Effective Leaders

We have just been subjected to another campaign-wide pointlessly contest to establish who will be class officers for 1929-30.

Our school has been decked with signs. Our streets have been jammed with trucks, bunting, banners, and streamers-decked convocations. We have seen gladiators nettled by "If I'm elected," banners, and cast ballots.

The plot to get some class officers in the campus setup is well established, but will quite indecent. We are glad to see enough interest in the election to promote the candidates, but it would be nice to have more genuine interest in the class jobs after the elections are completed and the usual hubbub dies down.

Several things should be considered about the place of class officers. Duties and services have definite jobs to do in their class positions. Junior officers have the J-Hops as their big job, one that consumes nearly half the year.

Senior officers have the job of building up some class alumni organization, organizing Senior Week activities, the Water Carnival, graduation, and many other jobs.

The place of the freshmen and sophomore class officers is rather vague.

Frank-SoK Day, the main responsibility of the underclassmen, has been poorly organized. There is no concerted effort to try to organize any other class activities. There is no underclass organization. Your members have decided the worth of the time and effort of officers for the whole year. So what is it to do underclass officers something to earn their titles as student leaders?

"They work," something to keep the officers busy and have them look important, is needless. But there is plenty that underclass officers can obtain from their jobs.

They can learn, if they work to, what there is to student organizing, they can discover what it means to control a group of people to a definite end. Experience taken from posts as underclass officers should be utilized toward further leadership work.

In support to next year's underclass officers, we can say: "Watch out for the 1929-30 next year. You are no good to the students if you only remember what you did last year and this year. After seeing your picture plastered all over campus, you would like to show your face and your effectiveness occasionally next year.

It was the first hit of the day for the Indians and set off a three-run rally. Wertz was then thrown out at second on Wes Stock's double and Mike Hargrove was thrown out at first on Sam McDowell's ground out. The Indians scored three runs in the fifth inning, including singles by Wertz and Hargrove, and doubled by Marvin Malloy, who had three hits.

The Indians had a 3-0 lead going into the sixth inning when Wertz homered. The Indians scored twice in the sixth inning and Wertz had two hits and one RBI. Wertz was 4-for-5 with two doubles and two RBIs. He was also the only person to score two runs in the game. The Indians are in good shape, as they have now won three of their last four games.
