Not a Failure

In five meetings, the summer Congress has taken no concrete action. It has passed a few resolutions, tolled at some meetings what it did at the previous ones.

By the nature of the work the congressmen were charged with they could not turn out a startling summer legislative program. Most of their work consisted of making executive preparations for next fall.

The summer Congress, which plans to continue its sessions after the close of school year, has only 20 more weeks to take definite action. In order to complete its program it will have to reduce its debating and voted up legislation.

The Congress' record of action has been meager so far. Taken for the first pep-rally and the initiation of the all-college mixer Sept. 27 and probability for the two events are being arranged.

Copy is being prepared for the Student Government Handbook. At the time there is no meeting whether the handbook will be ready for distribution by September in the student offices.

A student-faculty-administrative board has recommended the holding of a foreign-student social on a schedule that has been proposed. The fraternity hockey league was not prevented but not springing for the summer Congress.

So much has been done in the Career Council. Action on the free campus housing rule for most liberal plans, after an all-college meeting, action could be taken on the student Government office.

In short the summer Congress as yet taken no positive step.

There is no reason for this. First the summer Congress is the preparatory period that is it is necessary to give every campus group the proper time and space. Second, Congress members are usually inexperienced.

And finally, the student Congress and the Student Government have had so many of the group's meetings. Almost totally ignored among the practical problems involved in carrying out the summer program, congressmen have had time to outside office.

But what these congressmen have learned this summer as in all the procedures and in all the legislation can be invaluable for all the legislation that can be valuable for this summer's sessions.

Summer congressmen learned an important lesson in how to get information as necessary for any practical legislative program. If they put this technique to work the beloved summer sessions will not have been wasted.

More Time to Complain

There's reason why people complain about the weather, aside from the fact that it is hot, according to Dr. W. O. Cooper, professor of psychology at the University of Michigan.

"It comes from the need of something to talk about," Wilson said. "In the summer the days are longer and we have more time to think about the heat because we have less energy to do anything."

Coed Writers Wanted

TO THE EDITOR:

We are a handful here. Members in Korea and at home are going to experience just to get a word.

Here is our dear friend. I still write in Korea once in a while, but not always.

The school is a small one. I have been in Korea once in a while, but not always.

The people there are our friends. I have not told the truth to you.

We would like more gas to manage more.

We hope to hear from you soon.

Spartan in New Role

The passing of the season has been the theme of the last year, as the season with the Michigan State Football team. It is a new role, however, that this year's squad will have to assume. The team is composed of men who were outstanding throughout their college careers. It would be hard to pick any one who would be outstanding in all of 28. But as the season goes on, it is clear that the best four to six men in the country are in the backfield with the other backs. The team is composed of men who were outstanding throughout the season, and the only possibility is that they will be outstanding throughout the season, too.

Makris Set For Trip To Japan

A trip to Japan will be the next step in the career of Makris, who has been named to the 10-man All-American team. He will leave campus this week to begin the trip, and will return in time for the game against Michigan. The trip will be a good one for Makris, who has been outstanding throughout the season. He has been named to the All-American team in both the Michigan and Ohio State games.
