Williams To Speak At Forum

Panel to Discuss Government

A three-week summer forum on state and local government will be offered by the Michigan State University Institute of Government, a branch of the Michigan State University Extension Service. The forum, planned by the Institute, will be held Monday through Friday, July 27 through August 14, on the Michigan State University campus.

The forum is designed for those who may not have an opportunity to study government during the regular academic year.

Three main groups will be involved in the forum: faculty and administrators of Michigan State University and other institutions of higher education; local and state government officials; and public interest groups such as labor unions and civic organizations.

The forum will include discussions on such topics as public administration, political science, and social science.

Approval of the forum was sought by the Michigan State University Board of Regents at its June meeting. The board has authorized the Institute to proceed with the forum, according to Dean's offices in Lansing.

Expensive Economy

While American soldiers fight in Korea with second-hand equipment, front line troops are arguing over who Army dates. The economy-minded Congress, whose members have been cutting improper military purchasing policies.

Could it be that both are partially right? From reports given by senators recently returned from the scene in Korea, each is the case.

Congress has cut military appropriations in the home. There is a shortage of ammunition, which will be felt more and more as stockpiles, remaining from World War II are exhausted. The same goes for gun crystals, a basic infantry weapon, and a million and one other items down in and technical.

And military leaders, anxious to please Congress, perhaps, or to stay off the appropriations committee's prickle, have been reduced to ridiculous expedients to conserve supplies and equipment and ammunition.

New tanks, trucks and guns being produced at present are not even being sent to Korea for fear that Congress would object because serviceable equipment, some of it rebuilt several times,

And on the United States finds itself in a position even more indefensible than that of 1917, when it went against half the world with pitifully inadequate arms and equipment.

The situation now is that the United States, with some of the finest weapons in the world, stands once not even considered.

But faced with the possibility of all-out war with the Communist world, the Army refuses to commit its new material to battle for fear of taking a considerable loss.

War is expensive. But buying a war is more expensive, and the Korean war could very soon be lost.

In the contest and was what was formerly called "the Hermit Kingdom," she side lines masses of men to work. The other theoretical theories on its superior equipment and supply.

But our monopoly in both equipment and supply is threatened, while tanks leave the assembly line in Berlin and go into storage meanwhile until the old ones wear out or are rebuilt. So many times in Japan that the time eventually comes when they cannot be used again.

The military and civilian alike in the United States have been criticized for being wasteful. But they should do something about it as the situation now is.

Congress Proposes Strike Curb

Washington (AP)—Congress opened a three-day steel strike yesterday and suitably launched the plan for settlement that is expected to be reached before Labor Day.

According to the Steel Smelter Association, the three-day period of action is aimed at the ultimate settlement of the strike.

The steel smelter association announced the strike and said it would continue for the specified period to prevent further disruption of steel production.

The strike was opened after negotiations between the steel and steel smelters failed to reach an agreement on the basic issues.

The steel smelter association said it would continue the strike until a settlement is reached.

The strike was ordered by the steel smelter association, which represents the steel and steel smelters, and is expected to last until Labor Day.

The steel smelter association has been actively involved in the negotiations and is optimistic about reaching a settlement.
