksters, electioneering was an art, and the poli¬ tics of the campus started dur¬ ing fall term to get their little black books filled with possibility.

Back then, visiting for class officers, AWS representatives, the Student council divisional repre¬ sentatives and BSA (Independent Students Association) heads was a combined affair which kept winter term in a continuous muddle.

Funny things did happen, too, as in the year 1914 for Freshman who promised two fraternity buds they would pledge them in to the Freshman presidency. They did, but he didn't, and he was just a little unpopular for some time after that. Or, there was the ambitious student who greeted the doorkeepers of the State Normal at the unhurried hour of 6 a.m., and inserted campaigning pamphlets into each copy of the paper.

When it came time for the reg¬ ular vote, one club had to offer two fraternity listers because of the primaries and nominations, and their candidates had been disqualified. (Guess it was changed at that same period that another club didn't have any candidates—there weren't interested.) The legalities were too strong, and by the time a faculty examining board had considered all angles, the class had no one for whom they could vote.

rules and regulations in previ¬ ous years have been much more stringent than the present set up.

There are only five points to the student in order to be a voting elector this year, and a campaign literature is limited to mimeographed ma¬ terial. This probably started when parties and handbills floated a main intersection of East Lansing to the fur banks of the river.

Check lists of voters can be purchased, but such lists are not used on the floor where the election is held. Apparently some former student thought it might be a good idea to move it on the voters to check just before placing a five-cent collection box in the hands of the candidate.

Cleveland Orchestra Shows Up Brilliantly Under Leader

A capacity audience filled College auditorium last night to hear another excellent concert performance presented by the Cleveland orchestra under the direction of Erich Leinsdorf, famed maestro and conductor at only 31 years of age.

Appropriately enough, the program began with a light, frothy composition: "Over the Portsmouth Point," by Walton. Full of interesting melodies, sounding exactly like a busy port, this work was played and directed with fine precision.

Selections from "Pelleas and Melisande" by Debussy were melodious and soft with the string section bringing out the smoothness characteristic of the composer.

Lovely and familiar was the tone poem "Don, Juan" by Strauss, displaying orchestral virtuosity and demonstrating the fine qualities of the music.

Beethoven's famous Fifth Symphony in C minor, the final number on the program, was brilliantly played with all the perfection and exactitude it deserves. The second movement was particularly deep and rhythmic. Leinsdorf conducted it with gracefulness and excellence that brought out the best qualities of the symphony.

Science, Arts School Leads in Enrollers For Fall Quarter

Of the 3,281 students enrolled for the fall quarter at MSU, a greater preference has been shown for science and arts than for any other curriculum offered, according to Robert S. Leaton, registrar.

Business and public service and home economics rank next in their respective order. Among the lowest is the agricultural and forestry curriculum, which ranks just slightly over that of students who prefer no special major.

As for the subject preferences, home economics, language and literature, and business administration hold the top three positions with pre-dental and business and public service (two ma jors) holding down the bottom of the list.
