Who could have known that the cellist as an individual would become the expression of genius, of intellectual and artistic ideals of a whole family? The Schuster family trio is of just that nature. Joseph Whistler, Schuster's father, has been the outstanding member of the trio, that of cellist, was waiting in the wings.

The Schuster trio however, did remain a hobby entrance for the family, for an understanding manager recognized the exceptional talents of the three youngsters, and arranged a concert tour before a world audience.

Today Joseph Schuster is one of the most respected figures in the world because, in his own words, "I have ever seen a hard task to overcome them."

Among the numbers that made up their concert tour was the "Introduction and Polonaise," by Chopin, "Prelude and Caprice," by Schubert, "Chopsticks" and "Yasber." The famous music is a tradition of Alexander Schuster, professor of violin, and some of the college orchestra at Michigan.

What, what gives? Must be the cold weather. We'd like to trust ourselves so well that we've just put the pin and ring business to the frozen envelope. We've had to dig down pretty deep into the grifts for today's column. Only the weather worry us now and bring up a sincere sentiment with it.

There are some pert places that don't seem to be allergic to the cold weather. Businesses that have been taking place out at the Chi town house recently. First of all, Helen Moore, graduate of '45, was married to Russ Faraday in Hartford, Conn., on Nov. 17, to a pretty and sweet fellow. Sue was a big day in the life of Lynn Tarte, Groove tie sophomore. That was the day that Bill Kirkland, Psi U, chose to pass his pin to her. Bill was a graduate of the class of '44.

It was beginning to look as if the weather was over-shadowing all the commotions among the campus when Vivian Jones, Mus¬

The work of collecting and distributing the gift boxes to the needy people has been undertaken by the American Legion.

The gifts contributed in the East Lansing victory should be left at the Union desk. The deadline for all gifts is Dec. 10.

FREEMAN ORIENTATION

Several meetings should be held to discuss problems or questions in connection with the arrival of the small group meetings in fresh¬ awned yesterday.

The meeting for Wednesday, Dec. 2, will be a Y-Faculty fireside when members will be introduced to the various faculty members. Some plans must be made for a Christmas party so that all persons who have attended the fireside can live at 6:30.

YWCA CABINET

There will be no meeting tonight of YWCA junior committee, according to Sara Cline, East Lansing sophomore, and Margaret Haxby, Mortar Board secretary.

Spartans Drilled On Spinner Plays
For Miami Game

State's football squad, victims of a nation's biggest and most decisive upset practice last night for their final game with Miami this year.

The drill was the order of the day as Coach Bachman had out several new spinner plays for use in Friday's game.

In this type of play the ball is handed directly to the fullback, who passes completely around, either taking or giving the ball to the left halfback, and then running into the line. It promises to add a great deal more de¬ riveness to State's running attack.

The Spartans came out of last Saturday's 33-0 loss relatively well. Back Dominic Conto has some painful rib bruises which will need heavy padding if he is to play in the final game. End Zeusky and Masshull also were injured, but they will be ready for action against Miami.

For Miami, the final score which brought smiles to Coach Charlie Bachman was the fact that his starting backfield emerged from the game Saturday without aggravating
any of their injuries.

Bachman is taking 33 members of the squad to Florida. They leave this noon on the bus for Detroit. From there they will take a crack streamliner, the New York Central, for the rest of the trip.

A vacation on the way plains call for a one day stop in Atlanta. Georgia where the team will probably work out on a fifty-yard shape field. They will leave Miami the Sunday before and return to the campus Tuesday.
