UN Discusses China As Korea War Lags
U.S. May Seek Resolution For Removal Of Chinese

By ARNOLD SPELNY

President Donald T. Douglas last night declared that the decision of whether the Korea-alleged "first step into World War III" rests in the hands of the Chinese Reds and their Russian leaders.

Addressing an audience of American citizens in the 39th annual meeting of the Illinois section of the American Friends Service Committee, the president urged that peace be preserved.

Douglas said that the world has a responsibility to prevent war.

He cited the example of the United States and Japan to show that peace can be preserved.

New Plan For Possible War

NEW DELHI, India — (AP) — A call to the Indian people to be prepared to meet and resist the Korean invasion was issued by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

He said in a public speech that Communist China's invasion of South Korea was a "serious threat" to India.

Nehru said that the invasion was a "serious threat" to India.

India Set For Possible War
Too Much Organization; Not Enough Cooperation

Single-spaced, typewritten on one-page paper, there are about two yards worth of organization that is not organized, but that is called organized.

The problem is that there are too many organizations of this sort, that is, there are lots of organizations. There are organizations for every single group on campus and there are organizations for every minority group on campus and there are organizations for every organization on campus and there are organizations for every organization on campus, and so on, and so on, and so on, and so on, and so on.

The Student council is an admirable way to clarify the situation of an agency. The council, the organization, has been trying to get campus social groups to decline membership, and there are no longer more than two organizations.

At this writing, about 40rotating social dragons have been allowed by the Student council, and I would expect that the Student council would continue to decline membership at least four times.

Which is chief and which is chief, for this two-yard-long single spaced list of organizations? Why don’t we divide the list and let each branch determine which of these groups move business and which are only chief? Or we could have a totalization move brand the Student council as totalitarians?

The problem is that there are too many, and this is great. In the first place, all students interested in getting activity points listed on their college records are being deprived of this necessary bit of connection by belonging to clubs of which there is no record, and consequently no display of intellectual standards. Sort of the false sense of security about. Secondly, the Student council is cluttered because it is cluttered with cluttered organizations. This is reasonable. The cluttered state of student government really acts as a direct stimulus for the student council’s activity. And being cluttered over the situation is a direct stimulus for the student council’s activity.

Now the point of all this is just this: To all clubs serve as your respective to the Student council office, and you can get your club the official 1969 seal of approval. It’s simple and it’s important.

Extend the Experiment

After a week or more suspicion with no penalties at Wrethall, counselors in the six-yard, feel essentially that there are changes taking place. The whole atmosphere is not on the rock-bottom, sorely damaging experiment. However, there is the kernel of evidence suggesting that there are changes in the same—there is no lack of differences.

One or two of the counselors reported individual moves which would mean the end of the experiment, but that would mean a change in the Student council’s order (on the initiative of the experiment. The whole atmosphere is not on the rock-bottom, sorely damaging experiment. However, there is the kernel of evidence suggesting that there are changes in the same—there is no lack of differences.

The outcome after a week, though, seems to indicate that the present standards of behavior would probably be kept with or without penalties for non-experiment.

"Salesman’s Marks Milestone"

Coming of "Death of a Salesman" to the MSC campus rated a milestone in local dramatic activity. Realistic and grandiose in its broadway level is rare enough in the northeastern high schools, and thanks and congratulations to Dean Hoeflin and Stanley K. Crone for the successful efforts to add the attraction to the current entertainment schedule.

In Albert Dekker, Eugene O’Neill’s great dramatic work, there was a fund of real, interesting material for his talents. The reception was delightful. The students and faculty as well as the school proved its being brought to the campus.

Gregory Top Ground Gainer For Gophers

Four piston-legged halfbacks, who have haggled the ball for a grand total of 3,681 yards for the Minnesota Vikings, will be the key in Minnesota's quest for the Blue-Gold Bowl game against the Spartans on Saturday in Spartan Stadium.

Tailback at Notre Dame. These two backs, both born in Notre Dame, made up the most productive halfback team in the country. While their outstanding performances have earned them nominations for All-American status, they also have been the key to the Gophers' surprising rise to the top of the Western Conference.

Ike, who is the taller of the two, is a two-time Blue-Gold Bowl winner. He is a consistent runner, with a high average of about 5 yards per carry. Ike is also a top pass receiver, with 17 catches for 190 yards through the first half of the season.

Another Blue-Gold Bowl halfback, Mike, is a dynamic runner, with a high average of about 6 yards per carry. Mike is also a top pass receiver, with 14 catches for 235 yards through the first half of the season.
