A Sign of Approval?

The College has received more unfavorable comment for placing classes on the day of General MacArthur's visit than for any other action it has taken in some time. Commentators that political issues seem to outweigh the moral ones have been made in many letters received by the State News, which demand to know why classes were dismissed last Thursday and not on Good Friday.

It is not only in this college that political and other material issues seem to outweigh the spiritual ones. However, comparison of Good Friday and the MacArthur parade seems to have been made by the college administration.

The obvious political nature of the General's visit did not enter into the College's decision to participate in the festivities in his honor. Because the College did participate, furnishing both faculty and personnel, does not necessarily identify it with his views.

But whether or not M.S.C. officials are supporting the General, which everyone knows the General would not do, the Administration's action in canceling all classes makes it apparent to some that M.S.C. is making extra efforts.

The decision was based on the lack of class attendance due to participation of ROTC in the Good Friday parade. With a substantial portion of the student body gone for a whole afternoon's class time, it seemed unfair to College administrators to hold classes which required extracurricular work of the ROTC cadets who were asked by Legislative and civic organizations.

However, the decision to cancel all classes met with considerable criticism from College policy on other speakers.

When students have appeared on campus, in particular on MacArthur's campus, class attendance has been far below what it usually is. Almost any group of students have left their classes to attend the Symposiums as it would seem that they have been held to hold the "Mac." students.

Class attendance would have eliminated the growth of opinions that the College is canceling itself with a political figure and still allowed classes where necessary.

Other criticisms leveled at the College for furnishing facilities during Good Friday's event is that the students who were interested in the program were not furnished with adequate facilities. It is also true that no organization at this college, or any other college, has been able to raise its facilities to be used by students who have come to participate in such an event.

The General was first invited to speak here by the Alumni Press Association which has 15 office hours on the campus and meets hour weekly. Naturally when the group invited the General to speak, it invited him to speak at their regular meeting place.

As plans progressed, M.S.C. officials were asked to furnish space for another­bunch and personnel for a parade in keeping with the General's military presence.

Because MacArthur uses his military reputation as a basis for preparing his political career, the College was put in a more delicate situation than is usually true when it entertains speakers. Twenty-Five former students like Vice-President Barkley and Senator Potter of Illinois, they said, encumbering all classes was a mistake because it is implication grounded through the may be.

Edward was still concerned about the dangers of a military hero who does not admit frankly his reasons for voting political issues. More would be said about local lack of recognizing religious interests of students who were shown in holding classes on Good Friday.

However, use of M.S.C. facilities to entertain the General and participation of ROTC in the parade were not considered on a political basis. The ROTC's part, in fact, was about the only portion of the whole program of events which may have contributed to the visit as the non-political affair it was officially supposed to be.

Lists Needed

The Department of Organizations has received many proposals for all campus events. Student government is trying to turn in their annual reports to the Student Government Association. The College's records will be compiled and students will stay on the approved list.

From the reports, however, it is obvious that the student government organizations have not been approved or as, are not approved with the College's purpose.

The lists compiled by the Organizations Department will be turned in to the Wolverine for next year's book and are circulated to the various organizations. The lists will also be kept on file for reference. Every group will have been approved or not approved at the end of the year.

The groups that have been approved will be given books, and the others will not. This is a proposed plan, and it is possible that the Wolverine will not get them.

The Wolverine will play an active role in approving groups, but it is possible that the Wolverine will not have time to do so.
